CWA PROGRAM IN FULL SWING HERE

COUNTY ALLOTMENT NOW INCREASED TO 655 MEN

Entire Quota at Work This Week As District Superintendent Irons Out Misunderstandings

Charlevoix county's CWA program, designed to give work to 350 men from the welfare list and 305 from the unemployed, or a total of 655 men, is getting under full swing this week.

Figures obtained Monday afternoon from the CWA headquarters on Petoskey avenue, gave the number of men employed on projects in the Charlevoix district as 253. They are distributed as follows: Norwood school district, redecorating school, 5; construction fish pond in city park, 8; Charlevoix hospital, redecorating interior, 9; May street storm sewer, 25; Charlevoix-Bellaire transmission line, 12; Beaver Island projects 20. The balance, 174, are distributed over four highway projects in this district.

The number of men allotted to the county has been increased by 100 from the previous allocation of 555. The entire number is being taken from the re-employment registration.

Misunderstandings which disrupted operation of the program heretofore have been straightened out by R. J. Darling, district superintendent of the Federal Emergency Relief commission, who spent the greater part of last week in the county giving instructions to local officials and directing the commencement of work.

In explanation of the different county set-ups, Mr. Darling explained that the re-employment office, now operating at the local information bureau and other designated offices in the county, was inaugurated by the Public Works Administration to make a survey of all unemployed in the county and wherever possible to give men work.

The Civil Works Administration, with headquarters at the District Health Unit offices on Petoskey avenue, was set up to put men to work at once on projects in each local community.

In Charlevoix county the CWA has been given a quota of 555 men who are to be put to work on local projects. Of the total quota, 350 were transferred from the welfare rolls to CWA projects. The remaining 305 were drawn from the re-employment office by the CWA administration. The rule for placing men not already on the welfare rolls is: needy veterans are given first choice and then county and state residents in the order named.

There is no connection between the re-employment office and the CWA office at the District Health Unit. All persons wishing to register as unemployed should apply at the re-employment office.

The county CWA and welfare office is maintained to care for all persons unable to care for themselves, also to administer the CWA work progress. Those in need of di-

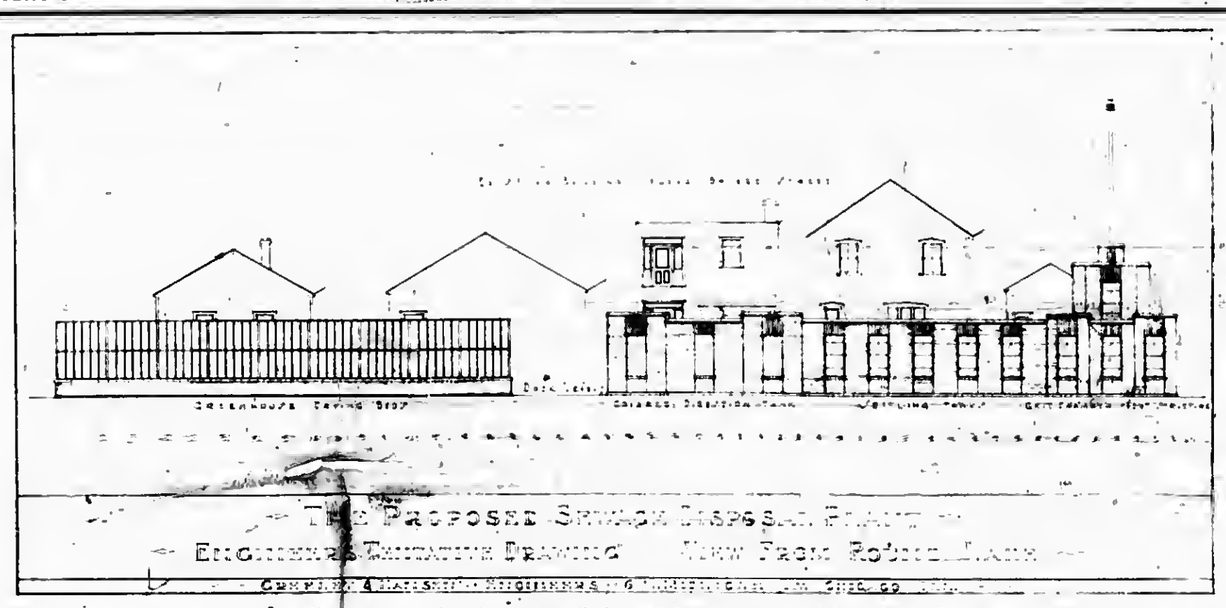
FEDERAL, COUNTY RELEASE OVER $12,000 IN FUNDS THIS WEEK

Business in Charlevoix county should strike an upward trend this week as the result of federal efforts to provide employment through its CWA program.

New money, released through the channels of CWA payrolls and the payment of back welfare checks and county obligations held up since October 28th by closing of the Charlevoix County bank for reorganizing, are expected to relieve a financial condition which has been acute.

Two CWA payrolls, the first amounting to $2,758.60 for the period of November 20 to 25, and the second totaling $3,717.95, for the period of November 27 to December 2, are being issued this week by Lillis Flanders, deputy county treasurer. Still another payroll for the period from December 2nd to the present week will soon be available.

Along with this release of funds to CWA workers, the county supervisors voted last Friday to borrow $6,309.49 from the State Bank of East Jordan to pay welfare and county checks which have been held since the culmination of banking difficulties in this city October 28th. Thus the total funds released during the present week will be $12,786.04.



CITY COUNCIL APPROVE SEWER JOBS

WILL BE SUBMITTED TO CWA AS WORK PROJECTS

Other Business Matters of Importance to City Transacted At Session Monday Night

Two more city projects, plans and estimates of which were approved by the council Monday night, are ready for submission to the local CWA committee for approval.

The projects were the Antrim and Mason street storm sewers, plans and estimates of which were submitted to the council by City Engineer Robert F. Sloan.

The request of F. V. Tyler, secretary of the Association of Commerce and manager of the department of state branch office here, for an increase in salary was granted by unanimous vote. The former figure of $25 per month, paid from the city advertising fund, was raised to $50 per month. The former salary and fees from license sales were deemed insufficient for a living wage and the action will meet with hearty approval.

The semi-weekly payroll amounting to $1,237.10 was authorized, along with payment of dishonored labor checks issued prior to October 28 in the amount of approximately $100. The next semi-weekly payroll, falling due Christmas day, December 25th, will be met December 23rd.

The council referred to the electric light committee a proposal to install flood lights around Round lake harbor as a means of discouraging alleged continued illegal netting. It is claimed violators are again making inroads on the lake by setting and lifting gill nets during the night, and by the installation of flood lights around the lake the practice would be eliminated. The committee was given power to act on the matter.

The council approved a proposal that the mayor appoint a committee to work in conjunction with a committee appointed by the board of supervisors on the plans for a new county court house.

The council adjourned to meet again Monday evening, December 18th, at 7:30 o'clock.

MASONS ELECTED OFFICERS TUESDAY NIGHT

F. & A. M. Installatico Will Be Held December 27th

At its annual meeting Tuesday evening, Charlevoix lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., elected officers for the ensuing year. Installation will be held December 27th.

Officers elected were:

W. M., Charles Bellinger; S. W., George Thompson; J. W., Ivan Holmes; treasurer, Ernest J. Hiller; secretary, H. R. Fowler; S. D., Herb Fox; J. D., John Kling; Tyler, John Macey; trustee, H. W. Partridge; alternate, Lance Neff.

BENEFIT DANCE FOR HOSPITAL NETTED TIDY SUM

Nearly forty dollars was turned over to Charlevoix hospital from proceeds of a benefit dancing party given last Tuesday evening at the gymnasium.

The hospital trustees take this opportunity of thanking those individuals who sponsored the affair, Wexstaff's orchestra, which donated their services and all who were instrumental in the worthy effort.

When you vote for the sewage disposal plant you will notice that the ballot reads differently than that of the first election. Now the city is to issue revenue bonds to the amount of $86,700, before revenue bonds were to be issued to the amount of $67,500.

As before stated the cost of the project will be $86,700. The new financial plan involves borrowing the full amount of the project cost and then using the government grant or gift, to meet the payments of principal and interest for the first four years. Under this plan we will not need to meet any payments with revenue until 1937, when $2,472 will have to be furnished. In other words, the grant will be sufficient to meet all payments and interest in full for the first three years and will cover more than half the payment in the fourth year. The first plan, which contemplated revenue bonds to the amount of $67,500 and a grant of $19,200, would necessitate repayment from revenue immediately.

The reason for the change in the plan is as follows: In 1937 the last $4,000 water works bond comes due. After this year, water rates may be reduced, hence the total billing to the customer for water and sewage disposal will be very much less than at first planned.

Sewage revenue will be collected using water consumption as a means of apportioning that revenue, in other words, the more water you use, the more your bill for sewage revenue will be. Sewage revenue is not an addition to your water bill, it is simply another charge which is based on the amount of your water bill. The disposal plant is not be financed by increased water rates as some think. Its revenue will be collected on the basis of water revenue which is the same in effect, however.

This new plan does not reduce in any way the necessary revenue for the sewage disposal plant. It does, however, make possible the charging of a minimum during the first four years. This, if added to your water bill, would equal an increase of five cents (5c) per thousand gallons and not fourteen cents (14c) as originally stated. At the end of the four year period payments from the grant would cease and revenue for sewage would have to be collected to meet the full amount of the payments. However, at this time water rates can be reduced so that the sum of water and sewage bills will still be the same as if we were paying twenty-five cents (25c) per thousand gallons for water.

May we repeat that the $86,700 includes the cost of site. The proposed site, the entire O. E. Wilbur property, extends from the channel 283 feet south to the O'Neill property. This includes 34 feet on Bridge street south of the F. S. Myers property.

Signed: Vincent S. Madison, Supt. Municipal Utilities.

Approved: L. S. See, mayor. C. S. Webster, member of committee on streets, sewers and public health.

COUNTY AND CITY AID BANK PLANS

VOTE AT SPECIAL SESSION TO SIGN WAIVERS

Supervisors Borrow Funds to Meet Outstanding Checks and Approve New Court House Plan

Reorganization plans of the Charlevoix County bank and the Charlevoix State Savings bank were aided last Friday by consent of the county board of supervisors and the Charlevoix city council to the signing of waivers of impounded public funds.

Both bodies adopted resolutions at special sessions, authorizing their respective treasurers to sign the waiver agreements. The city proposal was carried by unanimous vote, while in the case of the supervisors, the vote stood 21 in favor and 3 against the agreement of both institutions. The total of county and city funds impounded in the two banks will approximate $143,000.

In addition to action on the bank waiver, the supervisors voted to borrow $6,309.49 from the State Bank of East Jordan to pay county checks issued prior to and dishonored following the close of the Charlevoix County bank for reorganization. Those holding County bank checks written prior to October 28th are requested to return them to the county treasurer's office for restamping on the East Jordan bank, where the vouchers will be honored.

The board also voted necessary clerk hire for the register of deeds to care for extra work in his office occasioned by federal farm and home loans which are now coming in at a rapid rate and swamping the office with extra duties. The action was taken primarily to speed up the work of completing detail work necessary before the loans are paid, thus eliminating delays.

By a vote of 22 to 3, the board approved a proposal to seek a federal grant to construct a new court house. This subject is covered in further detail in another article in this issue.

The Christmas Spirit

NEW COURT HOUSE PLAN CONSIDERED

SUPERVISORS VOTE TO TAKE PRELIMINARY STEPS

Appoint Committee to Obtain Plans, Cost Estimates, Etc.—Will Seek Approval As CWA Project

Action which may ultimately result in a new Charlevoix county court house was taken last Friday by the board of supervisors at their special session.

By a vote of 22 to 3 the county solons approved a plan whereby a committee of seven was appointed to obtain figures, site and other details necessary for application to the federal government for a grant to finance such a project. Named on the committee were Chairman William M. Sanderson and Supervisors H. A. Craig, William J. Pearson and John Porter, Prosecuting Attorney A. L. Fitch, County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow and Robert F. Sloan, Charlevoix city engineer.

As the initial move, several members of the committee motored Saturday to Alpena, where county officials have made preliminary steps toward a similar project. Much valuable information in regard to the federal loan angle and engineer details were obtained. Monday night the city council voted to appoint a committee to work in conjunction with the county group, thus insuring city cooperation.

The plan proposed at the present time is to submit the proposition as a federal CWA project. Under this plan the government, if approval is granted, would meet the greater portion of the cost, probably with the exception of site, supervision, plans, some material, etc. The cost under this method must be on a basis of two-thirds for labor and one-third for materials. Under the existing set-up, CWA projects must be completed by February 15, but the local committee has been instructed by state CWA offifficials to go ahead with its plans and submit the project for approval with the anticipation that the CWA program will be continued after February 15.

In event the CWA application fails, a grant under the Public Works Act, which provides the government make an outright grant of 30 per cent and the county be bonded for the remaining 70 per cent, will be available.

The proposition is not sufficiently advanced at the present time to make any definite announcement other than that the committee is going ahead rapidly with its work. That a new court house is badly needed, that it would be a project which the county could point to proudly as well as providing much work for the unemployed are factors not to be overlooked when compared with others upon which federal money is being spent to furnish employment.

KIPMEN LOST CLOSE GAME AT TRAVERSE

DEFEATED 22 TO 18 IN OPENING TILT OF SEASON

Team Showed Potential Power — Play Petoskey Varsity and Reserves Friday Night

Charlevoix's basketball team lost a close decision to Traverse City in their opening contest on the winner's court last Friday evening. It was a close battle all the way and the 22 to 18 margin represented the largest lead the down-staters enjoyed during the tilt.

A deuce and free toss gave Traverse an early lead which was bested by deuces of Richardson and Foster and Ance's free toss. Truverse added another goal and the quarter ended with the count 5-all.

Ance put Charlevoix out in front with a goal early in the second period, but before the half ended the Trojans scored four more points to lead 9 and 7 at the intermission. The remainder of the contest was close all the way, with never more than three points difference in the score, except in the final seconds.

Ance, Foster and Pearl were outstanding for the Kipmen, with Ance's 7 points the high score. Gunther tallied 11 points to lead the Traverse attack. Norris followed closely with 10. The contest was well played for a beginner.

Meet Petoskey Next

The Kipmen meet another class B opponent Friday night when they take on Petoskey's Northmen on the local court. The evening's bill calls for a double-header, with the reserves clashing at 7:15 and the varsity squads at 8:15.

Petoskey has a well-balanced and powerful team this year. Last Friday night in their opening contest the Northmen ran wild over Boyne City for a 23 to 8 victory.

FORMER LOCAL MAYOR APPROVES PLANS FOR CITY SEWAGE DISPOSAL

The following is a signed statement by S. M. Rose, one of Charlevoix's long time residents and former mayor and supervisor of this city:

"Inasmuch as the proposed sewage plant site is in the immediate vicinity of my place of business and having heard rumors of the odor hazard of such plants, I determined to disregard heresay evidence and find out first hand, the actual conditions surrounding them.

"Therefore Mrs. Rose and myself motored to Traverse City one Sunday and visited the sewage disposal plant in that city. Not only did we make a thorough inspection of the entire plant but enquired of nearby residents, owners of restaurants and hotels in the vicinity of that plant.

"Not one complaint or criticism of odor or any other feature of the plant was heard from those whom we met and talked with, but on the contrary those who lived near the river which formerly was poluted by sewage praised the plant highly because of the beneficial change in the waters of the river after the plant was constructed."

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

Revenues of the state of Michigan will be increased approximately $25,000 a year, as the result of a decision handed down by the state supreme court last week. The ruling held that the receiver of a Detroit corporation, who was carrying on the business, was liable for the annual corporation privilege fee in exactly the same manner as if the corporation was conducting its own affairs.

The advent of legal 3.2 beer in Michigan has resulted in a tremendous falling off in malt tax revenues collected by the department of state.

In June, 1932, revenues from the manufacture and sale of malt and wort amounted to $192,669 but in June 1933 amounted to only $60,957. Since that date the monthly sales of malt tax stamps have dropped steadily and state malt revenues for October, 1933, were $3,428, and for November, 1933, were $4,442.

As a result of the bank holiday the gasoline tax division of the department of state had $1,350,000 in uncollectable checks on its hands February 14, 1933. Since that date through cooperation of gasoline dealers all of these checks have been made good with the exception of $5,000. It is estimated that the only loss to be sustained will be $1,000 as the result of the bankruptcy of a Flint gasoline company.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Four Potato Cost Account Books Completed

Last Thursday the potato cost account books on this year's production of potatoes were checked in and collected by Mr. Aylesworth, specialist. This year, the prospects of making a profit out of potatoes are much brighter than last. Last year the cost of producing a bushel of potatoes averaged approximately 40c a bushel, while this year it will approximate 30c. Then last year the selling price on potatoes in the spring was around 20c to 25c per bushel while this year, at the present time, it is nt least 50c a bushel which indicates that potatoes will produce a profit.

This is the last year that potato cost account records will be kept as when the project was started it covered a period of five years and this happens to be the fifth year. A bulletin will be published advising all farmers of just what the summary of these books indicates. Especially, are the main features of successful potato production included in this publication yet to be published.

Howard Stephens, W. K. Straw, LeRoy Hardy and A. B. Todd are the farmers who have co-operated in this project this year. Two of the four are certified seed producers and the other two are table stock growers.

It is our opinion that this bulletin, when published, will be the very best publication that has ever been available as all statements are verified by accurate figures, not on two or three farms but upon at least a hundred in different sections of the state.

Discussions Completed

The last lessons in the series of three on child care and training were given by Mrs. Lynde, specialist in child care and training, last Thursday. The last lesson proved to be the most interesting of the series. For two hours and a half the group of ladies thoroughly enjoyed the practical explanations of how many little faults that exist in every family can be remedied. Mrs. Lynde discussed in detail many little suggestions that help in the discipline of children. The comment was freely expressed by many "If I only had time, I certainly would carry out her suggestions." The point is, that as a result of these discussions, many parents can remedy a few disturbances which will help greatly.

During the series a total of 158 interested parents were present. It is hoped that another year we can again make plans to have Mrs. Lynde conduct another series of meetings.

Make the Pennies Larger

WHEN James Buchanan was President and tall beaver hats were in vogue; when gentlemen wore broad cravats and ladies wore hoop skirts, the pennies they tossed to children were as big as quarters. But the cart-wheel coppers your grandfather got for keeping his lace collar clean were not as big in buying power as the pennies of today.

A penny then might buy a pastry; or ten of them take one to the Fair, but your great-aunt and great-uncle couldn't have gone to a movie at any price.

Sixty years ago the ladies could go shopping for dry goods and buy silks that would make you green with envy, linens that were linens and broadcloths that beggar description. But what their favorite store did not have they usually got along without.

You can pick up your daily newspaper and in fifteen minutes you can know what the different shops are offering in fabrics, patterns, varieties and qualities that great-grandmother never dreamed could be gathered together under any conditions.

Times have changed, and so have merchandise and business methods. One of the influences that has helped to bring about so much of change, that has helped to multiply opportunities and increase the spending size of our pennies is advertising.

Every merchant, every manufacturer knows that advertising materially reduces selling costs by increasing the demand for and the distribution of the products of hundreds of thousands of mills. Indeed, many of the things we count today as necessities or simple luxuries could not be made and sold at their reasonable prices except as advertising has created a broad market for them, making millions of sales at little prices and little profits.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

Be Elegant, Is Fashion's Message

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOTHING in the way of sumptuous fabrics, fine laces, precious furs, glittering embroideries and gleaming jewels is too luxurious to satisfy fashion's ambition this season.

As every style-conscious woman knows when the velvet daytime suit de luxe is in fashion there is a lot that must be lived up to in the way of endless accessory elegancies. In proof of which we refer you to the charming little outfit which costumes the young modern seated in the group pictured.

The velvet which fashions this modish two-piece is a super-quality lyons type. The fur is black skunk which was considered a most popular trimming in early Victorian days. The frill of fluff ince down the front and peeping from beneath the fur-cuffed sleeves matches the lace of the blouse. Of course you have noticed how like a quaint basque of yore are the lines of the pert little snug-fitting jacket. The wee chapeau is in perfect keeping with the theme.

Another trend in velvet daytime fashions which should be mentioned because of its importance this season is that of the fur-bordered tunic suit. The opportunities for fur and velvet opulency offered is beyond wildest flights of imagination. Then there is the strictly tailored short jacketed velvet suit which looks smartest when topped with a beret of its very own velvet.

Lelong, who always dresses the young lille so beautifully presents the model posed to the left in the group. It is done in black net and lynns velvet. The corded velvet finishing on the net flouncing is repeated on the shoulder. The fact that this young woman is wearing a handsome glittering necklace and bracelet should be taken into account for fashion regards rich jewelry ensembles such as this as a necessary luxury and proper finesse to every formal costume.

If conclusive evidence be needed that this is a season in which fashion creators have become luxury-conscious to a marked degree, here you have it in the regal evening gown posed in the foreground of our illustration. American beauty velvet richly embroidered with gold and jeweled stones fashions this exquisite mode. The tunic line continues gracefully into a fish-tail train lined with pink satin.

While the average woman may not be aspiring to the super formality which this gorgeous gown bespeaks yet it may be accepted as interpretative as to certain style trends which may be toned to occasions more or less formal. For instance the American beauty tone of the velvet employed verifies word from Paris that deep warm colorings in purple and reddish key such as the very new blackberry and aubergine and various wine shades are in the ascendency. Also the prestige of velvet as medium-supreme for dinner and evening gowns is here re-affirmed. Then, too, the tunic theme introduced reflects the latest silhouette movement. Finally the elaborate jewel and gold embroidery is indicative of the mood which fashion is in to trim velvet with beguiling touches of beadwork and kindred effects.

CAPES BACK AGAIN IN LATEST STYLES

Capes are back again.

Little waist length capes appear with daytime and dinner gowns. Hip-length capes of fur or wool are worn with street costumes. Long cloaks are swept about the most regal evening gowns.

Hip-length capes for both daytime and evening wear are the newest fashion note. They appear in fur, wool and silk treated to new tricks.

Helm uses rich bronze seal and galyak tinted a new gold beige called "chrome" to make striking hip-length capes for daytime wear. Sometimes they are worn with a muff and toque to match, again they appear with wool accessories matching the frock.

Chanel designs hip and three-quarter length wool capes for sports and travel wear. Deep green-ribbed wool frocks and suits appear with loose capes of the same fabric, swinging from the shoulders.

Diadems and Headbands Grace Evening Coiffures

Sweet young things struggling with hair in the "between permanents" stage, find in the evening coiffure a maddening problem. Vionet, Lanvin, and other designers have taken pity on their plight by creating diadems and headbands which transform an ordinary "hank of hair" into a thing of loveliness. The girl with the too-round face will look positively ethereal and Glish-like when she bedecks her tresses with the Russian type of diadem. The woman whose features incline to the classic gains becoming dignity with the Grecian type of headdress. Either is the quintessence of chic for wear with the season's most ravishing evening gowns.

Separate Skirts

There is always a place in the mode for the smartly fashioned separate skirt. It is a favorite of the college girl, for with a skirt or two and enough blouses, she can give an endless variety to her wardrobe.

BROWN AND WHITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

No, this lovely evening wrap is not going to be described as featuring the usual black and white contrast. On the contrary the handsome velvet which fashions this stunning wrap-around short coat is in a deep rich brown. You can scarcely vision how perfectly stunning white ermine is with brown velvet unless you see this wrap which Molyneaux has created in this original. The newest evening colors trend to rich dark hues, especially radiant browns and wine tones and greens so dark they look almost black. There is a new blackberry shade which many designers are using instead of black this season.

Broad Shoulder Fashion Is Marked for Oblivion

Designers are already making provision for the passing of the broad shoulder. It is doomed to die within the next three months, according to their astute reckoning.

One coat maker has evolved a brilliant scheme. He is offering coats with collapsible shoulder peaks. On the day of the broad-shoulder's funeral, all you need do to be in fashion's swim is to remove the padding from the specially treated armhole and have the points stitched down.

New Englanders Loath to Part With Antiques

In the houses of rural New England few antiques remain—for the reason that they have been broken beyond repair and replaced by stouter pieces, not because city dealers have profited by the dull wits of sons of the soil.

Nothing makes the New England farmer cling to what he has more than learning that some one else wants it. Especially to white shirts and suave voices he is determined to yield nothing.

I have known an old woman to cough away her last days in actual want, her only comfort the 10-cent boxes of ice cream a kindly country doctor brought her on his rounds, while a Boston attorney persistently offered her $100 for an applewood chair, $150 for a clavichord standing in her barn, $200 for a barrel of mirrors and pictures and candlesticks.

"If they're worth that to him, they're worth it to me," said she, with unanswerable logic, and lived as she was until she died.—Gladys Hasty Carroll in the North American Review.

Revised Bookkeeping

"You say you have gotten your accounts out of the red?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax, "and by a very simple process. I have the bookkeepers enter my liabilities in solemn black ink and my assets in joyous pink."

NEW LAUNDRY SOAP BREAKS ALL RECORDS FOR FAST WASHING AND WHITE CLOTHES

Soaks Out Dirt In 15 Minutes,
Yet Is Utterly Harmless to Color, Fabric and Hands

NO time-saving, labor-saving development of recent years has brought forth such a chorus of approval as Procter & Gamble's amazing new Laundry Soap Discovery! Everywhere, after trying it women are exclaiming—"Will the wonders of science never cease?"

For this remarkable invention is an utterly new-type laundry soap. A soap that multiplies itself 500 TIMES in suds. Which means you get at least twice as much suds as from old-style soaps. A still faster-washing, still whiter-washing soap that's utterly SAFE for colors, fabrics, and hands.

This remarkable new discovery is called OXYDOL. And you'll find to your surprise that it makes other soaps—"granulated," bar or flake—hopelessly out-of-date.

Women believed they had the fastest soap already! Then found it was slow, alongside OXYDOL. For OXYDOL utterly banishes boiling. It ends washboard scrubbing. It cuts soaking time to 15 minutes—gets clothes out far sooner.

They believed they had the whitest washes they could possibly get. And are now amazed by washes 4 to 5 shades whiter than before.

By impartial scientific test, ONE washing with OXYDOL gets clothes whiter than 2 to 4 washes with other soaps. But that's not all!

You'll find clothes actually last longer, washed with this new soap. That the daintiest colors DO NOT fade. That it is easier on hands than any soap you've ever used. For no strong agents, no chemical bleaches are in OXYDOL. Just pure soap elements so blended with others as to protect clothes against fading.

OXYDOL
ECONOMICAL
By actual test, a regular 25c package of Oxydol will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap—or 2 to 3 times as much flakes.

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

DISSOLVES Dirt—In Any Water, Hard or Soft

Its creamy, "free-acting" suds dissolve dirt out in 15 minutes. No boiling, no back-breaking scrubbing is necessary. Nor any "water-softener," either. For the right amount of water-softener is already there.

With OXYDOL you'll do your wash in 25% to 40% less time. You'll get a whiter, sweeter-smelling wash than ever before. Everything will iron beautifully—no soap streaks or smudges anywhere. And you'll never be bothered with fading colors or red, soap-bitten hands.

These things we promise you. Whatever your former favorite, try OXYDOL next time you wash. You'll never go back to slower soaps or harsher soaps again! Procter & Gamble.

AN EDITORIAL!

Close approach of the Yuletide season and subsequent activity among young people, especially in procuring Christmas trees, brings to mind depredations of previous years upon private property in Charlevoix.

The Christmas season in the past has never been without justified complaints of this nature. Ornamental evergreens of great value have been destroyed in considerable number on private property within the city limits. The most frequent complaints have come from the Chicago Club, Boulder park and nearby private estates.

With these facts and the interests of property owners in mind, we make an urgent appeal to parents to warn their children of the seriousness and criminal nature of such depredations. These inroads may be easily eliminated if parents will take the pains to instruct their children to regard the rights of others in the proper manner.

THE SILENT NIGHT

We are approaching another Christmas season — a time when one turns to inquire with sympathetic understanding if all is well with our brother struggling so painfully along the rugged road. It is a time when we search our souls to see if we have kept the faith. As the day for universal rejoicing approaches we are wondering how much happier thousands of Michigan firesides would be this Christmas had the Democratic party in this state kept its promise made last fall to the forgotten man to lower the interest rate on small loans. What answer will the party of Thomas Jefferson, greatest of American idealists, make for its failure to keep a solemn pledge entered into with those upon whom depression has laid such a heavy hand? What answer can there be for such deliberate betrayal of public faith and trust? We have witnessed these forgotten men slowly sinking into the silent night of despair — no longer able to bear their burden of usury. Two hundred thousand Michigan men and women forced to carry this extra oppression are patiently waiting for the hour to arrive when they can write their answer upon the tablets of the Commonwealth.

BAXTER RELIEF CORPS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

President—Fern Todd.
Treasurer, Olive Christensen.
Chaplain, Jennie Ager.
Conductor, Perthana Taylor.
Guard, Mary Allison.

The remaining officers are appointive and will be announced at the installation. The W. R. C. presented the department's welfare committee a complete outfit of child's clothing and some toys for the Christmas distribution.

SALVATION ARMY HEAD WARNING OF IMPOSTER

A woman posing as a member of the Salvation Army has been discovered in this county soliciting funds for the Army. She is dressed in the regulation uniform, but is an impostor, and warning has been given by Capt. T. H. Staples of Petoskey to beware of her.

The woman was last heard of in Charlevoix last Monday afternoon. She has been operating in this portion of the state for the past three years, although she stays away from Petoskey, which leads the authorities to believe she lives in that city.

The sheriff has been notified, and is looking for the impostor.

PLANS PROGRESS FOR HOLIDAY PRESENTATION

Local and Out-of-Town Talent to Join in "Dramatic Carols"

Arrangements are under way for the presentation during the holiday season of a fine program of Christmas music. The plan being worked out is similar to that of last year when Charlevoix and Petoskey talent joined for a union cantata.

"Dramatic Carols" has been selected for the offering, together with special features and solo numbers. This is the service given so successfully in Traverse City last year. With local talent, those from our neighboring city and Mrs. Mildred MacArthur of Flint, a beautiful and artistic production should result.

In a community spirit, representatives from all groups of the city are being included. Mrs. A. C. Belding will be manager and accompanist, Mrs. Ray O'Brien conductor, Mrs. W. W. Hurd and Miss Freda McMillan in charge of dramatic staging.

The exact date has been left open in consideration of the convenience of those coming here to assist. A more complete announcement, with program, will be given later.

CONSERVATION RELIEF PROGRAM IS PLANNED

Would Give 12,000 Jobs Under Civil Works Act Provisions

At a meeting in Grand Rapids, the state conservation commission, authorized conservation projects in 65 counties that will provide work for 12,000 of the state's unemployed.

With funds made available through the Civil Works administration, the commission will recruit men principally from welfare rolls and pay them 50 cents an hour for 130 hours work a month. The projects include improvement of game refuges, fish hatcheries, rearing ponds and state parks.

The commission also authorized the sale of 71,931 acres of delinquent tax lands in the three national forests located in the upper peninsula. The land will be sold to the federal government at $1.50 an acre.

Members of the commission expressed dissatisfaction over the handling of the civilian conservation corps workers. They charged that the workers were forced to remain idle because they had not received winter clothing suitable for work in the woods.

GROUP LEADERS HERE TO GET INSTRUCTIONS

Third Extension Course Lesson Presented Last Tuesday

The third lesson of the sewing project, "Fitting Your Dress," was presented to a group of twenty leaders December 5th, at the Charlevoix community room, by Miss Irene Taylor, clothing specialist from the M. S. C. extension department.

Much interest is manifest by the ladies in this project. Some of the leaders reported as high as 26 members in their classes.

The lesson consisted of fitting the muslin patterns to individuals and a demonstration of altering sleeve patterns to fit nearly every type of arm by Miss Taylor.

Leaders are asked to bring their muslin patterns with both sleeves in, and well pressed, also a picture of the dress they intend to make for themselves and a sample of the goods to be used, to the next leaders' meeting on January 16th.

EAST JORDAN YOUTH IS PLACED ON PROBATION

Must Observe Strict Discipline for Period of Four Years

At a hearing before Probate Judge Ervan A. Ruegsegger, Monday afternoon, Harold Carney, 14-year-old East Jordan youth, who last Monday attempted extortation of $150 from W. P. Porter, East Jordan lumberman, was placed on probation for four years.

Among the disciplinary restrictions imposed by the court was regular attendance at school and either church or Sunday school, weekly report for the first month to Howard Porter, probation officer, and monthly thereafter, and other measures to insure behavior during the period of probation.

While an adult would have faced possibility of long imprisonment for violation of federal laws, the boy was placed on probation due to his extreme youth.

Notice to Voters on Sewage Disposal System

TEMPERANCE GROUP IN SESSION FRIDAY

Welfare Committee Report Fine Response to Their Work

The December meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held last Friday afternoon in the community room. Mrs. Hartwell and Mrs. Saunders were hostesses. Mrs. Palmer presided. Mrs. Usher led the flag salute, Mrs. Brown conducted the devotions.

Two vocal duets by Mrs. Arthur Wicks and Miss Clara Kelderhouse, accompanied by Mrs. Roy Myers, were much appreciated.

Mrs. Kelderhouse, chairman of the welfare committee, reported a good response to their call for used clothing and eighty-one articles given out. A gift of $5.00 had been received to buy underwear, shoes and stockings.

Mrs. Parker gave a talk on "Mobilizing Youth for Leadership," suggesting caution in criticizing youth and saying "they are all doing it," for they are not. There are many young people with high moral standards. When boys and girls go wrong the cause is somewhere back along the line. Young people need the sympathy and guidance of their elders, not criticism.

Adjourned to meet January 12th, when an institute program will be presented.

This month is "joy month" in our church, because Isaiah tells us concerning the coming of Jesus: "The Spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of council and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah," and eventually, "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11:1, 9.

Our subject for the morning service will be in keeping with the Christmas spirit, it will be "Why Did Jesus Come." The subject may seem prosaic and worn out, but as it is applied to conditions of today it takes on new life.

In the evening at 7:30 the subject will be "The Humiliation of A King," or "The King Who Lived With Beasts and Ate Grass."

Thursday night, this week, the Sunday school council will meet to discuss the Sunday school lesson for December 17th. We will also hear a report of a committee appointed to suggest plans for carrying on midweek activities for the young people of our church.

The Sunday school, with the aid of the choir, will present a pageant on Sunday evening, December 24th.

The department of state sold 8,349 nutomobile license plates during November, it has been announced. This number compares to 607 issued for the same month in 1932. George R. Hogarth, director of conservation, has estimnted that 300,000 small game licenses will have been sold Michigan hunters this year. A drastic decline was recorded in 1931 and last year. This year's increase, Hogarth believes, is, primarily due to the drop in price of licenses.

Russian Train That Looks Like a Reptile

It is an electric train that runs on balls instead of wheels, and in a grooved "sluiceway" instead of on tracks. Officially the Soviet industrial authorities state that experiments with the train have shown excellent results. Its maximum speed is given as in excess of 100 miles an hour.

"The Bad Man From Bitter Creek"

THE city of Julesburg, Colo., perpetuates the memory of a Frenchman whose first name is known but whose last name is a subject for dispute. It doesn't really matter, for he is only incidental to this story of Joseph A. Slade, who is himself variously known as Alf. Slade, Bill Slade, "The Little Terror of the Plains" and the first to wear the dime-novelish title of "The Bad Man From Bitter Creek."

Slade was a good example of the "good man gone bad." Born in 1829 of respectable parents who gave him a good education and a good start in life in the little town of Carlisle, Ill., Slade at the age of eighteen became involved in a quarrel with an older man which ended in the death of his opponent. To escape punishment he fled across the Mississippi and enlisted in a Missouri regiment marching away to the Mexican war. Evidently he made a good soldier for he is said to have borne the complimentary title of "Captain" afterwards.

But nothing more is known of his history until 1859 when he entered the employ of the Overland Stage company to wipe out the thieves and outlaws who were about to put the stage company out of business.

In accomplishing this he gained a reputation—an undeserved one, albeit—for being a killer and a bad man. He also acquired many enemies, among them a certain Jules Beni or Bene, keeper of the station on the Platte river at what is now Julesburg, Colo., who was believed to be in collusion with the outlaws. Slade discharged him and Jules vowed revenge. When the Frenchman's chance came he shot Slade and left him lying with 13 bullets and buckshot in his body.

Then, according to the legends, Slade rose on one elbow and gasped, "I'll live to get you yet, Jules, and when I do I'll wear one of your ears on my watchchain." According to the legend-makers Slade made good his threat—later he disarmed his enemy, tied him up to a post in the corral, tortured him for several days before finally killing him and for years afterwards carried his ghastly trophy around in his pocket.

The fact is that Slade did kill Jules after he had been disarmed by other men, but the rest of the yarn is fiction, even though it has become one of the classic yarns of the West. Later Slade was discharged by the stage company, took to drinking and began trying to live up to his reputation as a bad man. He drifted to Montana and continued his career of shooting up saloons and terrorizing peaceful miners until at last the Vigilantes, after warning him repeatedly, put an end to his career. That end was an inglorious one—the "Bad Man From Bitter Creek" dangled from the end of a rope tossed over the beam of a corral gate.

Langlade, the Partisan Leader

POPULAR belief is that "the shot heard 'round the world" was fired at Concord, Mass., in 1775, but at least one leading historian says that that epic event took place 23 years earlier at the junction of Loramie creek and the Miami river in the present Shelby county, Ohio. It was here that a small army of French and some 200 Ottawa and Chippewa Indians, led by Charles de Langlade, attacked the British post of Pickawillany, defeated the Piankeshaw Indians gathered around it, slew their chief, "Old Britain," captured eight traders and burned the post. Says the historian: "Here began the contest that was to scatter death broadcast throughout the world"—the Seven Years' war in Europe and the French and Indian war in America, which was to make England, rather than France, the master of North America.

Langlade was born at Mackinac in 1729, the son of a French fur trader of the same name, who had married the sister of Nissowaquet, head chief of the Ottawas.

In 1741 the elder Langlade moved to Green Bay, Wis., to become "the father of Wisconsin," and there his son grew to manhood, married an Ottawa woman and became one of the most important war leaders of the tribe. In 1752 he led the expedition to Pickawillany and three years later he was the leader of the Ottawas and Chippewas at Braddock's defeat. By some historians he is credited with having most to do with bringing about that defeat. Crosses of the Order of St. Louis were given to Contrecoeur, Dumas and Ligaeris, the other French leaders there, but Langlade was passed by. He was only a "half-breed and a squaw-man"!

He fought again at Quebec in 1760 and after the final conquest of New France he returned to the Wisconsin country. At the outbreak of the Revolution, apparently forgetful of his enmity for the English, he became a partisan leader for the British and took part in a series of skirmishes with a noted French partisan leader on the American side, Godfrey de Linctot, one of George Rogers Clark's ablest lieutenants in holding the Illinois country which he had conquered. But he was never able to repeat the successes which he had won during the French and Indian war and shortly after the end of the Revolution he drops out of recorded history.

A Few Little Smiles

RESOURCEFUL

The bachelor was paying his recently married friend a visit.

"Well," said the latter, after they had inspected the flat, "what do you think of it?"

"Pretty good," praised the bachelor; "but there's one thing that has struck me as rather strange. Why did you choose a flat with such a tiny kitchen?"

The married man winked artfully. "You're the first man I've told this to, so keep it quiet," he whispered. "It's so small that I can't get in there to help my wife when she's doing the washing-up."

Bill, the engineer, was a radio enthusiast. Every moment of his spare time was occupied in building new sets. These he would proudly exhibit to his long-suffering friends.

One day his brother-in-law called, and Bill brought out his latest effort and switched it on.

"This is another one that I built myself," he said, turning the dials.

"I can quite believe it," said his brother-in-law, as a piercing shriek issued from the loud-speaker. "It whistles at every station."

Gave Him the Works

The new office boy had been instructed how to answer callers. Just before noon a man asked, "Is the boss in?"

"Are you a salesman, a bill collector or a friend of his?" the boy inquired.

"All three," was the answer.

"Well, he's in a business conference. He's out of town. Step in and see him."

Child's Version

A judge's little daughter, who had attended her father's court for the first time, was very much interested in the proceedings. After her return home she told her mother:

"Papa made a speech, and several other men made speeches to 12 men who sat all together, and then these 12 men were put in a dark room to be developed."—Montreal Star.

FARMERS USING GOOD METHODS GET PROFIT

Account Books Show Reasons for Success and Failure

Farm years' records prove that the farmers in this state have received good pay for their work during each of the years in a period when conditions generally could not be called good. Other farmers lost money, time and labor during the same years. The extreme difference between the largest loss and the greatest profit on these 501 farms in 1932 was over $11,000.

One of the items taught by these records is the necessity of doing the right thing at the right time. Planning farm work so the plowing is done in time to permit seeding crops at the proper dates is very important. No amount of good practices after seeding will compensate for a crop seeded too late for successful growth.

A check was made on nine good dairy practices which should be used on every farm possible. Some dairymen used one of these practices and ran of them used all of the nine.

Farmers who used all nine of the better practices had an income of $80 for dairy products from each cow. Farmers who used only one of the good practices received only $30 worth of dairy products from each cow.

The good practices which made this great difference were purebred cows, purebred bulls, keeping production records, feeding grain on pasture, providing legume pasture, watering cows in the barn, selling whole milk, feeding balanced rations, and using milking machines. Only one of these practices, selling whole milk, can not be controlled by any dairy farmer.

A somewhat similar study made of the poultry business again revealed methods which made the difference between success and failure. The most important practice, financially, was that of bringing pullets into production before they were six months old. This practice made a difference of 88 cents per hen on the year's receipts.

FARMERS ARE URGED TO KILL HORSE BOTS

Parasitic Larvae Insect Increases Task Preparing Horses for Spring

Michigan farmers who have tried to guide a team of horses when the animals were fighting to drive away bot flies will be interested in the campaign being conducted by the animal pathology department at Michigan State college to destroy these pests.

Successful treatments must wait for at least 30 days after freezing weather, as that period of time is required for the insect larvae to gather in the horse's stomach. The pests can be destroyed any time before March 1. Early treatments are preferable as the presence of the parasites increase the task of getting the horse in condition for spring work.

Any bot eggs still clinging to hair on the horse may be destroyed by washing the parts with a two per cent solution of cresol or with a suitable dilution of a coal-tar creosote dip.

FEW REACTORS FOUND IN TUBERCULOSIS TEST

Dr. Dean, District Health Director, States Disease Is Not Prevalent

Reporting on the results of tests for tuberculosis given to 184 Charlevoix school pupils last Wednesday evening, Dr. Carleton Dean, director of the District Health Unit, stated today that only eight or nine showed positive reactions.

On the afternoon of Wednesday, December 13, and all the following day, Thursday, December 14, an X-ray diagnostic clinic will be carried on at the Boyne City school house to show if positive reactions found is indicative that the disease actually exists at the present time. This is not always the case, as positive reactions sometimes indicate the child has some time previously been exposed to tuberculosis.

A large number of parents accompanied the children who came for the tests last Wednesday evening. Dr. Dean was assisted by Dr. John Skow, O. P. North, Harry Bingham and Miss Helen French of the school faculty, Miss Lockwood, county nurse, and Clarence Meggison and W. P. Hicken of the school board. Before the campaign is completed, Dr. Dean stated 1600 children will have been examined in the district.

LAST PRIMARY MONEY RELEASE TO SCHOOLS

Checks for Over Three Million to Be Mailed by December 15th

Release of the final installment of 1933 primary school fund money, amounting to $3,110,917, has been announced by State Treasurer Theodore I. Fry. Checks to the various school districts of the state will be mailed on or before December 15.

Distribution of the $3,110,917 brings the year's total to $17,396,036, equal to about $12.58 for each of the 1,382,630 children between the ages of five and 19.

MANY WORKERS SHARE IN SUGAR BEET CROP

Filling the Bowl with Domestic Sugar Puts Money in American Pockets

The stake of the American people in the beet sugar industry was portrayed by an exhibit displayed at the Chicago hay and grain show by Michigan State college.

Farmers are not the only parties interested in the success of the beet crop. Truckers, railroad men, coal miners, workers in limestone quarries, cotton growers, workers in the cotton mills, and laborers all participate in the trickle of dollars from the crop.

One million acres of the most fertile soil in America grows beets when the price of sugar is high enough to permit the mills to grind the crop and contract for acreage. When this land goes out of beets, it adds tremendously to the surplus of other crops whose production is now being curtailed by agreements between the farmer and the federal government.

Seventy thousand farmers grow beets when the crop is at its peak, and 400,000 laborers find work in the beet fields. More than a million tons of coal, coke, and limestone are used in milling the beets and thousands of trucks and railroad cars are needed to move the beets and other supplies needed by the mills.

A ton of Michigan beets makes 275 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of dried beet pulp, and 40 pounds of molasses. Michigan stands third in the list of sugar beet states. All of the states produce only one-fourth of the sugar consumed in the United States. The other 75 per cent is imported.

Beet sugar compares favorably in quality with any other sugar. Housewives can not tell the difference and chemical analysis shows the equal value of beet sugar.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Subject for Sunday, December 17, "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?"

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, December 10.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Acts 28: 3,5): "And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand. And he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt no harm."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p.991): "The calm, strong currents of true spirituality, the manifestations of which are health, purity, and self-immolation, must deepen human experience, until the beliefs of material existence are seen to be a bald imposition, and sin, disease, and death give everlasting place to the scientific demonstration of divine Spirit and to God's spiritual, perfect man."

AT THE MOVIES

Extravagant Musical Brings Riot of Fun, Earns Critical Okay

What happens when four irresponsible side show entertainers decide to brave the perils of the Great White Way in search of fame and fortune will be revealed at the Palace theatre Saturday and Sunday when "Take a Chance," Paramount's new musical extravaganza, will be presented for the first time in this city.

We won't spoil your pleasure by relating the story of "Take a Chance." Suffice to say that there is plenty of action, excitement, laughter and thrills. James Dunn, June Knight, Lillian Roth and Cliff Edwards play the parts of the carnival spielers and dancers who make a diverting quartette. Although this is Dunn's first effort at farce comedy he performs like a veteran as the light-fingered spieler. Miss Knight, again playing the role she created on the stage, is a vision of loveliness.

Charles "Buddy" Rogers, as a theatrical producer, Lillian Bond as the sinuous, dangerous and jealous-netress, Dorothy Lee as Rogers' kid sister and Lona Andre as "Miss Jersey City" are highly amusing.

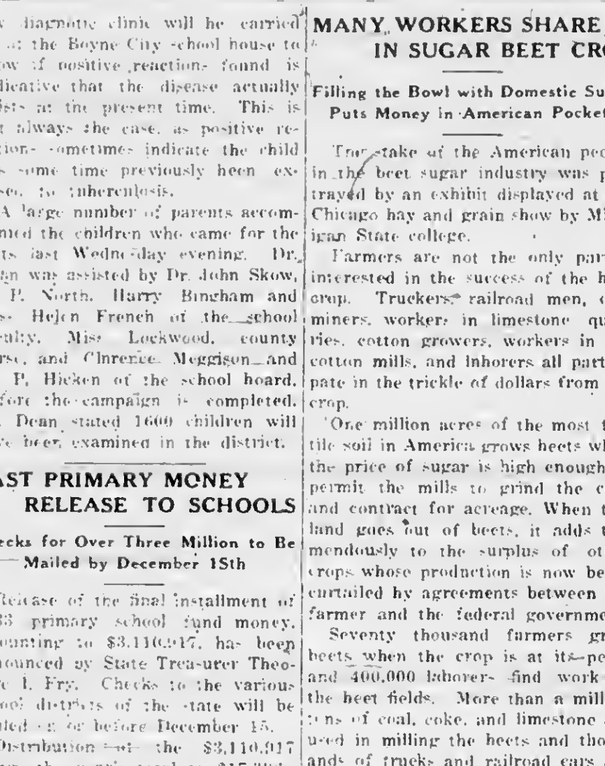
IT'S CREAM



"Automobile taxes must come down," said William G. Brynat, president of the Automobile Club of Michigan, recently. "Michigan industrial prosperity depends to a large extent upon the automobile, yet we permit this state to be one of the leading offenders in exacting unjust fees from its motorists. Twenty-seven states have lower automobile taxes than Michigan. Pyramiding assessments have played a part in recording another decrease in Michigan motor vehicles in 1933, the fourth consecutive year to show a reduction.

COMSTOCK SIGNS THREE NEW BANKING LAWS

State Bank Insurance and Stock Measures Placed in Effect

Governor Comstock has signed three of the nine bank bills which were introduced in the special session of the legislature two weeks ago.

The measures permit state banks to insure their deposits through federal procedure; allow them to issue preferred stock which will be bought by R. F. C. funds; and authorizes the institutions to take advantage of any future banking legislation that may be passed by congress.

Two other measures which give trust companies authority to issue preferred stock and subscribe to federal depository insurance are still awaiting the executive's approval.

Shortly after the governor had affixed his signature to the three bills the house banking committee reported to the floor two measures which would give industrial banks the privileges of deposit insurance and preferred stock subscriptions.

They were re-introduced in the house after the senate had twice defeated them in hopes that the lower body could speed the measures into law by acting upon them first.

STRAITS BRIDGE IS AGAIN CONSIDERED

Governor Studies Proposal for Island Span From Cheboygan

Gov. Comstock is giving serious study to a recommendation that the legislature authorize the bridging of the Straits of Mackinac.

The development is being considered on the basis of a public works project to be financed by federal funds, secured by "insurrection" bonds to be recommended as the state's pledge for federal aid.

The proposal calls for a twenty-three mile bridge structure reaching from Cheboygan to Bois Blanc, then to Round Island, then to Mackinac Island, with the final span extending to St. Ignace. Its cost probably would be in the neighborhood of $10,000,000.

ONE CHANGE IN WINTER FISHING RULES

Angler May Use Five Lines With One Hook—Rod License Required

Only one change has been made in the ice fishing regulations this year, the department of conservation has announced. This winter, ice fishermen will be limited to five ice lines with but one hook attached to each line. Ice lines left unattended for more than two hours are considered set lines and are illegal.

Black bass may be taken through the ice until December 31, but on that date the season closes on that species until next June 25, so that from January 1 until March 31 all species of fish other than black bass and trout may be taken with hook and line through the ice. All lakes other than designated trout lakes and all streams other than designated trout streams will be open to hook and line fishing during the winter.

A minimum size of six inches has been restored to perch, rock and calico bass.

The spear fisherman will be limited to the use of his spear on inland lakes to the months of January and February. He may take pike, ciscoes, pilotfish, whitefish, Menominee whitefish, dogfish, garpike, carp, suckers, mullet, redhorse, sheepshead, lake trout and smelt. He is not permitted to use an artificial light. Grass pike have been added to the list of designated game fish, which prohibits their sale when taken from inland waters.

A 1934 general rod license will be necessary for all fishing after January 1st.

SHORE DRIVE SURVEY OFFICIALLY APPROVED

Project Submitted for CWA Approval—Right-of-Way Obtained

Harry E. Brightman of Lansing, location engineer of the state highway department, spent Thursday in Charlevoix going over plans of the lake shore drive south of Charlevoix along Lake Michigan.

The plans and survey as drawn up by Engineer Robert F. Sloan were approved and it is anticipated the project, listed in the CWA program, will be given final local and state approval.

All right-of-way between Charlevoix and Norwood, southern terminal of the scenic drive, have been procured from property owners.

DIRECT WEIGHT TAX PAYMENT PROPOSED

FITZGERALD SEEKS CHANGE IN PRESENT METHOD

Would Prevent State from Using County Money for General Expense Purposes

(By Maurice J. Baker.)

Immediate payment of all weight tax collections, as they are made, to the counties in which the automobiles are owned, to replace the present system whereby the state handles the funds and then allocates them back to the counties, will be advocated by Frank D. Fitzgerald, Secretary of State, in connection with his plan for reduction of the weight tax, he announced last Wednesday.

If this proposal should be adopted, it would be impossible for the state to use weight tax funds for general state expenses, as has been the custom in the past. This has resulted frequently in serious delays in payments to the counties. This year, for example, the first under the Horton Act, about $6,000,000 of the approximately $17,500,000 in weight tax collections actually has been paid to the counties to date.

"The state has no right to this money," Mr. Fitzgerald declared. "The weight tax amounts to a property tax, and belongs to the counties."

Under the present system, each of the 132 branch offices of the Secretary of State makes daily deposits of its collections in some designated depository and forwards copies of the deposit slips to the Secretary's office. He, in turn, gives them to the State Treasurer, who draws on the bank immediately and places the money in the treasury to the credit of the state highway department. Then, at dates designated by law, the counties are allocated the funds, technically from the gasoline as well as the weight tax, but equal in sum to the latter. The payments actually are made if and when the state's cash position permits.

"Savings of $40,000 a year can be made by eliminating this transfer of funds to the state and back to the counties," Mr. Fitzgerald said. "It costs this amount in depository bonds and express and money orders alone. Further savings would be shown through reduction of clerical work in the offices of secretary of state, state treasurer, and highway department."

The daily deposits would be made directly to the county treasurers by the branch offices, with copies of the deposit slips filed with the secretary of state for record only.

Complete control of the funds raised in this manner would rest with the various boards of supervisors, according to the Fitzgerald plan. The only earmarkings would be (1) payments on highway bonds, (2) the balance to be used for highway purposes, as budgeted among the various subdivisions of the county government by the supervisors, the county's portion to be expended under supervision of the county road commissions.

Although declining he believes his publicized recommendation of a $3-$6-$9 license fee for autos is reasonable. Mr. Fitzgerald emphasized that his mind is open on the subject.

"Adequate funds certainly must be raised to provide for maintenance of our huge investments in highways, both county and state," he said. "I am making an intensive survey of this subject, to determine the minimum amount that is required."

As an equalizing factor, equivalent somewhat to the present one-eighth-equal-to-all-counties split in the weight tax, Mr. Fitzgerald would include in his revision of highway finances a definite appropriation out of the gasoline tax, to be allocated equally among the counties. Offhand, he suggested that $5,000,000 might be about the proper amount of this appropriation. This would take the place of the present graduated appropriations of the McNitt-Holbeck-Smith township road law.

An increase in the gasoline tax might eventually be necessary to provide a state highway construction fund, the secretary of state intimated, if his plan for revision of the highway finance set-up is accomplished. "It would be fair to consider any present action as emergency and temporary," he said. "Later, if necessary, we could provide as much increased revenue as we might need."

FORD 1934 MODEL IS NOW BEING DISPLAYED

New Car Hailed Foremost Achievement in Ford History

The new car is said to be the finest ever produced by the Ford Motor Co. In a general way it resembles the 1933 models but is improved to offer a still more distinctive and attractive appearance and latest achievements in automobile engineering and designing.

Some of the improvements in the 1934 model are better engine performance, a new ventilation system, and greater riding comfort. On some models, fenders are in color. A new enamel finish gives a more enduring lustre to bodies and fenders.

Since they went on display here, many people have visited the garage to see them.

COMMUNICATION

Editor's Note—The following letter comes to us from Mrs. Ned Durance of Flint, who is vice-president of the Charlevoix-Flint club. Mrs. Durance has requested space in the Courier in an effort to get in touch with former Charlevoix citizens now residing in Flint and vicinity, to notify them and extend a welcome to the next club party which is scheduled for January 27th. We know of no better manner of covering this item than to publish Mrs. Durance's letter, which follows:

"This year's officers of the Flint-Charlevoix club would like a little space in the Courier to try to get in touch with more Charlevoix people living in Flint and nearby towns, who haven't yet been to one of the parties. We have had people come from Lansing, Grand Rapids, Detroit, Durand, etc. You don't have to live in Flint.

"We want it understood that every person who thinks of Charlevoix as their home town is eligible. There are no dues, but it is customary to take collections to pay for necessary expenses. The supper is always pot-luck, or cooperative, as they call it these days—one dish to pass and either sandwiches or buttered rolls. It is held on the seventh floor of I. M. A. building, usually some time in January and this time it is January 27th.

"It is necessary to have officers so someone will be responsible for all arrangements, otherwise it falls on some few, or else no party. Officers though, is the only mark of a club. There are no dues, no by-laws, rules or regulations—it's just a great big party to which you are all invited. If you can't come for supper, come up for a visit, a few dances or a game of cards, we will guaranteed you won't be sorry.

"Now, the reason for all this is, we are of the opinion the people who haven't attended think you have to "belong" or be invited, when really all that's needed is that you consider yourself from Charlevoix, your donation to the supper, and yourself and family.

"We wish to make an appeal to everyone in Charlevoix county, if you know anyone from Charlevoix living in or near Flint, to please send their names and addresses to the addresses at the end of this letter, or else write the persons themselves and get them to come. They don't need a personal invitation.

"Maybe you could send us a mailing list Mr. Usher, we surely will appreciate it.

"If any of you living at home plan to be in Flint on that date, come up and see us.

"Mrs. L. K. Supernaw is secretary and treasurer, but I volunteered for this job, and I do not know her address. Miss Cora Driggett is president, 1210 Patterson street, and I remain, your truly, Mrs. Ned Durance, vice-president, 202 E. Eldridge."

CITY MOURNS PASSING OF WILLIAM H. MILLER

Was Active in Social, Political, Fraternal and Religious Affairs Over Long Period of Years

Charlevoix today mourns the death of one of its most prominent citizens, William Hersehel Miller, who succumbed at 6 o'clock Monday morning to an illness of long durntion. His passing removes from our midst another pioneer—one closely linked with the growth of Charlevoix through his efforts in its behalf.

Deceased was born in the town of Fife, New York, May 11, 1862. He came with his parents to Pine River, now Charlevoix, in 1865, settling on a homestead in Marion township. His father was the first county surveyor in Charlevoix county. Mr. Miller carried the surveyor's chain, while helping his father, over about every section of the county.

Mr. Miller received his early education in the district school of Charlevoix. He later returned to New York and entered Ogdenburg Academy. After graduation he worked as a commercial salesman and also served nine years in the newspaper office of the Ogdenburg Advance. Before returning to Michigan he was united in marriage to Miss Cora Stacey of Dekulb Junction, N. Y. To this union one child was born, Leon W. Mrs. Miller died in 1909.

In 1889 with his family Mr. Miller returned to Charlevoix and became a carpenter and builder. In September, 1894, he was engaged as warden of the Belvedere Club, then known as the Charlevoix Summer Home Association. He served in this position for 37 years in a very satisfactory manner, resigning in October 1931 because of ill health.

In July 1910 Mr. Miller married Miss Alice Reed of Montecello, Iowa. To this union one daughter, Gwendolyn, was born.

Mr. Miller was very active in the social, political and religious life of the community. He served 10 years as county supervisor and two years as chairman, was a member of the city council, the school board, hospital board. He was active in the Masonic order. He was a Past Master, Past High Priest of the Royal Arch and was a member and chairman of the Masonic Building association since its organization. He was a life member of both the Blue Lodge and Eastern Star. He was present last January and participated in the burning of the mortgage on the temple. The pall bearers were chosen from the Past Masters.

CHEBOYGAN WANTS AL WEBER AS SENATOR 28TH DISTRICT

The recent death of Calvin A. Campbell has left the 28th senatorial district without representation at Lansing. Subsequently citizens aware that the district cannot be well served without representation in the state senate are casting about for a person to succeed the highly respected and capable Indian River statesman.

Over in Cheboygan county a movement is already under way. All counties of the district should join in this effort to assure proper representation at Lansing. The Courier looks upon the move of our neighboring county with even greater favor due to the fact that the candidacy of none other than Al Weber, editor of the Cheboygan Observer, has been undertaken.

Cheboygan county has chosen well according to our estimation. There is no other man in this section of Michigan who has followed more closely state and political affairs—nor none who has done more for the district in which he resides. Al Weber is the type who thinks carefully and analyzes well before he acts and then follows his convictions with a positiveness which does not waver for personal or other reasons.

Mr. Weber's column entitled "Observations" in the Cheboygan Observer, is probably the most read and copied in Michigan. He places credit where it is deserved and with equal force criticizes friend or foe. Al Weber has the courage of his convictions.

We believe the 28th district would have the best senator it has ever had if Al Weber is elected.

LOCAL PHYSICIAN NOW HEADS MEDIC SOCIETY

Dr. F. F. McMillan Elected President of Northern Group

Dr. G. E. Frank of Harbor Springs, relinquished his office as president of the Northern Michigan Medicul society to Dr. F. F. McMillun of Charlevoix, at the annual dinner meeting held Thursday evening at the Hotel Perry, Petoskey.

Dr. R. Larson of Levering, was elected vice-president and Dr. Ervin J. Brenner of East Jordan, was re-elected to serve his third year as secretary and treasurer. Dr. F. C. Mayne and Dr. E. A. Christie, both of Cheboygan, were named delegate and alternate to the state convention in Battle Creek next September.

Additional program heard Miss Katherine Foley, welfare director, outline work of the welfare committee. Miss Foley also complimented and thanked the doctors for their cooperation.

Twenty-one medics were present.

CAROL SERVICE TO BE GIVEN TUESDAY

UNION GROUP IN PROGRAM AT METHODIST CHURCH

Visiting Artists Are Included With Chorus of Thirty Voices for Christmas Presentation

A program of really ancient Christmas carols, which were such a striking feature of medieval music and not so familiar in modern times, will be sung by a chorus and solists in a beautiful concert arrangement to be given Tuesday evening, December 26th, at eight o'clock, in the Methodist church.

In the chorus of over thirty voices will be some from all the various groups of the city. Mrs. Mildred MacArthur of Flint, has consented to come if possible, also Mrs. Maude Coutse of Chicago, both well known in local musical circles. Furnishing accompaniment will be Mrs. Poquette, Petoskey violinist, who has on many previous occasions pleased local audiences and Miss Marian Tyler, flutist.

The service presents one Sicilian, one Catalan, three German, one Welsh, eight English and two French carols. Seven are sacred, three legendury and six secular. One French legendary carol, "Bring a Torch, Jeanette!" will be dramatized. This portrays an ancient French family custom with Miss Virginia Taylor as Jeanette, and Miss Marcia Oldham as Isabella.

After instrumental prelude by Mrs. A. C. Belding and Mrs. Ray O'Brien, the service begins with the annunciation of the angel. "Oh Holy Night, the Stars Are Brightly Shining," sung by Miss Carey. The angelic response is represented by the processional chorus singing in the distance. The last group will be three modern carols. Other features include a duet, "Silent Night" by the Misses Belding and Oldham, with violin accompaniment, and Lorenz's "Fill the World With Light," sung by Gilson Clarke, also with violin accompaniment.

The chorus will attend Christ Episcopal church next Sunday evening at 5 o'clock to render one of the sacred carols. The free will offering next Tuesday evening will go for the welfare work of the church.

HUNTING SEASON RESULT IN HEAVY TOLL

Twenty-four Hunters Killed and 52 Injured in Michigan

Twenty-four deaths and 52 injured represent Michigan's 1933 toll from hunting accidents, the department of conservation has announced.

The small game hunting season preceding November 15, resulted in 17 killed and 34 wounded. The deer hunting season brought seven additional accidental deaths and 12 wounded.

The toll is the highest in the records of the department.

Only two of the seven deaths occurring during the deer hunting season were the results of men being mistaken for deer, the department stated. In past years the majority of deer hunting accidents have been from this cause.

CHARLEVOIX WINS FROM PETOSKEY 5

SCORED DECISIVE 26 TO 16 VICTORY FRIDAY NIGHT

Pearl and Ance Outstanding for Kipmen—Petoskey Reserves Won Overtime Preliminary Tilt

Charlevoix high school basketeers marked up their first victory of the season on the home court last Friday night, winning by a decisive 26 to 16 score from Petoskey's Northmen.

With the exception of the first period, which was closely fought and marked by the wild basket shooting of both teams, the Kipmen held a commanding lead over the visitors and were never in danger.

Two free tosses by Potter and Foster's deuce gave Charlevoix a 4 and 2 advantage at the quarter. Lesher scored a goal for Petoskey. Potter added another gift shot, Pearl contributed two goals and Carey one for Charlevoix's 11 points at the half, while for Petoskey goals were marked up by Reed and Hegner for a totnl of 6.

The Kipmen out-distanced Petoskey badly in the second half. Pearl marked up four goals; Ance two and Foster one, while Richardson contributed a free toss for 15 points. Petoskey netted six points on goals and four from the foul line.

Ance, veteran center, contributed largely to Charlevoix's victory. He completely dominated the tip-off throughout the contest, giving Charlevoix the ball to start practically every play. Pearl, a new-comer at forward position, displayed some accurate long distance shots, netting six goals for a total of 12 points to lead his team mates. The Kipmen revealed a quick, strong defense and a well balanced team which shows promise of going places before the 1933-34 season is over.

The score by quarters:

Petoskey Reserves Win

From a standpoint of excitement the preliminary contest between the reserve teams practically "stole the show." The visitors won by a 29 to 24 count, scoring three goals in an overtime period after the score was knotted 23-all at the close of the regulation time.

The Kipmen have an open date this week, but on December 27th go to Petoskey to engage the Northmen in a return contest.

SEASON'S KILL OF DEER WAS AVERAGE

LOWER PENINSULA PROVIDED BEST RESULTS

Bad Weather, Heavy Snow, Tended to Reduce Kill in Upper Peninsula Counties

"Bad weather" reduced the kill of deer in the upper peninsula of Michigan during the 1933 season to a point comparable with that of 1931, the conservation departed has stated.

Lower peninsulu hunters who went north of the Straits of Mackinac returned with 4,955 deer, a figure that is compared with 6,139 last year and 5,169 in 1931.

Many upper peninsula hunters failed to get to camp or were snowed in, and returned to the lower peninsula to hunt. This, with the fact that there were seven additional counties open to deer hunting south of the Straits of Mackinac, is believed to have brought a total kill in that section of the state close to that of 1932.

In 1931, according to information hunters reported on application, there were approximately 23,300 deer killed, of which 5,169 were brought across the straits. If the same ratio holds each year, the 1932 kill must have been about 27,500 deer killed, and at least 22,500 in 1933. But the deer kill in the newly opened counties, and the shift of many upper peninsula hunters to below the straits by weather conditions, tended to make up the difference so that the total 1933 kill is believed to have been as high or even higher than in 1932.

Many lower peninsula hunters, it was reported, returned home from the upper peninsula without hunting at all or spent the rest of the season south of the straits. The early part of the season found deep snow through most of the area north of the straits, making car travel impossible on many side roads. The deep snow, too, had driven the deer to the swamps which made them difficult to find.

The kill of does during the hunting season maintained about the same rate as last year. In the vicinity of one state game refuge alone, 31 dead does and 26 dead fawns were found by conservation officers during the open deer season. Although the rate was smaller in other areas, every refuge keeper reported kicking up many illegally killed deer.

Dead does and fawns when in good condition, are turned over to

DETROITER IS AWARDED ISLAND MAIL CONTRACT

Beaver Island has been assured again this winter of air mail service during the close of lake navigation.

Postmaster Clarence B. Meggison announced Friday that the contract for the present winter has been awarded to Wilmer C. Harder of Detroit, who flew the route for a considerable period last winter after the plane owned by Harl Schneider was damaged in taking off at the island.

Harder will be paid at the rate of $34 per round trip and the contract calls for two deliveries weekly and extra trips which the pilot must make at his own expense in case he is unable to carry all the mail on hand for delivery in the two crossings allowed by the contract.

Mail is being delivered at the present time by the "Marold II" which will remain on the route as long as conditions permit crossings by boat.

CITY ELIMINATES COASTING DANGER

ACTION RESULT OF NEAR ACCIDENT MONDAY

Sand Dangerous Hills and Seek Safe Coasting Place — Will Erect Community Xmas Tree

A coasting mishap which might easily have proven fatal to a pair of youngsters Monday has prompted city council into action to prevent future reoccurance and, if possible, provide a place where children may enjoy sledding without danger.

Tuesday morning all hills leading onto main thoroughfares were covered with sand and calcium chloride, including Hooker's hill, where Monday two youngsters narrowly escaped possible serious injury when their sled ran under a large truck proceeding along Antrim street. Miraculously the driver was able to stop the vehicle and the sled passed between the wheels. Sanding will prevent future sliding through dangerous intersections and the matter of providing a coasting hill in the Lake Michigan park or some other location free from danger was referred to committee for immediate action.

Parents are appealed to for assistance in keeping their children off dangerous hills until a more suitable place can be provided. A timely warning and precaution, it is pointed out, may prevent serious accidents.

The council voted to provide a community Christmas tree again this year. The street committee was instructed to erect the tree and install colored lights at the usual location on the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets. An appropriation of $25 was voted to the American Legion to purchase candy for distribution to kiddies.

Plans for the Mason, Clinton and Park avenue storm sewers were accepted and placed on file. These projects will be submitted to the CWA committee for approval as work projects.

The council adjourned to meet again Thursday evening for the purpose of canvassing the vote of the special election on the sewage treatment plant proposal.

ACCOUNT BOOKS HELP PLAYER IN NEW DEAL

Crop Contracts and Loan Applications Easy to Make from Records

Farm account books are very handy tools since the new deal started in agriculture, according to members of Michigan State college staff who have been assisting farmers to obtain crop contracts and to make application for federal loans.

Crop reduction contracts which have already been made out for wheat and those for corn and hogs which will be offered the first of next year require quite a complete history of the crops grown on the applicant's farm. Without actual records, it is very difficult for a farmer to remember the crops and yield from every field for a period of three or five years.

Even more important in the application for federal land bank loans or production credit loans are complete records of crop and livestock operations. Land bank loans are made on a basis of the productiveness of the farm and the ability of the operator. Neither has to be guessed at when a farm account book is available.

EXPLAIN PLAN FOR NEW COURT HOUSE

COMMITTEE ACTS TO REVEAL DETAILS TO PUBLIC

Ask for Cooperation On Proposition of Great Value to Citizens of the County

The following report has been made available by the committee recently appointed by the board of supervisors to work out plans for a new court house. The article, which follows, is self-explanatory:

The special committee appointed by the board of supervisors at its meeting held December 8th to investigate the proposal to secure a new court house under the emergency recovery program of the Civil Work Administration, has received so many inquiries and has heard of so many uninformed opinions regarding the project that an explanation of it may not be out of place.

This committee is composed of four members of the board and three non-members. This committee is not authorized to do anything more than investigate the proposition, get the facts, ascertain whether it can be presented to the CWA with any chance of acceptance and report its findings to the board with any recommendation it may see fit to make. The committee met immediately. It discovered that there was a fair prospect of securing the acceptance of the project. It was so advised by the state director and was requested to go ahead and make an application in proper form. It was represented to the committee that such a project, being for the construction of a permanent improvement, was the kind of a project most desired by the CWA.

The first obstacle to confront the committee was the matter of a site. The present site will not hold the new building without razing the old one. It was found that this would entail a cost of at least $3,000 with little or no salvage of material. In addition, it would mean that quarters would have to be secured for housing the county offices, furniture and other property with new insurance, and the expense of watchman and drayage all totaling at least $2,000. Thus an initial expense of at least $5,000 before work could commence. The county funds will not permit this. To build on the north end of the court house lot and leave the present building stand was found to be impractical, and furthermore would not be approved by the board. To obviate this difficulty the expedient was considered of securing the east lots fronting on State street between Mason and Clinton streets, and to effect this to offer to the City of Charlevoix the present site and building in exchange for the new site, the latter to be obtained by the city. The mutual advantages of this arrangement are apparent. The city would acquire a valuable building and grounds to house its fire and police departments, city offices and departments, and also a community room for its chamber of commerce, etc. On the other hand the county would save an expenditure of $5,000 in tearing down, be able to begin the project at once, obtain a more suitable site and save a possible loss of its records and other property. Beyond this is the larger and more important gain to the people of the county through the employment of labor, the sale of material and the possession of a building which would insure the safety of their valuable and irreplacable records in fire-proof vaults.

A variance in temperature of forty degrees in a period of twenty-four hours experienced here between Thursday morning and Friday morning was apparently in keeping with the unusual winter weather.

Thursday morning the temperature ranged anywhere from zero to 5 below in this city, while Friday morning a raise to 40 degrees above was accompanied by a thunder storm. Snow which fell during the night was a brownish color, filled with either sand or volcanic dust. Color of the landscape, the sky and waters of lakes was the most unusual hue ever seen here.

The phenominal occurence was the topic of considerable discussion and conjecture.

CORRESPONDENCE

NORWOOD

Adolph Seymour, who is in poor health, is spending the winter with his son on a farm near Flint.

Happy days are here again under CWA. Many smiling and jesting men are going to their work in a willing way throughout the country.

After several days of cold and stormy weather in our locality we are enjoying mild weather. The ground is covered with snow and inspires the Christmas spirit.

There will be a Christmas tree and program sponsored by the teacher and pupils of the Norwood school, on Thursday evening of this week at the M. E. church in Norwood.

Mrs. E. W. Publow has extended the hospitality of her home for a Christmas party to members of the Ladies' Aid society and friends on Wednesday afternoon, 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. I. L. Dice returned to her home last Thursday evening after spending two weeks at the bed side of her brother, I. N. Fluckey of South Bend, Ind., who passed away on Monday, December 4th. Mr. Fluckey was 73 years old, a retired business man and a champion fiddler who was often heard in old fashioned dance programs over the radio. He leaves his widow, three sons, one daughter, one brother, two sisters, all of South Bend, Ind., besides his sister, Mrs. Dice, of Charlevoix. When his death and funeral hour was announced over the radio at the Tribune station in South Bend, it was a shock to his many friends. Funeral services were held last Wednesday afternoon at the home, with Elmer Ward Cole, D. D., of the First Christian Church of South Bend officiating. Burial was in the family lot at Lakeville, Indiana.

CENTRAL LAKE

Merry Christmas to everybody.

It is estimated that Antrim county has better than 900 men at welfare and CWA work.

Thirty-six in attendance at Eastport Sunday school. Christmas exercises Saturday evening and New Year's dinner. All invited.

Bay View Sunday school will meet Sunday for the last time until spring. They will distribute Rev. Weaver's Christmas gifts at that time.

J. W. Morse, superintendent of Bay View Sunday school goes to Petoskey Thursday to get the Christmas presents that Rev. Weaver gives to Bay View, Creswell and Green River.

Floyd Smith of Grand View, was a caller at the James Dawson home at Bay View last Sunday. Miss Minerva McGuire holds her Christmas exercises at Grand View on Friday evening of this week.

Sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mrs. Wilson Clow, landlady of the Epicurean hotel here, and mother of Blaine Wilson, editor of the Torch. We hope she soon recovers. She was taken ill about the middle of last week.

James Lyon of Eastport, former supervisor of Torch Lake township several years and often chairman of the board, has been seriously ill with heart trouble, but Sunday was somewhat improved. Here's hoping for his complete recovery.

Will Farrell was a caller at the Will Knight home in Atwood, Sunday. The Knights apparently are marooned since the last snow storm. Mr. Farrell had considerable difficulty in getting there, through fields and on the side of the road.

O. R. Morse and C. W. Hastings are doing quite well at the potato and bean business here, considering the times. There appears to be a chance for a little government aid in the bean business. Cream has come down to 12 cents and that industry is about paralyzed.

Welford Davis, the rural carrier, is still going with his car, although roads this (Monday) morning are pretty icy. M-88 is not very slippery, most of the snow and ice being melted. The side roads are now the worst. There is not many drifts here, although bad further north.

Lambert DeVries and son, Lawrence, returned last week Tuesday from Holland, Mich., where Lawrence has been employed the last seven or eight weeks at the sugar beet factory as chemist. They said there was considerable snow down there and was snowing when they left.

Work is progressing rapidly on the Morrow hill where about 80 men are now employed, and on the Smith corner just north of there. The men are glad to work again, about 150 in this township. Garret Essenberg and George Gibbard are superintending the work.

The death of Fred Ford last week was a distinct loss to the neighborhood. Although 84 years of age, he was still spry and able to care for his cow, horse and chickens, as well as to make frequent trips to his farm at Bay View. He drove his own car. Funeral services were held at the home by Rev. Peggs of the Congregational church.

At a meeting of the various county school boards held last Wednesday, at which time it was explained that the federal CWA wanted to expend some money in improvement of schools, the Ironton school board put in an application to have the following projects completed: school painted exterior and interior; school grounds graded, landscaped and trees planted; extra room converted into a recreation room. Another project for Ironton is to have the road improved to the north beach and the terminal fixed so that it will be possible for cars to park and turn around.

Ben Bustard and Frank Lawton, who are still working on their wood job near East Jordan, recently cut a stub that proved to be the home of a family of eight flying squirrels. Fortunately none of them were injured and they at once took possession of a nearby tree. The boys placed the tip of the stub where they could transfer any stores it might contain to their new home.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Subject for Sunday, December 24, "Christian Science."

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Is the Universe, including Man, evolved by Atomic Force?" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, December 17.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Isa. 66:22): "For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p.256): "The finite must yield to the infinite. Advancing to a higher plane of action, thought rises from the material sense to the spiritual, from the scholastic to the inspirational, and from the mortal to the immortal. All things are created spiritually."

The Queerest Accidents of 1933

NEW FORD V-8 for 1934

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The New Ford V-8 for 1934 is now on display at the showrooms of Ford dealers. Surpassing even the great Ford of 1933 in economy, beauty and comfort, it is truly the car of this modern age—the culmination of thirty years Ford progress. It combines the proved performance of the V-8 cylinder engine with two important new features—Dual Carburetion and perfected Clear-vision Ventilation. See this car today and drive it at the first opportunity.

OUTSTANDING IMPROVEMENTS IN THE NEW FORD V-8

BETTER PERFORMANCE. Greater power, new speed, quicker acceleration, smoother performance, more miles per gallon especially at higher speeds, and quicker starting in cold weather—all these result from the new dual carburetor and dual intake manifold. New waterline thermostats enable the engine to warm up more quickly and to maintain an efficient operating temperature. Added engine refinements reduce oil consumption, further improve operating economy and reduce maintenance costs.

NEW VENTILATION SYSTEM permits clear vision, prevents drafts and provides desired amount of fresh air in any weather. Individual control for front and rear side windows. When ventilation is desired the window glass is raised to the top. Then the handle is given an additional half-turn. This slides the glass back horizontally to form a narrow slot. Through this slot air is drawn out by the forward motion of the car. This simple ventilation system maintains draft-free circulation, insures passenger comfort, prevents fogging windshield in cold or stormy weather. Both windshield and cowl ventilator can be opened to supply additional air needed for comfortable warm-weather driving.

DISTINCTIVE NEW APPEARANCE enhanced by the newly designed chromium-plated radiator shell and grille, new hood louvres, new hub caps. Interiors are attractive, with new tufted upholstery, new mouldings, new cove-type headlining, new instrument panel, new arm rests, new hardware. Swivel-type sun visors in De Luxe bodies prevent glare from front or side.

FENDERS IN COLOR. On De Luxe cars fenders are in color to harmonize with body colors—wheel colors optional. New enamel finish on all bodies and fenders has greater wearing quality and more enduring luster.

GREATER RIDING COMFORT results from increased spring flexibility. The spring leaves are newly designed for quieter and easier action. Shock absorbers are improved. Seat cushions are deeper, with new, softer springs. New type, individual bucket seats provide increased comfort for front-seat passengers in the Tudor Sedan. Adding to comfort is the new driving ease of the 15-to-1 steering gear ratio.

PRICES REMAIN LOW—Tudor Sedan, $535. Coupe, $515. Fordor Sedan, $585. De Luxe Tudor, $575. De Luxe Fordor, $625. De Luxe Coupe (5 windows), $555. De Luxe Coupe (3 windows), $555. De Luxe Roadster, $525. De Luxe Phaeton, $550. Cabriolet, $590. Victoria, $610. *(All prices f. o. b. FAITH IN BANKS

We are nearing the time when guarantee of bank deposits will be undertaken for the first time on a nation-wide scale. True that efforts in this direction by the various states have met with failure, but with Uncle Sam in the role of guarantor better results can be expected. There has been considerable opposition by the big bankers to this form of depositor insurance. No doubt many of the objections raised were well taken. But these are unusual times demanding unu-ual remedies.

Half of the banks of a decade ago have failed. Their failures brought tremendous losses to depositors and great loss to stockholders and managers. Confidence in our banking system was destroyed and billions of dollars went into hiding. Now the government is engaged in the task of getting closed banks open and restoring public faith in all banks. If guaranteed bank deposits will help to accomplish this purpose it is well worth trying. Once public faith has been restored the family sock will be disgorged of its contents and savings accounts will show a decided increase all over the country. There can be no full return to prosperity until this has been brought about.

PARTY APPLE CARTS

After maintaining a dignified silence for a long time Governor Comstock has evidently decided to get up on the party apple cart and do a little front seat driving himself. In a stirring rebuke to the "political snipers" he has made it plain that they can take their choice of either sitting ready in the boat or being cast overboard to the fishes. The governor should be heartily applauded for the stand he has taken. Political hitch-hikers have all but ruined party responsibility in recent years. They encompassed Republican defeat, and will prove equally dangerous to Demoeratic success if not properly suppressed. One wonders at the tolerance of the people. For years the nation has witnessed these parasites attaching themselves to the dominant party, preying upon it as long as a single advantage could be gained, casting it adrift the moment it was no longer available for their selfish purposes. That Governor Comstock has declared war on these hangers-on will be welcome news to the friends of good government. His example can well be followed by both parties.

CAMPBELL'S

LIQUOR vs. SCHOOLS

At least Governor Comstock was commendably frank in suggesting to the legislature that revenues derived from license and sale of hard liquor in Michigan be used for educational relief. Such a bold statement may be shocking to our aesthetic souls, but the governor in possession of the facts knows that our schools are in danger if they do not receive imediate relief. It is no time to debate this as a great moral issue. When the present stress has been alleviated it will be time enough to seek other ways out of our difficulties. Acute necessity often causes governments and men to do strange things.

GOVERNOR COMSTOCK HAS SIGNED LIQUOR BILL

State Will Operate Stores in Counties Where They Are Wanted

Under the final provisions of the state liquor bill, signed Friday by Gov. Comstock, the state will operate its own liquor stores in any county where they are wanted, the larger counties having one for each 75,000 population. Sales by the glass will be permitted in hotels and cafes only if such sales are sanctioned by the local legislative bodies.

Sale of beer and wine will continue as at present despite the increase in alcoholic content.

Control of the traffic will be placed in the hands of a commission of three members instead of the present 17 man group. Governor Comstock appointed the members of the executive committee of the present commission: Frank A. Picard of Saginaw; Dean Halford of Kalamazoo, and V. E. Gormley of Newberry.

In addition to the state stores, the commission is authorized to designate merchants who may dispense bottled liquors, this provision being designed particularly for smaller communities where operation of a state store would not be economical.

Communities have veto power in connection with the issuance of all licenses.

Revenues collected will be made available as loans to needy school districts and when these loans are repaid the money will be used to create a fund to finance the old age pension act.

SCHOOLS CLOSE FRIDAY FOR HOLIDAY VACATION

Hope ta Inaugurate CWA Impravements Durinp Vacatian

According to tentative plans outlined by the board of education, the vacation will extend over a two-week period, with classes resuming on Monday, January 8th. This decision is not positive, however.

It is hoped by the school board that improvement projects submitted for approval by the CWA will be inaugurated during the vacation period, and in this event, reopening of schools might hinge upon completion of the work. The program, which as yet has not been approved, includes re-shingling the junior high and south side ward building, installation of fire escapes, elevating balcony seats and extending stage at the gymnasium, improvements at the public library, construction of a skating rink, interior cleaning and painting, work on the athletic field, etc.

Up to the present time the school board has been able to meet current operating expenses and retire indebtedness incurred through issuance of scrip. How long finances will permit operation following the holidays is still a matter of conjecture. The school board has expressed by resolution its appreciation of the fine spirit of cooperation shown by members of the teaching staff, who have "carried on" with the officials through the uncertainties experienced so far.

TEXAS BANK OBSERVES FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

A. B. Scarbarough, Lacal Summer Resident, Is Active President

The sender is none other than A. B. Scarborough, well known Belvedere Club member and summer resident, who is the organizer, first cashier and present active president of the banking institution mentioned. The statement printed in the advertisement shows the hank to have resources of $1.302.805.08, that it has the same name, is located on the same corner in the same building in which it was founded.

In these days of financial uncertainty a 50-year record in which Mr. Scarborough has had a prominent part is worthy of congratulation and we do not hesitate to extend ours.

The Odd Fellows have been winners in two out of the three years the contests have been held.

Unusually large kills of bucks were made in the public hunting ground areas surrounding the various standard game refuges.

The 1933 deer season justified its action in reopening seven counties to hunting, the department believes. Many residents of these counties had feared thnt a single open season would wipe out the deer population, but such did not prove to be the case.

Conservation officers who have studied the situation, report the kills much larger in these counties than they had anticipated and there seemed to be no appreciable shortage of bucks in the woods on the last day of the season.

CHARLEVOIX CO. SOLON AGAINST LIQUOR BILL

An article in the Lansing State Journal showing how the various members of the House of Representatives voted on the recently enacted liquor bill, reveals that D. D. Tibbits, representative of the Charlevoix-Leelanau district, was among the Republicans voting against the bill. In fact, Rep. Tibbits, together with Rep. Callaghan of Reed City, made an unsuccessful attempt to block its passage even after the final vote had been taken.

CWA PLANS TO AID JOBLESS TEACHERS

If Interest Warrants Night Classes May Be Provided Here

Charlevoix has been asked to assist in plans to provide not only employment for jobless teachers, but also to aid in the work of advancing vocational education, vocational rehabilitation, opening of closed rural schools, etc.

Supt. O. P. North has announced that in an effort to cooperate with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in this plan, night school classes will be started in Charlevoix after the holidays in case there is sufficient demand. Arrangements can be made with the Civil Works Administration for the employment of teachers or other qualified persons to teach classes for adults. Subjects suggested for these classes by the state department are literature, manual arts, commercial work, dramatics, physical education and others.

It will first be necessary to find people to act as teachers. Anyone interested should get in touch with the school at once. Then enrollment will take place for the classes or activities and, if ten or more join a class, the plan will be submitted to Lansing for approval.

The local school board has consented to give the use of the building, heat and light necessary in case the interest justifies it.

CLOVERLAND MEN GET BEST POTATO YIELDS

Memberships in 300 Bushel Club Nearly All in Upper Peninsula

Upper peninsula potato growers qualified for the major share of the places in Michigan's 300 bushel potato club in a year when the membership was lower than usual but when the average yield of the members was the second highest since the club started.

Qualification for membership in the club is the production of 300 bushels or more of potatoes per acre on five or more acres. Seventeen men in Cloverland made the grade this year while only four below the Straits grew the requisite number of bushels. Extreme drought in the state's potato sections affected the yields.

All but one of the 21 members fall plowed their potato ground, and most of the growers preferred to kill weeds by dragging or disking rather than by the use of the cultivator after the plants were up.

The value of planting plenty of seed was again proved. An average of 23 bushels of potatoes cut in large pieces was planted by club members. Planting dates were delayed by wet weather but most of the crop was in the ground by June 2. Close spacing of seed in the row was another universal practice.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

For the first 11 months of 1932, a total of 1,167 applications were refused and 5,196 licenses were revoked or suspended after being issued. In 1933 applicants were required to submit to a more thorough examination with the result that for the first 11 months of the present year 5,620 applications were rejected while it was necessary to revoke but 1,902 licenses.

The value of Michigan's motor vehicle certificate of title law is shown by the experience of automobile owners in Illinois and Washington. The two states named have title laws, similar to Michigan's, which become effective January 1.

In both states are many vehicles which previously were registered in Michigan and authorities are demanding that they be furnished Michigan certificates of title in such cases before the Illinois or Washington titles are issued.

The house of representatives last week gave its approval to a bill intended to aid the small share-holder in building and loan companies. The bill is now under consideration by the senate.

The bill provides that in instances where the company is operated under the 30-day notice withdrawal order, the maximum that can be withdrawn by any one shareholder at one time is $1,000. At the present time the share-holder may receive 50 per cent of the value of his shares. If the bill is enacted into law, share-holders owning less than $100 worth of shares, may be paid in full.

The penalty for driving improperly registered motor vehicles or driving without proper licenses, is increased greatly under the new financial responsibility law. Before this law became effective, nominal fines were levied in most sections of the state. Since October 17, seven persons have been found guilty of driving without proper licenses and eight for driving improperly registered vehicles. And in each case the persons have been placed under the provisions of the new law, which requires proof of financial responsibility be furnished the department of state.

Two good household remedies come from the Dutch East Indies. Blueberry extract is effectively used as a gargle, and the juice of the berries is used much as we use lemonade in the treatment of colds. Hot rice water is the Dutch cure for intestinal disorders.

Mary's father died of tuberculosis and she dropped out of school to go to work. Two years later she was stricken.

Tuberculosis sanatoriums educate as well as cure. Mary knows now that her young father might have been saved from death.

She knows, too, that her own case would have been found in its early stage had the high school survey not passed her by.

Prepared to Save Lives

One of the most valuable services given to the American public by the Red Cross is through its Life Saving and First Aid courses. Virtually all of the life guards at beaches and pools in the nation are Red Cross life savers. Nearly every industry in America supports the First Aid work of the Red Cross because it annually saves lives of thousands of injured persons. These courses are taught by Red Cross experts in both lines. Last year 66,354 certificates were issued to persons completing the First Aid course and 73,795 certificates for completing Life Saving instruction.

Life didn't play ball with this little fellow. He wanted to play, but somehow, things just didn't work out, and now he lies in his cot in a Michigan sanatorium fighting the disease that keeps him on his back.

The happiest work done by tuberculosis Christmas seals is child health protection, saving Michigan children from a sanatorium cot and no chance to play.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Important Cooperative District Meeting Held in Boyne City

Without a doubt the recent meeting held in the Boyne City post office Thursday, December 14, for cooperative organizations within the district was one of the most interesting and instructive thus far held.

The newly organized farm credit orgunizations were discussed by C. L. Nash and Arthur Howland, both from the economics department of the Michigan State college. Mr. Howland presented the facts concerning the new co-operative bank which has been organized at St. Paul and which will serve co-operative organizations in the seventh district of which Michigan is a member. This bank can loan to co-operative companies up to 60 per cent of their real estate and equipment which means that when they need seasonal credit, it can be obtained from this gigantic bank.

C. L. Nash ably discussed the new production credit corporation whose headquarters likewise is at St. Paul and whose district headquarters will be at Gaylord. Charlevoix county will belong to this district which comprises ten counties. This corporation will handle short time credit for individual farmers. Each farmer will buy stock up to five per cent of his loan and in this way, will be a co-operator in the bank. This corporation will be one for farmers to contact for loans of various types. This corporation will be a permanent feature for agricultural credit and takes the place of the emergency credit organizations established during the last two years.

It can be readily seen now that farmers can, through their co-operative banks, handle their own credit from now on at a reasonable rate of interest. To present a clear picture of the credit situation we now have at St. Paul, four distinct credit corporations as follows: Federal Land Bank, Intermediate to Credit Corporation, Production Credit Corporation and Co-operative Bank. Thus any individual desiring credit can obtain such by contacting the proper credit corporation. This farm organization has been set up in each one of the twelve Federal Reserve districts.

From time to time more information will be published along these lines.

AT THE MOVIES

Judith Allen, screen leading woman, who came from obscurity to win the lead in Cecil B. DeMille's "This Day and Age" for her first motion picture appearance, to be followed next by the lead opposite Bing Crosby in "Too Much Harmony," will be seen in her third screen role when Paramount's "Hell and High Water" comes on Saturday and Sunday to the Palace theatre.

The picture marks the initial producing and directing effort of Paramount's veteran writing team, Wm. Slavens McNutt and Grover Jones. Richard Arlen is the male lead with Charlie Grapewin, Sir Guy Standing and the Japanese actor, Matsui, featured.

ket for farm and home mortgages. Hemmed in by state and federal restrictions they have become little more than repositories for quick moving funds and clearance centers for credit items. Something must be provided in their place if America is to continue a nation of home owners. That is why the mutual savings bank plan will be welcomed in this state as elsewhere.

ANOTHER TAX—

Governor Comstock proposes n constitutional amendment permitting an income tax. There are many reasonable arguments that can be advanced in favor of n graduated gross income tax, but it is unlikely the people will vote such a change until they are satisfied that it is not just another tax, but a substitution for some of the taxes we already have. A gross income tax would compel many thousands of people to contribute to the cost of government who are now avoiding taxation. It would place millions of dollars of intangibles on the tax rolls, which is to be desired. Governor Comstock errs when he does not specifically state that in advent of an income tax other taxes in proportion would be eliminated. When he fails to do this the public gains the impression that it is just another attempt to gouge more money out of the taxpayers. Another fault with all new tax proposals, nothing is said about lowering the cost of government. That is a language the tax spenders never seem able to learn. No one denies that our present tax system needs revision—needs to be made more equitable. Why not accept the plain truth? There will be no granting of new taxes by the people until we have a guarantee of less waste in government—a sinner policy of public expenditures.

PROGRESSIVE WISCONSIN

In Wisconsin the state banking commission has reduced the small loan rate from three and one-half cents per month to one and one-fourth cents per month. This latter figure makes an annual rate of 15 per cent which most people think is ample for the traffic. It's true that there is a lot of risk in the small loan business but the companies engaged in it seem to prosper amazingly. Michigan went through this small loan question at the last session of the legislature. The legislature passed a bill reducing the rate, just as the Wisconsin commission did, but Governor Comstock vetoed it and the legislators were unable to muster enough votes to pass the bill over his veto. The small loan bill was the source of more graft than any other legislative matter that came before the legislature and one of the chief sources of criticism of Governor Comstock's administration. — Tom Conlin in the Crystal Falls Diamond Drill.

ARE YOU WILLING?

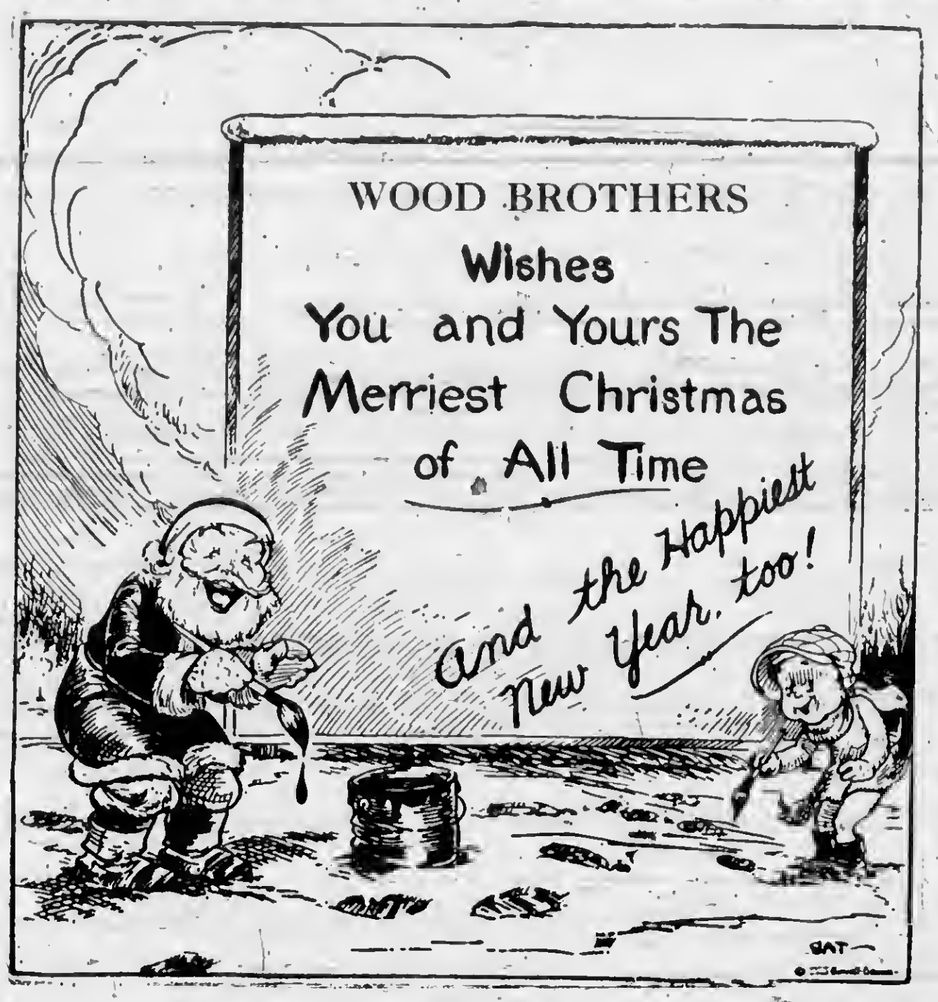
Constantly we are clamoring for reduced costs of government. It has become a sort of fetish with us. Perhaps it is in this way that we put salve on the wounds made raw by excessive taxation. How bad do we want lowered cost of government? How many of our ideas of government are we willing to scrap to bring this about? How far will we go in support of a candidate for governor who will adopt as his platform a sensible elimination of every outmoded branch of government—who, by a process of consolidation, will be able to accomplish the very thing we have craved for so long. The legislative council could assist in this work. A governor and legislature to carry out their recommendations would be necessary. Remember that in order to bring this about many of your pet theories of government would have to be discarded without regret. Such a change is well worth the effort and sacrifice. Are you willing to walk on the long hard road?

HUMAN VALUES

The most serious indictment that can be brought against our present civilization is that it has placed production above humanity, material wealth above manhood. We have frequently toiled to increase our material resources at whatever cost to human life. "There is," said John Ruskin, "no wealth but life—life including all its powers of joy, of love, of admiration. That country is richest which nourishes the greatest number of noble and happy human beings; that man is richest who has the widest helpful influence over the lives of others."

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

"This new generation of ours stands ready to help us. They may not be as ready as were their fathers and mothers to accept the outward requirements or even many of the ancient observances of the several churches, yet I truly believe that these same churches can find in them a stronger support for the fundamentals of social betterment than many of the older generation are willing to concede." — President Franklin D. Roosevelt.



TOO MUCH MONEY

Opposition to Governor Comstock's thirty-million-dollar public works building program has already developed in the legislature. The governor is of the opinion that as long as the money is going to be spent anyway, Michigan, which is one of the largest contributors to the federal treasury, should step in and get its share of the funds that are being passed out as a stimulus to recovery. Many of the solons believe that the amount asked is too large—that an institutional building program of that magnitude would entail an altogether too heavy maintenance load for the taxpayers later on. It is true, as the governor says, that the money is going to be distributed—but can we afford to claim our full share? It is a question that should be decided only after careful deliberation. Recovery is definitely on the way and good business judgment should warn us not to assume an extra dollar of obligations that must be cared for in the future. Issues of this kind must be met with an open mind and dealt with in accordance with the best interests of the state.

A GOOD INVESTMENT

Contemplating the number of deaths that are constantly recurring in every community, we just have this thought (in these tough times): "What a wonderful help is life insurance to the home when some one slips away." That one or two or three thousand dollars comes as a godsend when a loved one passes away. Never could insurance money become more gratefully received than then.

What a great blessing it would be if the older generation, many of whom are passing beyond, had had the same faith in life insurance that prevails now among thoughtful people! The moral would seem to be that, regardless of a few minor failures among stock companies, it is the wisest possible thing to consider life insurance as a part of one's budget—no matter how tight the times. —Richard T. Baldwin in the Northville Record.

THE REMEDY

"It has not been the products of the small, one-family farms that created existing surpluses," says the Omaha Journal-Stockman. "It has been the production of bonanza farmers, commercial farmers with no interest in the land beyond the crops the soil will produce. Insistence on reduced production by these wholesale farmers may be logical and wise. Farming was never meant to be a purely commercial business and the sooner this is realized, the sooner agricultural conditions are likely to improve."

YOUNG DEMAND ACTION

"This younger generation is not satisfied with the exposure of those in high places who seek to line their own nests with other people's money, to cheat their government of its just dues or to break the spirit of the law while observing its legalistic letter. This new generation seeks action — action by collective government and by individual education, toward the ending of practices such as these."— President Roosevelt.

THE HAPPIER WAY

It would help get rid of the depression if we could devote the brief pre-Christmas season to thoughts of generous good will rather than to contemplating the hobgoblins of economic fear. When a fellow gets to figuring out what he can do to lighten the burden of the other fellow and what he can add to the good cheer of his soul, he puts elasticity and courage into his own footsteps. The Christmas season is a favorable time to sweep aside gloomy or ugly thoughts, and get in tune to coax the world back to mutually helpful relationships.—Wayne (Neb.) Herald.

DEATH ON THE HUNT

Death is stalking Michigan this Christmas.

Despite all the fifty per cent decrease in the death rate for tuberculosis can do to make this a happier Christmas for many families; despite all the work of health education done in the past and being done now by the Michigan Tuberculosis association, the menace from this disease is daily increasing.

In many counties the tax-supported tuberculosis sanatoriums have been completely broken down and in many others, they are in the process of doing so. Part of this is due to the lack of state aid owing to them from past years. Part of it is due to the depression and the false reasoning that health agencies may be cut out to save some other section of the budget.

As a result, Michigan's laws in regard to the care of the tuberculous are daily being broken. Men and women are being taken from sanatorium beds that can no longer be "afforded" and sent back to their communities, to increase and further spread their own sickness.

No individual, no community, can be safe from this danger until all are safe. Tuberculosis is easy to pass on, but hard to discover. The public sanatorium must stay open!

It is part of the work of the Michigan Tuberculosis association, financed by the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals, to help make successful the health measures proposed by far-seeing legislators in state and county. It is part of the association's work to use all of its influence in helping to keep sanatoriums open, to check the spread of tuberculosis in every community. It is part of the battle with Death.

HOME FINANCING

Establishment of a mutual savings bank system, moulded closely after a similar system now in operation in many eastern states, is being proposed for Michigan. The plan should have the active support of our lawmakers. As outlined in the Donnelly bill, which will be introduced in the special session of the legislature on law revision early in the year, these mutual savings banks are not designed to take the place of our present banks, but to provide a steady supply of long-time capital for home and farm financing. Through banks of this kind the savings of a community is made available for financing new homes, spreading the cost over a sufficient length of time to permit of more extensive home building. Right now our banks are cleaning out their mortgage portfolios as rapidly as possible. It will be a long time before they will furnish a market for farm and home mortgages.

The above arrangement would not necessitate the borrowing of money by the city or the issuance of bonds. Its legal department can attend to this feature. The cost of securing the new site is not large and is more than compensated by the acquisition of the present building. Were it not for the necessity of tearing down, the county could not afford to agree to any such exchange. That is apparent to anyone.

It is to be borne in mind that this entire proposition is subject to the approval of the board of supervisors. It is a tentative proposition only.

The people undoubtedly are interested in knowing what type or character of a building the committee is considering. Here again the committee has only the right to suggest and propose. It has agreed upon one thing, and that is, that the building should be of a distinctive and modern type, suitable and appropriate to a county which prides itself on its natural beauties. The old conventional type of court house with straight lines, ornamental pillars and waste space is not in favor with the committee. Instead it favors the office type with all space utilized to the best advantage, at the same time having a distinctive exterior. Our own native granite rock available in unlimited quantities at a low cost is being considered instead of brick. The figure which the committee is considering as the total cost is $90,000. This cost when divided 30-70 between cost of material and labor makes a project which the CWA will look upon with favor and make the cost to the county very light.

A project of this kind requires for its successful accomplishment the full accord and cooperation of the people. The committee will be glad to give any information to persons inquiring and also will welcome suggestions and advice.

NOTICE!

DISABLED FISH BOAT TOWED TO PORT HERE

Local Craft Marooned Several Days at Fox Island Grounds

The gasoline fish tug "Panther," marooned several days at the Fox Island whitefish grounds with disabled machinery, was towed to this harbor Saturday noon by local coast guards who had been notified of the craft's plight by another fish boat returning from Fox Island.

The "Panther" is owned by Pete Olson and its crew numbered two others, William Gibson and George Cornelius. The craft, held at anchor and unable to shift position with changing winds, was severely battered by the heavy storm of Thursday and Friday, although not seriously damaged.

Members of the crew suffered no ill effects from their experience.

POLAR BEARS TO OPEN SEASON SCHED FRIDAY

Play Harbor Springs Merchants at High School Gymnasium

Making their first appearance of the 1933-34 basketball season, the Polar Bears, Charlevoix's independent court aggregation, will meet the strong Harbor Springs Merchants at the high school gymnasium Friday evening, December 22nd.

The program calls for a double bill. The second squad will open the evening's entertainment at 7:15 and the main game will be called at 8:15 sharp.

The Polar Bears expect to have one of the strongest teams since organization several years ago on the court this season. Along with Beaudoin, Ikens, Supernaw, Davenport and Vic Smith, veterans of several years, have been added Winfield Kirby and Joe Smith, 1933 high school stars. Their presence has added greatly to the strength of the team. While Friday night's starting line-up has not been announced, Beaudoin, Ikens, Kirby and Davenport are forward material, Supernaw will likely play at center and Vic Smith and Joe Smith at guards.

In the Harbor Merchants, the Polar Bear management has picked one of Northern Michigan's strongest independent organizations for the initial contest. The Harbor line-up includes a group of former high school stars who last year went places in basketball competition.

For the next home engagement, Manager Gordon Todd has announced scheduling the regular college squad from Olivet, one of the strongest teams in the M. I. A. A. association. The contest will be played here the evening of Thursday, December 28th.

TRAIN FERRY CARRYING CARS AT STRAITS

Four Round Trips Each Day Available for Autoists

Four round trips daily is the schedule for winter ferry service across the Straits of Mackinac on the steamer "Chief Wawatam," beginning December 15th.

The schedule on eastern standard time follows:

Northbound, leaves Mackinaw City, 5 a. m., 9 a. m., 1 p. m., and 6 p. m.

Southbound, leaves St. Ignace 6:30 a. m., 10:30 a. m., 3 p. m. and 7:45 p. m.

The "Chief Wawatam" is the railroad car ferry owned and operated by the Mackinaw Transportation Co. During the winter season when straits navigation is closed and the harbors are filled with ice, the state highway department docks its ferry boats and the "Chief Wawatam" takes over the state ferry transportation under contract.

The automobile fee will continue the same as on the state ferries. The passenger fee will be 60 cents for adults and 30 cents for children from 5 to 12 years old. The driver of an automobile will be required to pay the 60 cent fee also.

"His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."—Isa. 9:6.

We will have another "joy month" service next Sunday. The subject will be: "Following Our Star." There will be a little change in the regular order of service to include a Christmas story for the children by Mrs. Parker. An opportunity will be given the children to leave if they do not care to remain through the remainder of the service. Mrs. Parker also promises another story for Sunday, December 31, if enough children wish to remain. The story Mrs. Parker will tell will be the familiar one entitled, "When the Chimes Rang."

The young people's choir and the church school will present the pageant, "The Night of the Star," Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Because of this program there will be no other services after the morning service. At 8 o'clock in the evening the junior church will gather at the church and from there will go to different points in the city to sing carols. This plan that was adopted some time back is proving very popular with the young people.

PROFIT FROM USE OF BETTER BULLS

Also From Elimination of Unprofitable Cows.

(Colorado College Extension Service.)

Colorado dairymen are now receiving an added income of $1,750,000 annually as the result of an average increased production of 30 pounds of butterfat per cow over five years ago.

This increase is the direct and indirect result of improved dairy practices, and dairy-herd-improvement work by farmers and dairymen throughout the state. Only persistent effort in furthering better dairy practices through cow-testing associations and the selection of bulls for herd sires from cows of known high production could accomplish these results.

Not more dairy cattle, but the elimination of unprofitable cows, and a further increase in butterfat production per cow should be the immediate objectives of Colorado dairymen.

This increase in production can be traced in large measure to the cooperative efforts of members of herd-improvement associations in culling out low-producing cows, in making available registered bulls from tested dams and sires, and to better feeding methods used in a large number of herds.

The widespread use of better bulls has probably had more influence on this increased production per cow than any other factor. By careful selection of herd sires Colorado dairymen can do much toward increasing this production which should be much higher to assure a profit to the average dairyman in the state. It is the herd that produces more than the average that shows a profit.

For the dairyman who intends to continue milking cows, it will pay to invest in a good bull calf for his future herd sire now while prices are exceptionally low.

Alfalfa Hay and Silage Keep Down Dairy Costs

Plenty of alfalfa hay and good silage gives ample feed insurance to the dairy farmer. Even without grain he can keep down dairy costs with the two feeds. Numerous tests show this to be true. Many cows have kept butterfat production above the pound-a-day mark on this ration in carefully conducted experiments. Of course adding concentrates will give a slightly higher production and perhaps a little less costly one. But a well-filled silo and the high-up view of good alfalfa keep worry from the farmer even if his granaries go empty—he can go on producing milk and keep his cows fit just the same. The reason so many farmers do not have these inexpensive but nutritious feeds to carry them over the lean spots before grass is ready in spring and also during the dry spells of summer, is because they have failed to plan far enough ahead and this is the time of year that such planning must be done. First of all, plenty of corn and alfalfa must be grown to provide this feed insurance.—Nebraska Farmer.

PENSION COLLECTIONS AWAIT REGISTRATION

Work Progressing But Not Completed In Several Townships

While payment of the old age pension head tax may now be made with the county treasurer, no county-wide set-up for collection of the tax has been made as yet, according to County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow.

The work of registration has not been completed in many of the townships of Charlevoix county and, it is understood, no definite machinery for collection of the tax will be made until this work is completed. The tax will be collected by the treasurers of each township as well as designated places to be provided in the cities and villages, it is understood. Township treasurers will be provided with receipt books.

Only one payment, that at the county treasurer's office here, has been made up to the present time.

Since then he had been continuously active in its work, serving 12 years as Sunday school superintendent, as a member of the Board of Deacons and Trustees. Because of ill health he resigned from the board of trustees in 1931 and from the board of deacons in 1933. The church, to show its appreciation for his many years of valuable service, unanimously elected him as honorary member of these two groups.

SURVEY OF RURAL HOUSING STARTED

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY ONE OF EIGHT INCLUDED

Civil Works Administration Sponsors Plan to Seek Information About Rural Conditions

Charlevoix county has been selected as one of eight counties in Michigan to have a complete rural housing survey made as part of the federal department's latest effort to secure first hand information on actual farm conditions.

The federal department is particularly interested in having this information on farm houses because it is felt that farm homes should certainly receive as much consideration as city homes on any future program developed.

This is being done as a civil works project using unemployed home economics trained women or other professional women. Similar studies are being made on housing conditions in the towns and cities to gather information that is not available from the census and on which to base plans for possible future civil works or public works projects.

The staff to handle the survey for this county has been organized and has already started activity. Miss Gladys Lahym, Traverse City, a graduate of M. S. C., and with considerable experience, is the field supervisor and has her office in the Boyne City postoffice. Carl Rothenberger, a graduate of the University of Detroit, is the engineer, Miss Helen Rovick, stenographer. Following is the field staff and the townships assigned: Stella Szepelak, Boyne Valley; Maureen Jenkins, Eveline; Mable Bird, Hayes; Martha Reidel, Wilson; Martha Wagbo, South Arm; Leva Newville, Hudson.

While this is not exactly an extension project, being handled entirely on civil works, it is directed by the home economics extension department at the college, cooperating with B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent.

One of the unemployed women who has been put to work on this project will call on you within the next four weeks. We hope that you will cooperate in securing this information as rapidly as possible because their time is very limited.

REGISTRATION UNEMPLOYED IS RESUMED

New Schedule of Time for Registration Set Up in County

Registration of unemployed at the several offices of the National Re-Employment Service in Charlevoix county was resumed again Wednesday after a halt of several days.

According to Warren Davis, county re-employment director, a new schedule of registration for the county has been adopted for the future. Registration from now on will be conducted at Charlevoix on Mondays; at Boyne City on Tuesdays and Wednesdays; at Boyne Falls on Thursdays, and at East Jordan on Fridays and Saturdays.

The local office has been transferred from the information bureau to the Benjamin Brown building across the street. Those desiring to register for employment are requested to follow the above outlined schedule.

MICHAEL KOWALSKI, OLDEST COUNTY PIONEER, DIED FRIDAY

Charlevoix county lost its oldest resident Friday night in the death of Michael Kowalski, age 104 years, who passed away at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper of Eveline township, with whom he had been making his home many years.

Mr. Kowalski was one of this county's earliest pioneers. He settled on a homestead in Eveline township in 1867, coming here from Wisconsin at the close of the Civil war. He was a native of Germany. He migrated to this country after serving compulsory service in the Kaiser's army, and immediately joined the Union forces in the Civil war. Mr. Kowalski had been bed-ridden many years as the result of an automobile accident.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the Cooper home with military rites conducted by the East Jordan American Legion post.

BARNARD COUPLE OBSERVE 50TH WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shapton Renewed Vows at Ceremony Xmas Day

Mr. and Mrs. William Shapton, long time residents of the Barnard district, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Christmas day at the home of their son, Earl, on Hurlbut avenue, this city.

An impressive ceremony, in which the couple renewed their marriage vows of fifty yenrs ago, was performed by Rev. Mayhew of Mt. Pleasant, who also officiated at their silver wedding twenty-five years ago. The bride was dressed again in green and carried a beautiful, large boquet of roses.

Among the guests present were two who attended the marriage fifty years ago. Those from out-of-town were their daughter, Mrs. Maude Couse of Chicago, and Rev. and Mrs. Mayhew of Mt. Pleasant. Their other children, Mrs. George Block, Earl, Louis and Lee, all of this city, were present, also their eight grandchildren.

CHURCH PROGRAM ENJOYED SUNDAY

SPECIAL FEATURES GIVEN ON CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Pageant of Nativity, Recitations and Special Music Beautiful Features of Observance

Christmas was fittingly observed at the Congregational church with activities throughout the day appropriate to the season.

At the morning church service the pastor spoke on "Following Our Star," and Mrs. Parker told the children Alden's Christmas story, "Why the Chimes Rang." The choir sang "Softly Thro' the Night" (Harris) and "The Birthday of a King" (Neidlinger).

At five o'clock the church school and young people's choir presented "The Night of the Star," a beautiful pageant of the Nativity. The pastor read the connecting scripture and the characters were taken as follows:

Virginia Dean, Lillian King and Ardis Usher recited "We Too Would Bring Our Treasures" and Jean Campbell gave a postlude recitation entitled, "The Angel of the Star."

Special music numbers were the antiphonal singing by the choir and Watchman; "Hark, The Herald Angels Sing", by the Angelic Host; "Sleep My Little Jesus" by Mary; "We Three Kings of Orient Are" by the Wisemen; "Once Again We Celebrate the Christmas Time" by the juniors; "Away in a Manger" by the primary children; and "O Come All Ye Faithful," cathedral candlebearers' processional by the Misses Mary Helen Fochtman, Julia Glados, Jean Graves, Clara Kelderhouse, Ruth Krueger, Helen Loskott, Janet Livingston, Marie Novak, Esther O'Neil, Shirley Partridge, Jean Stelter and Jane Stelter.

MIN-EVA RESTAURANT NOW IN NEW QUARTERS

Moved Late Last Week to Boal Building, Corner Bridge-Clinton

The Min-Eva restaurant, located for many years in the Powers building opposite the postoffice, is now operating in the Boal building, corner Bridge and Clinton streets.

The transfer was made the latter part of last week following completion of alterations and decoration of the new quarters. The new location should prove even more satisfactory in view of the larger floor space and accommodations available.

CIVIL WORKS PROGRAM IS EXTENDED

MANY NEW AND IMPORTANT PROJECTS ARE APPROVED AND WORK STARTED THROUGHOUT COUNTY

THIRTY-ONE SCHOOL PRDJECTS APPROVED

Bath House for Charlevoix on Lake Michigan Beach, 5 Miles Additional on Bellaire Pole Line, Municipal Skating Rink Included in Program — New Appointments Made

A decided change in the nature of CWA work in the county is under way this week. A large number of men are being shifted from highway projects which are being hampered by adverse weather conditions, to school and construction jobs that provide a greater portion of inside work.

A county-wide program of school improvements, including both rural and city schools has received local and state CWA approval. The total allowance for this type of work is estimated at $38,309.23 and will require a total of 256 men. The program includes 31 schools out of the 38 in the county.

Eight of these jobs were under way Tuesday morning and the others are being started as soon as transfer of men can be accomplished. The type of improvements allowed are mostly repairs, minor alterations and interior decoration of school buildings. In Charlevoix, whose projects total $9,315.00, the improvements include re-shingling the junior high and south side ward buildings, interior decoration, improvements in library, gymnasium, etc. Rural schools in the western portion of the county whose projects were grouped with the Charlevoix project, have been allotted $9,854.65. Boyne City's program totals $10,990.00 and the rural schools of that district, $3,718.30. The balance of the $38,309.23 total is divided among other schools.

Supervision of the vast school program is under D. T. McHugh, who has been appointed supervisor of Civil Works Sanitation program, under which head the school projects are included.

Another new project started this week of especial interest to local residents is a bath house to be constructed on the Lake Michigan bathing beach inside the circular driveway. The structure, estimated to cost $5,700.00, will be 24x64 feet frame veneered with quarry stone. It will contain 16 lockers, toilets, shower baths and concession space. Floors will be of concrete, there will be a concrete porch 16x64 and a concrete walk to the water's edge. Sixteen men have so far been allotted to the project under the supervision of William Higman, foreman.

Another project approved is an additional 5-mile extension on the power line between Charlevoix and Bellaire. Crews already at work on this project will continue. The council Monday night authorized purchase of material necessary for the extension. The city expense for material on the five miles is estimated at $700.

Many highway projects are being continued with reduced forces, and storm sewer projects already under way are being continued unchecked. Many other projects are under way throughout the county.

Additional men are being employed this week through a new program known as the Civil Works Service, financed by the CWA and designed to replace the former work relief. The municipal skating rink at the school grounds and snow removal from the city streets come under the Civil Works service.

The work of bringing payrolls up to date is progressing as fast as possible. Last Saturday and Sunday checks were issued for almost all divisions of work up to December 18. The payroll for last week is expected to be completed shortly.

An addition to the personnel of the Civil Works committee was made recently with the appointment of William E. Parmelee as county purchasing agent for CWA projects. Material necessary for the various projects will be procured under Mr. Parmelee's direction.

STORM POSTPONES CAROLS CONCERT

Blizzard Tuesday Prevents Presentation of Christmas Celebration

No one will be surprised that the severe storm last Tuesday and Tuesday evening prevented the presentation at the Methodist church of the beautiful Christmas carols service, as previously announced.

The leaders met at 4-o'clock and decided that such action was necessary. This was in time to notify those coming from Petoskey. This, however, has given opportunity for further rehearsals and more perfect preparation. The change in date will not materially change the details of the service. Singers from each church in the city are included, a service much appreciated by those in charge.

Among the French, English and German carols one was announced as Catalan and some have asked the meaning of this term. It refers to the Catalan people and language of Catalonia, a large province of Spain, important in the middle ages. The processional will be "Hark, the Herald Angels," and the recessional, "Oh, Come All Ye Faithful." One of Mrs. Poquette's violin solos will be "Ave Maria."

The time is set for 4:30 sharp next Sunday.

SCHOOL AID BILL IS PASSED LEGISLATURE

Provides Loan to Schools Facing Financial Emergencies

The Michigan legislature in passing the school aid bill in 11 hours clearly indicated that they appreciated the school problem.

A sum of $15,000,000 is appropriated as a special emergency fund to be distributed as advances against allocations under the provisions of the Thatcher-Sias act. The bill places, into this special emergency fund, all excess revenues from retail sales tax above $31,700,000 and the expenses of administration; revenues from Act No. 8 of the Public Acts of the extra session of 1933 with the exception of appropriations of $2,000 to the legislative council, $100,000 to the department of public safety, and $1,000,000 for a revolving fund; and finally, a sum of not to exceed $15,000,000 from the general fund of the state not otherwise appropriated.

Distribution of the revenue will be made first to school districts most in need of financial aid as advances against sums which they would receive under the provisions of the Thatcher-Sias act.

POLAR BEARS WIN OPENING CONTEST

WON DOUBLE BILL FROM HARBOR SPRINGS MERCHANTS

Play Olivet College Comets, 1932 M. I. A. A. Champions on Local Court Thursday Night

The Charlevoix Polar Bears inaugurated their 1933-34 basketball season last Friday night at the high school gymnasium with a double victory over first and second teams of the Harbor Springs Merchants.

The main contest was an excellent exhibition of basketball. Play was clean, fast and marked by the strong defense of the two teams. The Polar Bears were victors due mainly to the fact that more of their shots found the hoop rather than that they had more opportunities.

The final count of 19 to 16 indicates closeness of the contest. The Polar Bears led 8 and 5 at the quarter. The score was tied 11 to 11 at the half and 14-all at the close of the third period. Beaudoin scored a goal and free toss and Supernaw a goal to give the Bears a 5 and 2 advantage in the final quarter.

Beaudoin led the Bears with 8 points. Supernaw scored 6, Kirby and Vic Smith 2 each and Joe Smith 1. Booth led the visitors with 8. Hugh Mayne refereed the game satisfactorily.

The Polar Bear reserves defeated the Merchant reserves 15 and 9 in the preliminary.

College Team Here Thursday

The Polar Bears step into fast company Thursday night at the local gym when they meet the Olivet College Comets, 1932 M. I. A. A. basketball champions and runners-up last year. The visiting team boasts some stellar players in Norm Kent, captain, who last year rated first place on the coaches' all-association honor five; John Schultz, center, Morris Halvery and Stan Arthur, guards, and Frank Parsons, Greenville youth.

Each year Olivet makes a Christmas vacation basketball expedition, but this is the first time the Comets have toured Western Michigan. The contest will be called at 8:15 following a preliminary contest.

MORE TIME GRANTED FOR AUTO LICENSES

Deadline for 1934 Plates Is Extended Until March 1

Extension of the deadline for the purchase of 1934 license plates until March 1 was announced Friday by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald.

He said that due to the present "excessive" cost of motor vehicle plates many thousands of owners will be unable to purchase the permits before January 1. He is authorized by statute to extend the deadline until March 1.

On Dec. 1 of this year there were 57,454 fewer vehicles registered than in 1932, representing a loss in revenue of $1,142,486.

Fitzgerald granted motorists the same extension last year after the legislature had authorized him to do so.

MAKE APPLICATION FOR COURT HOUSE

PLAN PRESENTED TUESDAY TO STATE CWA BOARD

Structure Requested Would Cost Approximately $121,000—Largely to Go to Pay Labor

Application for a new court house at Charlevoix was presented to CWA officials at Lansing for consideration Tuesday by William M. Sanderson, chairman of the county board of supervisors, and Earl Puhlow, who has been retained to draw tentative plans of the structure.

Actual presentation of the plans for approval as a CWA project culminates the efforts so far of a committee authorized recently by the board of supervisors, to go into the matter and bring it to successful conclusion if possible.

The application estimates the cost at $121,697.00 in round figures. Of this amount $76,812.00, including engineer and supervision, represents the labor cost. The balance would go for material. If the project is approved by the Civil Works Administration, the entire cost will be borne by the federal government exclusive of site and other minor details of cost. Approximately 91,965 hours of common, semi-skilled and skilled labor would be required.

Advancement of plans for a new court house here has resulted in a concerted effort to put the project across and provide a project of a decided permanent value. Last Sunday afternoon twenty-seven local business and professional men met in the council chambers at a special meeting of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, called for the purpose of discussing and expressing the sentiment of the organization on the subject. The meeting resulted in adoption of a resolution to support the court house committee of the board of supervisors in whatever decision they might see fit to make regarding site for the building. As a further indication of the Association's hearty support of the project, a committee of three, consisting of Charles Emery, Dr. R. B. Armstrong, and William C. Bellinger, was appointed to cooperate in the plan. The motion also petitioned the city council to aid the project, either with cash or by the gift of site, should such be necessary.

Success of the court house plan, it is understood, now hinges upon whether or not congress extends the CWA program beyond the deadline now set at February 15, and appropriate additional funds to finance such projects.

STATE FERRIES CARRY MORE CARS DURING 1933

Lowered Rates Tend to Reduce Receipts for Straits Service

The number of passengers crossing the Straits of Mackinac on state ferries from the first of April to December 15 this year, increased 18,128 over the corresponding period in 1932, to make a total figure of 192,027, and the number of passenger cars increased 4,180 to a total of 94,496 this year, it is shown by a state highway department report.

While both passengers and passenger cars showed a favorable upturn this year, receipts dropped $103,965.25 to a total of $188,472.50. "This reduction came with the 50 per cent cut in vehicular rates under the charge for 1932," said Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner.

RURAL RESIDENTS APPRECIATE OPENING OF HIGHWAYS

Much favorable comment has been heard regarding the manner in which both trunk line and county highways were kept in a passable condition for motor cars during the severe storm of the week end.

Several telephone calls have been received in this office asking we express appreciation of the service in behalf of the communicators. Due to the diligence and efforts on the part of those in charge of snow removal operations, many families living off main highways were saved the disappointment of being "snowed in" and having their Christmas plans thwarted.

Charlevoix county residents have in the past been able to boast of the efficiency of snow removal and this winter will be no exception.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

An attempt is being made by means of a mandamus suit, to compel the department of state to disclose confidential information it receives in the collection of the gasoline tax.

In Michigan there are slightly more than 900 wholesale gasoline distributors, all of whom pay gasoline taxes monthly and who file reports on the total number of gallons of gasoline sold. The large majority of these distributors are small independent companies, not connected with the large refining corporations.

The information which comes to the department concerning the volume of business of each company, has not been made a part of the public records as the policy of Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald is that the department received its information in a confidential manner and should not violate this confidence.

Recently one of the large gasoline distributing companies asked for information regarding the amount of gasoline sold by each of the small independent distributors. When this request was denied, a mandamus suit was started against the department to compel it to make public this information.

Michigan's school system will receive about $600,000 a year from chain store tax revenues as a result of the decision of Wayne Circuit Judge Robert M. Toms. Judge Toms last week held that the 1933 chain store tax was constitutional.

Before the new tax law became effective, 26 of the larger chain store organizations started a suit to have the law declared unconstitutional, and they asked for a permanent injunction preventing the state from collecting the tax.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Subject for Sunday, December 31, "Christ Jesus."

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Christian Science" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sundny, December 24.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Isa. 52:7): "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following: (p.146) "Divine Science derives its sanction from the Bible, and the divine origin of Science is demonstrated through the holy influence of Truth in healing sickness and sin. This healing power of Truth must have been far anterior to the period in which Jesus lived. It is as ancient as 'the ancient of days.'"

Let the car speak for itself

HUNDREDS of thousands of people now own and drive Ford V-8 cars. Some neighbor or friend of yours has one. If we told you what we think of the car, you might say we are prejudiced, so we let the car and its owner tell you.

Economy of operation is one of the first points they will emphasize—the owner will boast of it and the car will prove it.

The 1934 car is even better than the 1933—and that was our best car up to its time. The new car is more beautiful—faster—more powerful—gives more miles to the gallon—better oil economy—is easier riding—cheaper to own and operate than any car we ever built.

You owe it to yourself and your pocketbook to ask our Ford Dealer to let you see this car, and let you drive it for yourself. At the wheel of the car you will be sure to reach a right decision. The Ford V-8 will tell you its own story.

NEW FORD V-8 for 1934

What the coming year may hold we can none of us foresee. It is our earnest wish that for you it may bring forth a generous harvest of happiness and good fortune.

Capt. Bill McDonald, Texas Ranger

ONE of the classic stories of the Old West is the tale of the riot which broke out in a Texas town and how its agitated mayor sent a hurry-up call for a company of Texas Rangers to come forthwith and suppress the rioters. In due course a lone Ranger rode into town and sought out the fearful burgomaster, who, seeing him, sputtered indignantly: "Why—why . . . I asked for a whole company of Rangers and they'v sent only one!" "Well," drawled that imperturbable guardian of the law in the Lone Star state, "There ain't but one riot, is there?"

The identity of this casual officer has never been authoritatively established, but it might very well have been Capt. Bill McDonald, for it was just about the sort of statement you could expect from the man of whom it was once said "He'd charge Hell with a bucket of water."

He is remembered as the deputy United States marshal who, almost single-handed, redeemed No Man's Land in Indian territory, turned the Texas Panhandle and reformed the notorious Cherokee strip. In doing this he faced a task which federal, state and territorial officers of the law declared impossible and, braving death a hundred times at the hands of desperadoes to whom there were no rules of war and whose slogan was "Shoot Capt. Bill McDonald on sight," he lived to see the rule of law and order prevail in those regions.

But he was more than just a hard-riding, hard-fighting officer who knew not the name of fear. His native intelligence made him a detective whose feats of solving baffling mysteries compare favorably with some of the best city-trained sleuths in the history of crime detection. And he had something else—a psychology which made him invincible and which is best expressed in his own words: "No man in the wrong can stand up against a fellow that's in the right and keeps on a-coming!"

When Captain Bill died in 1918, press dispatches recalled the fact that he had been a friend of Presidents (he had accompanied President Roosevelt on T. R.'s wolf-hunting expedition in Oklahoma in 1905 as chief guide and special bodyguard, and he had served as bodyguard for President Wilson during his campaign for re-election in 1916). But it is doubtful if he himself would care to be remembered for being "a friend of Presidents" so much as he would for being "Capt. Bill McDonald, Texas Ranger."

He Made the Bowie Knife Famous

BEFORE the race of dime novel writers died out, they really should have banded together and erected a monument to Samuel Colt and James Bowie. For, without placing a "trusty Colt" in the hands of their heroes, how could they have ever made so many "redskins bite the dust"? Or, without providing those same heroes with "a huge bowie-knife," how would it have been possible for them to "carve their nose offen their gizzard that laffs at me, or dissect their in'ards o' their pilgrim or feeder-hoof what looks crossways or puckers a lip at me?"

Yes, indeed, the dime novelists owed a great debt to Col. James Bowie, a native of Tennessee, who emigrated with his brother, Rezin P. Bowie, to Louisiana in the early 1800's. Described as "a man of surpassing vigor, headlong energy and of great ambition to lead, six feet tall and all muscle," his favorite sport was roping and riding alligators. Usually, soft-spoken and reserved in manner, when his anger was aroused, he was like an enraged tiger."

On such occasions he was accustomed to give a good account of himself with a long-bladed, keen knife which was a fearful weapon at close quarters when handled by such a man as "Big Jim" Bowie. Whether it was James Bowie or some other man who "invented" the knife which bears their name, is a matter of dispute among historians.

But whoever the "inventor" may have been, the fact remains that it was James Bowie who made the knife famous in more than one desperate encounter. One of them was the celebrated "Sandbar Duel" near Natchez, Miss., on September 19, 1827, a free-for-all among twelve men in which three were badly wounded and two killed. Another was Bowie's fight with three desperadoes who attacked him and all of whom he killed. After that, men began saying to blacksmiths, "Make me a knife like Bowie's," and later they shortened that to "Make me a Bowie knife."

It is wholly appropriate that the last act in "Big Jim's" life should find him with such a knife in his hand. That was on March 6, 1836 at the Alamo. When the Mexicans swept over the walls of the old fortress and swarmed down upon the handful of gallant defenders there, Bowie was bed-ridden with a fever. But he left a trail of dead Mexicans from the door of his room to the side of his bed before they finally succeeded in bearing him down to his death. And when others of Santa Ana's men came rushing into that death chamber they saw one of their fellows sprawled across the American's body, with that terrible Bowie knife buried deep in his heart!

Cheese Attains Proper Rank

Home Economics Experts Appraise This Food as of Outstanding Value; Most Nutritious When Served With Vegetables or Fruit.

I wonder, says a prominent culinary expert, if you realize how much more cheese you are using in your household than used to be the custom. If you consider how many different ways you are using it in your weekly meal plan you will realize that you are using a larger amount than you once did.

Once upon a time we thought of cheese as an accompaniment for pie, as a filler for sandwiches and as an occasional accompaniment to crackers to serve after or as dessert. Now we are using it as an ingredient of many luncheon dishes, as a flavoring for soup and vegetables and even as an ingredient of bread and biscuits.

The bureau of home economics of the Department of Agriculture calls attention to the fact that cheese is one of the outstanding protein foods which, besides being economical, also brings variety and flavor to meals.

"The allowance for a family of five is from five to seven pounds of lean meat, liver, fish, cheese and eggs each week, in the low cost food guide developed by the bureau. This is not a large quantity and it must be divided among the five groups and must be spread over seven days. It requires ingenuity to decide which ones to buy and how to use them in order to avoid undesirable monotony in serving inexpensive meals.

"Comparatively speaking, the foods in this group are the highest in price. Consequently, the quantity of these foods in a dietary so inexpensive is less than is normally found in the average diet. Some proteins may be supplied in cheaper forms, but meat, cheese, fish and eggs cannot be ignored. They add flavor, interest and efficient protein to a diet likely to become monotonous if made up largely of cereals and legumes."

The bureau calls attention to the fact that American cheese and cottage cheese are the two least expensive forms of cheese available in this country. The former is a commercial product made from milk and ripened, while the latter is usually home made and unripened. It has been estimated that an inch cube of American cheese has a fuel value greater than an egg and equal to an ounce of porterhouse or sirloin steak and that it supplies as much protein as the latter. The food value of cottage cheese is similar.

The popularity of macaroni and cheese is well founded, the bureau says; the flavor is pleasing and the macaroni, which is a cereal product, supplies starch and carbohydrates, which cheese lacks. But the nutrition experts of the bureau say that to balance the meal some food, such as tomatoes, lettuce, spinach or fruit, should be served with this dish and, in fact, with all cheese dishes.

"Mild flavored cheeses may be eaten in quantity, while the 'sharper' varieties are more suitable for flavoring foods which lack savor. Cottage cheese can be served in many pleasing ways other than as a salad, and the bureau has developed some interesting recipes for utilizing this inexpensive food. It may be used as a filler for sandwiches, combined with nuts, vegetables, relishes and meats. 'Cottage-cheese pie and old Dutch cheese cake are two old favorites. It may also be made into a loaf and baked in the oven, made into patties and into balls that are fried in deep fat."

Cheese and Bean Loaf With Tomato Sauce.

1 pound kidney beans or
1 cup dried beans, cooked until tender
1 cup grated cheese
1 small onion
1 cup soft bread crumbs
Salt
Pepper

Put the beans and onion through a meat chopper. Add the cheese and seasonings and sufficient bread crumbs to make the mixture stiff enough to be formed into a roll. Bake in a moderate oven until delicately browned, basting with hot water combined with 2 tablespoons fat. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

Dutch Cheese Cake.

3½ tablespoons flour
½ cup sugar
¼ cup milk
2 eggs
1 cup cottage cheese
Lemon juice and rind
Mace or nutmeg

Mix the flour thoroughly with the sugar, slowly add the milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Take from stove and stir in the cottage cheese, well-beaten eggs and flavoring. Bake in a shallow greased dish for 25 minutes in a moderate oven. This makes a very firm custard. Serve cold.

Cottage Cheese Patties.

2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
2 cups cottage cheese
2 cups dry bread crumbs or
1 cup cooked rice and 1 cup bread crumbs
¼ cup peanut butter
Salt
Pepper

Cook the onion in the fat until tender, but not brown. Mix with other ingredients and salt and pepper to season. Form into flat cakes and dust lightly with fine bread or cracker crumbs or cornmeal. Fry a delicate brown in a little fat in a hot frying pan. The mixture should be stiff since the cheese tends to soften during the cooking.

BIG PART PLAYED BY LIBRARIES IN TROUBLED WORLD

Foreign scholars, addressing American Library association members at their Chicago convention, asserted that libraries are essential to the "existence of a democratic society" and the "continuity of civilization." Arundell H. Esdaile, vice president of the British Library association, urging free access to books for maintaining democracy, "directed by good judgment," said: "The remarkable rise of the public library in the last generation is the healthiest omen for the future, even the material future, of our troubled world that I can conceive, short of the miraculous appearance of some one who could understand, and with authority interpret, economic phenomena." Monsignor Eugene Tisserant, director of Rome's Vatican library, said that "preservation of records of scholarship means continuity of civilization in a world submitted to continuous changes."

Educational aspects of libraries was emphasized by Louis S. Shores, of Fisk university, who asserted that "ultimately college education is book education." Superior students are bored by classrooms and inferior students fail to comprehend professors' thought, said Mr. Shores. "It is the classroom as much as any other factor which has tended to a level of mediocrity of achievement for all," he said, in advocating a "library college," wherein students would find their own problems and bring them for discussion to the group room, which would be merely supplementary to the library. In this manner, Mr. Shores told delegates, "the student's rate of learning would be limited only by his own ability."—Indianapolis News.

English "Black Monday"

Every Monday is a Black Monday in the factories—almost a quarter of all accidents occur on that day.

Tuesday is a little better, with 19 per cent of factory accidents; then the figure drops to 15 per cent on Wednesday.

Why is Monday's record the worst of the week? It was suggested at a recent temperance gathering that week-end drinks might provide an explanation; but the nation is so much more sober now that this is hardly adequate.

It may be, however, that we are trying to crowd too much into our Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and come back to work tired, instead of rested and refreshed. There certainly must be some explanation, and a study of the subject might prove profitable. The National "Safety First" association might find research in this field well worth its while.—London Answers.

Beauty Standards Set Forth by Great Artist

To be beautiful a woman must have seven certain qualifications. And these seven little items, listed by the classic Spanish painter Velasquez of the Sixteenth century, are: White, black, red, slender, little, round and soft. According to Velasquez's standard, to be beautiful a woman must possess: white skin, teeth and hands; black eyes, eyebrows and eyelids; red cheeks, lips and nails; slender body, arms and legs; small teeth, ears and feet; soft hair, lips and hands; and a broad breast, forehead and root of the nose.

Perhaps it will give his "beauty standard" a little more weight if we add that Diego Rodriguez Velasquez was the head of the Spanish school of painting and was one of the greatest painters the world has ever known. He lived from 1599 to 1660. That was a long time ago, but his beauty guide still seems to hold true. Of course they didn't have platinum blondes in those days, silly!—Faith Finder Magazine.

COUNCIL MUST DECIDE

Sale of liquor by the glass in Charlevoix will probably be considered soon by the city council, whose duty it is to determine whether liquor will be dispensed in this manner within the corporate limits or confined to bottle sales.

Under the terms of the liquor control bill just passed by the state legislature, the question of selling by the glass is left to the governing body of the community. The council has the authority to say whether Charlevoix must buy by the bottle or will be permitted to buy by the drink.

It is our sincere hope that the city council will never permit sale by the glass in Charlevoix. It would mark a return of the old saloons which were responsible more than anything else for prohibition. No clear-thinking person cares to see a return of the saloon. Let's leave "well enough" alone.

Praises of plug tobacco and patent medicine legends may be missing as a feature of the scenery along Michigan highways in the near future. Farm women are arguing against selling advertising space on the broadsides of barns. The home economics committee represents public opinion among women folk of the rural districts. There are 400,000 women members of the Grange in the country and their say will go a long way toward dictating the national barn-painting policy.—Detroit News.

Advertising Aids Business Revival

"Is 1933 a good year in which to advertise?" Mr. Diller asked. "Yes. If 1933 is a good year to stay in business, to reinforce the public's confidence in you, to put more business on the hooks. There is new business to be had today and aggressive companies are getting it. But new business will come in only if you go out for it. Advertising certainly goes out for it.

"Will people read newspaper advertisements these days? They will read anything that interests them. There are plenty of present-day arguments for business."

TAXPAYERS APPROVED SEWAGE PLANT PLANS

Proposal Carried at Second Special Election Last Wednesday

At a second special election last Wednesday, the city council's proposal to construct a sewage treatment plant and issue revenue bonds in the amount of $86,700 to finance the project, was approved by taxpayers.

Out of a total of 401 ballots cast, 251 were in favor of the proposal and 150 against, giving ten nnd a fraction votes above the required three-fifths majority.

The council now awaits approvnl of Public Works officials of Michigan and at Washington, D. C., but in the meantime has under consideration a plan to petition for transfer of the project from Public Works to Civil Works, with a resultant estimated saving of approximately $20,000.00. The council Tuesday night directed City Attorney Rollie L. Lewis to go to Lansing and Detroit to discuss with CWA and PWA officials regarding advisability of the change and will await his report before tnking further aetion.

USE WELFARE LABOR TO SWAT MOSQUITOES

Cities and Resort Districts Advised to Investigate Opportunity

Michigan citizens tired of heing bait for mosquitoes should interest their communities in the possibility of destroying these pests and at the snme time employing persons who are on welfare lists, acoording to the entomology department at Michigan State college.

This type of work qualifies as one of the kind of employments for which federal funds can be obtained. Some eastern states hnve already employed people from their welfnre lists on this kind of work.

Ninety per cent of the money spent goes for labor and most of the remainder is spent for supervisors recruited from the welfare lists. Tools owned by the city or county for road work are suitable for the tasks done to rid towns of mosquitoes.

According to the French National Office of Tourists, more than 15,000 men are employed as bus drivers and ballyhoo spielers, catering to the demand of the tourist for more information about points of interest in the French capital.

It is in just such a role that Maurice Chevnlier appears in his latest Paramount picture, "The Way to Love," coming Saturday and Sunday to the Palace theatre. For years, this French star has epitomized to all Americans the life and gaiety of the French capital, and now he has a part in which he can more definitely interpret his beloved city.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Lou Duranee, who passed away five years ago today, December 29, 1933:

"The moon and stars are shining,
On a lone and silent grave;
Beneath lies one dearly loved
But whom we could not save.
Friends may think we've forgotten
When at times they see us smile,
Little do they know the heartache
That a smile hides nll the while."

"Her weary soul has gone to rest,
Her troubles all are o'er,
And now she's landed safe above
On Canaan's happy shore."

Fashion Declares in Favor of Gold

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WELL, anyway, fashion is coming out strong for the gold standard no matter what the rest of the world may be doing about it. Enthusiasm for gold is that keen in style circles that not only are accessories of golden metal being shown in countless numbers but for state occasions milady goes arrayed in shimmering gold from the crown of her exquisitely coiffed head to the sole of her daintily sandalled feet.

If you are dressing up for afternoon tea or an afternoon reception or a musicale or whatever the happy event quite the most modish thing you can do is to enliven your best black frock with a dash of gold here and there.

If there is one place more than another where the gold fever is spending it is throughout neckwear departments. The most wonderful discoveries in the way of gold findings come to light there. You will see, for instance, perfectly fascinating gold lame tissuelike weaves (in silver, too, if you prefer) fashioned into softly draped collar and cuff ensembles which set off even the plainest of frocks to perfection. You are supposed to wear these adorable fantasies with your crepe or velvet or light woolen afternoon gowns just like the young woman seated below to the right in the picture is wearing hers. Her draped collar is held in place with a rhinestone clip.

You can also get sets on this order which include detachable scarfs and bib effects and other equally fascinating accents which are spangled with scintillating sequins. There is nothing smarter for after five o'clock dress-up occasions than sequins. You can get the most charming little handbags worked solidly with sequins in gold or silver to match the bandings which outline the neck and sleeves or yoke effects of so many of the new velvet dresses.

Among the scores of intriguing articles of adornment brought out this season there are perhaps none more attractive than the new metal-mesh accessories. They include stunning belts, capelets, whimsical evening jackets, and even hats are made of this metal mesh which is almost as light as a feather. Just to give you an idea of these decorative faucies we are picturing at the top to the right in this group a foursome consisting of a cunning little hat, a deep cape collar with cavalier cuffs and a supple wide belt to match. You can buy these flattering items single or en suite in any specialty or department store.

It is not only that accessories and jewelry have so enthusiastically subscribed to the gold code, for bright metals have worked their way into the very warp and woof of this season's materials and into knitted effects as well. The handsome afternoon dress, which is posed below to the left on the standing figure, is made of gold-studded crepe. The fold around the neckline and the fine pleating which trims it is of gold tissue. The buttons are gold.

The hat and the veil continue the gold theme.

Metal cloth is also a first choice for high-style evening gowns. The young woman seated on the divan in the picture wears a lovely creation which is fashioned of shimmering, glimmering crinkled gold lame. The very simplicity with which this gown is styled accents its elegance. The hood drapery across the shoulders of the little jacket interprets a new detail which is being featured throughout the mode. The gown itself is cut extremely decollette at the back with a high cowl effect across the front. The little cap of gold net is enhanced with no applique of slender gold leaves.

FORMAL WRAPS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fashion is more enthusiastic than ever about rich velvet for formal wraps. There is no set rule as to how long or how short a smart evening wrap shall be. Patou creates the stunning little waist-length jacket here pictured of velvet in a deep violet shade. The voluminous sleeves are arranged so as to give a cape effect at the back. The other coat shown is full length. For this handsome mode Worth uses a superb novelty velvet in the new golden yellow, trimming it with silver fox. A choice diamond buckle fastens the gold metal belt.

The wool scarf has rivals in the new velveteens and corduroys, which come in the brightest of lacquer reds, billiard greens and sapphire blues, and which look very smart with rugged tweeds, and wools of the town and country types. Velvets and velveteens are printed in bold stripes and polka dots to give that colorful touch which today's sports costume demands.

Bright gloves, at first thought to be a mere whimsy of the Paris openings, are actually being seen where smart women gather. An all-black costume gains a new sophistication by the addition of a pair of bright red suede slip-on gloves. Bright green gloves are worn with dark brown, and vivid blue with gray.

Various Blue Shades Are Popular for Sports Wear

Rivaling the dark rich tones which are so smart for formal costumes are the various shades of blue which continue to be exceedingly popular for sports. Navies, gray blues, soft medium shades and purply tones are all being shown in tweed and knitted outfits for casual wear.

A typical sports ensemble is made of roguish diagonal woolen which suggests a hand-loomed fabric. The short jacket is double-breasted with notched lapels. The skirt has stitched-down pleats in the front.

Over this is worn a loose raglan coat of the tweed, in three-quarter length. The sleeves of the coat are slightly full, fitted in at the wrist with inverted tucks. A wide shawl collar of beaver lends richness and warmth, and there is a luxurious pillow muff to match.

A woman who achieved literary prominence at an early age said that the reason she did so was because, as a child, whenever her mother told her to "sew a fine seam," she let the work drop and went to her desk in preference. From the number of "fine seams" she was told to sew, it may well have been that the mother was wise enough in the ways of children to know that nothing could make her ply her pen as surely as the admonition to do something else. More open encouragement to do so might perhaps have lessened the child's initiative towards the gift she possessed.

Certain children there are, with gifts which parents realize, who have to be persuaded to the exercise of them in roundabout ways. Any recognizable effort on the part of the mother or father to push them in the direction of their talents will develop an unaccountable resistance. Anything will serve as excuse to get out of it, once the damage is done, and the child becomes suspicious of the parents' objective. This is no reflection on the youngsters' abilities, indeed, the trait is in common with some of the greatest geniuses of all time.

Many an adult worker welcomes anything that will defer the moment of "opening fire" on a day when a lot of work is cut out for him or her to do, whereas, if there is a holiday when no such requirements are exacted and one can do "anything one wishes," it is astonishing fact that the very dreaded tasks, when not compulsory, assume an aspect almost sweet, and are drifted into pleasantly, and accomplished effectively.

This is something of the same trait that most of us have brought from childhood. An understanding parent, who deals subtly with this characteristic, can give a child a desire for achievement while seeming to do the opposite. And how much more fun for the person of any age to seem to have decided a course for himself, rather than follow the routine some one else has outlined.

WELL KNOWN COUPLE MARRIED FIFTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carey Observed Golden Wedding Monday

Christmas this year had a double significance for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carey, well known and highly respected residents of this city for nearly a half century. In addition to the spirit of the Yuletide season the couple Monday observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

With those of their family able to come for the event, Mr. and Mrs. Carey held open house for the many friends in observance of the occasion which was made doubly enjoyable amid the holiday season.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey were married at Stouffville, Ontario, Canada, December 25th, 1863. Mr. Carey, born in London, England, was 70 years old last Thursday. Mrs. Carey, born in Ontario, will be 70 next month. They came to Charlevoix in 1888.

The couple have seven children, three daughters and four sons, viz: Mrs. Jennie Durance, Flint, who was present at the observance; Mrs. Agnes Papineau of Dearborn, Mrs. Erma Weller of Frankfort, W. A. Carey of Detroit, Lafayette Carey of Washington, D. C., and Leo and Bert of Charlevoix. There are also 18 grandchildren.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

The Legion keno party at the hall last Friday evening was well attended and the members of the post wish to thank the public for their interest and patronage.

To clear up what might possibly be a little misunderstanding relative to the grand prize that was given away, it may be said that the purpose of offering this prize to the person holding the lucky number at the close of the evening's entertainment is to hold the crowd, who will thereby be induced to play more often than they otherwise would. To deviate from this rule would be to nullify the entire effect of the scheme.

VALUE FARM CROPS SHOW AN INCREASE

Michigan Figures Reported Higher Than Last Two Years

Final figures on Michigan's 1933 crop production just released by the Michigan cooperative crop reporting service show that the total value of the state's crops this season was 36 per cent higher than for 1932 and about 7 per cent more than for 1931.

These figures are based on the total or gross production of the principal field and fruit crops evaluated at December 1 farm prices or at average seasonal farm prices for crops already marketed. The estimates released by the department placed the total value of the 1933 crops at $97,552,000 compared with $71,755,000 for 1932 and approximately $90,800,000 for 1931.

These figures do not reflect farm income as they exclude the value of livestock and livestock products from which Michigan farmers usually derive nearly two-thirds of their income. Benefit payments received this year under production control programs are also excluded. Since the prices of most livestock and livestock products are still low, the increase in total farm income has not been in proportion to the gain in crop values. Higher feed costs and an increase of 11 per cent in the average price of articles farmers buy are additional offsetting factors.

Fertilize Strawberries

Applications of nitrate of soda or sulfate of ammonia are best made when plants are dry, broadcasting with care and using very finely divided nitrate or sulfate. Care should be taken not to allow the crystals to accumulate on the foliage. If desired, the nitrate or sulfate can be applied at the base of the plants in water solution, using two ounces to the gallon. This is a safe way to make the application and is practical where water and spray pump equipment is available.

FARM NOTES

Complaint is being made that the growing of alfalfa in young orchards deprives the trees of needed moisture.

• • •

Hay made of mixtures of vetch and oats, field peas and oats, or the clovers will reduce the grain bill next winter.

• • •

Young cabbage plants may be protected from cutworms by placing around each one a collar or stiff paper or tin.

• • •

Where economy in feeding is necessary, and present-day conditions certainly require this, then the silo must be considered.

• • •

Probably no more popular fruit is grown today than the strawberries, but you must have them fresh from the vines to know how good they really can be. The culture of this berry is not difficult.

• • •

Sweet peals are a poor way to make a collar fit—they are both hot and insanitary.

• • •

No grain crop is easier to store and keep than oats. Seldom does oats heat. It will even absorb considerable moisture from leaky roofs and still dry out without getting moldy.

• • •

Trouble from stomach worms is one of the most serious problems that sheep raisers have to contend with. The losses resulting from stomach worms are especially severe among the lambs.

CHARLEVOIX GIRL MUSICIAN WINS

FOURTH SCHOLARSHIP AWARDED ANNABELL COMFORT

Detroit News Writer Tells Success Local Girl Has Made in Music Through Untiring Efforts

That Miss Annabell Comfort, niece of the late Will Levinton Comfort, Detroit novelist, had been awarded the first Dr. Arnold Schoenberg scholarship in musical composition ever given in America, became known recently. Miss Comfort has received four scholarships in the last four years, a record held unique in musical circles.

The nward carriea with it not only the direction of Dr. Schoenberg in Miss Comfort's work for the next two years, but permits her to give her time to composition. She will also be able to lecture, to write on musical topics and to continue her radio engagements. For the last two years, she has been teaching piano in New York City. There were more than 1,000 applicants for the coveted award.

The award was made on four songs written by Miss Comfort in four different periods of her career as a composer: "Nocturne," 1928; "Lonely Isle," 1932; "Wind Thorugh Trees," 1933, and a spiritual, "Seeking Massa Jones," also written this year.

Dream Realized

Visited in her Fifty-seventh street studio, New York, Miss Comfort was radiant. A dream had come true—a dream that had begun on the shores of Lake Michigan, continued while she was a music teacher in a Michigan public school and later in a Kansas college, and persisted even when she reached the East with not a friend nearer than Detroit and with only $7.50 in her pocket. Along with that dream were hard work, sometimes sketchy meals, and homes in atties; sometimes discouragement and sometimes elation.

Educated in Charlevoix, Miss Comfort entered the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago in 1921. There she studied harmony with the late Adolf Heidig and piano with Heniot Levy and Silvio Scienti. From that institution, Miss Comfort received a master's degree.

There she earned something more, she admitted, smiling reminiscently—the firm friendship and guidance of Heidig.

"For 10 years he led and inspired me," she said. "But still, he did not want me to go East. You see I was self-supporting—I always have been self-supporting — and he thougbt thnt what I was dreaming of was too much for a girl with no backing to attempt. But I went and despite his opposition felt he was still guiding me.

Taught in Niles

After receiving her degree, Miss Comfort became direetor of music in the public schools of Niles. Leaving Niles in 1928, she became instructor in harmony and composition in the University of Kansas.

It was while teaching in Kansas that Miss Comfort read of the Curtis Foundation in Philadelphia. In that, she saw an opportunity to perfect herself in her work and to learn more about composing—she had begun the writing of music before she left Chicago.

She didn't have any money—"Rather a chronic state with me"—but being successful in borrowing $50, came on East and reached Philadelphia with that $7.50. Not knowing anyone, she went to the Theodore Prosser Foundation to inquire about her prospects.

"I was advised to return to Chicago," said Miss Comfort. "But the next morning—it was raining—I tucked my mnnuscripts under my arm and went to the Curtis Fonodation, I don't know how I got by the woman at the outer desk. But I showed my work to Rosario Scalero and came out with a scholarship."

Studies in France

That award turned out to be two scholarships; so, for the next 24 months, Miss Comfort studied counterpoint, canon and fugue with the famous Itnlian authority. Then, in the summer of 1932, the Theodore Prosser Foundation, instead of advising her to return to Chicago, gave her a scholarship and for the next six months she studied composition with Nadia Boulonger in Fontainbleau, Frnnce. A Boulonger letter saying she is "most gifted in the highest sense of the word" is one of her treasured possessions.

Back again in America, working with pupils, filling concert engagements and playing over the radio—she has had 30 engagements on national hnok-ups and with independent stations in the last year—Miss Comfort heard how Dr. Schoenberg had been exiled from his nntive Germany because he is a Jew. Then came the announcement of an opportunity to study under him, an opportunity thnt had never before been available in America.

"I knew there would be hundreds of applicants for that scholarship," said Miss Comfort. "But I entered. I believe that there are two aspects to musie—the philsophical and the spiritual. I long ago had acquired the philsophical — adversity nnd struggle teach one to be calm if she is to succeed—and the other gave me the award."

P. W. A. CHECKS

Checks for P. W. A. workers should result in gradual strengthening of commodity prices without much further recourse to enforced inflation of any nature whatever. The mnn who takes his own check und spends it for the necessities of life is bound to be more liberal in providing for his fnmily thnn the welfare agent has ever dared to be in handing out orders for welfare relief. With increased buying there will be increased prices. That is n natural economic law.

There can be no fault found with the plan of providing the man in the street with n self-supporting job. For a long time we have contended that this was the only remedy for our economic ills. Now that our desires are being put into execution decency compels us to support the movement with every bit of energy at our command.

One has only to see the look of happiness on the face of a man getting his first pay check in three years to be assured that at least we are on the right track.

WATCH WISCONSIN—AND LEARN

Wisconsin seems not to be afraid to pioneer which has won for it the title "the poltical laboratory of the nation." It has recently embarked on another experiment which Michignn and other states will watch with interest. The Wisconsin banking commission has reduced the rate of the small loan companies from three and one-half per cent a month to one and one-fourth per cent a month. Evidently the Wisconsin commission thinks 15 per cent a year is enough to pay the operators a reasonable profit on their investment. The experience of Wisconsin should prove enlightening.

Both political parties in Michigan promised reductions in the rntes of these companies but when the legislature passed a bill reducing the rate to one and three-fourths per cent a month, Governor Comstock vetoed it because it would put the poor companies out of business. So it will be interesting to observe whether they survive the Wisconsin commission's netion. Either it or our governor is wrong, possibly both are.

While there is considerable risk in the small loan business yet we gather from what the officials say, that it is not as great as generally supposed. All these companies seem to make money. They have money to loan on their terms when banks refuse to loan on their terms. Loan companies are supposed to he able to get back door loans from banks when its customers cannot get front door loans. This supposition may be incorrect. It is, of course, not susceptible of proof.

The only things that stand out are thnt these companies can not continue indefinitely to loan their own money, they must be able to borrow; therefore, the rate of return to those who loan to them must be sufficiently high to offset the risk involved. So the practical question is: what is the lowest rate at which these lonn companies can obtain their money. This plus their cost of doing business will determine the rate at which they can sell their services. Since the Wisconsin cut is over 60 per cent the experiment will he worth watching.—Ann Arbor Tribune.

TOO BIG A GAP!

There is too great a gap between 12 cent butterfat and 25 cent butter; between 5 cent heef and 29 cent kettle roasts; between $1 a bushel apples to the farmers and 5 cents a pound apples to the city fellows; between 4 cent pork to the farmer and 20 cent pork chops to the city consumer. The farmers of this community are registering a mighty loud squawk, and that squawk is justified it seems. They have come to believe that the blue eagle must fasten its talons into the chiselers and give the farmer boys a square deal. They have come to believe that the blue eagle is not soaring over the agricultural parts of our country, but is afraid of the cold and the open spaces of the country and hovers around the city pinces, alone. Imagine a farmer able to carry on with his cows giving only 12 cent butterfat. That farmer has a liability in every head of stock on his farm. Why expect him to carry on and hring thnt stock through the winter and at the same time be refused help from the welfare department or from any other ngency while his neighbor that never had a hend of cattle, never looked ahead for tomorrow's needs nnd prepared for it is privileged to live off the welfare. We are not critieizing the local welfare organization, but we are criticizing the rules that hold them down to such a condition of distribution. —Cheboygan Observer.

THE BRIGHT PROMISE

The world always approaches January 1st with the spirit of a bright promise of better times and more of them, in the air.

It is a season for optimistic comment by nationnl business authorities, politicians, government leaders and the next door neighbor. It joins with Christmas in a general well-wishing program, by, of, and for all mankind.

This New Year's, the Michigan Tuberculosis associntion points out, the bright promise can be fulfilled for many, many Michigan homes in 1934, if all those persons who have not yet made a return for the Christmas seals sent them, will do so.

In the rush and hurry of Christmas buying, many seals were laid away and forgotten. They enn fight no tuberculosis, abandoned in a dark desk drawer.

But brought to light and paid for, they will save many Michigan families the loss of a father, mother, daughter or son, next year. They will protect thousands of Michigan school children who might otherwise come in daily contact with an nctive case of tubereulosis. They will make sure that your community is safe, because all are safe.

Don't waste the Christmas seals sent you. If you cannot return money for all of them, send back those in excess of your gift.

Happy New Year!

LESS TAXES WANTED

In November, 1932, the people of Michigan voted in favor of the fifteen mill limit on taxes for state, county, township and school district purposes. Last winter the legislature removed almost all of the stnte property tax, but did not reduce the fifteen mill limit accordingly. As a result, the tax levying power of the local districts was increased as much as the state levy was reduced. Citizens had to pay a new tax for the support of the state, but the property tax limit was just as high as it would have been if no new tax for the use of the state government had been imposed.

With that experience fresh in mind, it will not be strange if taxpayers and citizens generally should make a searching study of Governor Comstock's proposal of n constitutional amendment designed to let down the bars for every conceivable form of new taxation, but providing not one single guarantee that any part of the new revenues will actually be used to reduce the existing burdens.

A COURSE IN FINANCE

Whoever desires to acquire a liberal education in finance should keep in close touch with the next congress. Philosophers of finance are prepared to descend upon the national capital in great numbers. They will represent every shade of opinion in the financial world. We will hear about "baloney" dollars and gold dollars; commodity dollars and printing press dollars; revaluation of the gold dollar and remonetization of silver; not a single phase of the controversy now waging over the currency of the nation will be overlooked. All will claim to have a panncea for our financial ills, all will insist they are motivated by high principles for the salvation of n people in distress. Some changes will be made in our monetary system, but few in comparison with the demands being made. Nations move slowly in such matters, careful to test out as much as possible in advnnce any departure from the system which has been in use for so many years. Occasionally we may have dreams of u currency that will guarantee us freedom from every financial pnin, but in the cold morning of reality these dreams disappear and are replaced by sensible action which practical usage has taught us will be best in the long run.

MELODY CRUISE

Michigan has a brand new set of liquor laws. Thus do we enter into a new phnse of the age old question of liquor control. The noble experiment that was to bring an era of temperance by legislation ended in failure. Now we are embarking on a new cruise down the moistened way that leads to the years ahead. Sincere people hope that clearer sailing will be found. This can be accomplished if we are willing to profit by the mistakes of the past. The new regulations for liquor control are undoubtedly far from perfection. They can be altered from time to time as experience points the way. The public should have faith in Commissioner Frank A. Picard, who has already shown exceptional ability in dealing with the perplexing problems of control. Already he has made it plain that beer rncketeers nre no longer in the saddle. He will do the same with the liquor barons. Commissioner Pieard was chosen for this work because of Governor Comstock's faith he was the one man for the important job that the new social deal has brought about. We should be patient until he has had time to work out the program he has in mind. After that there will be plenty of time to begin our fault-finding.

SOUND CHARACTER

Sound character is the nation's most valuable asset. It is based upon high ideals and wholesome habits. Both are acquired from the earliest years. To lay the foundation of character is the privilege of the home. Generosity, courtesy, respect for others grow out of the intimate relationships of the family. — Herman Roe.

There are more words in a lie than in the truth.

REPUBLICANS WILL STAGE COME-BACK?

PARTY LEADERS HEARTENED BY EARLY ACTIVITIES

Much Revamping of Platform Appears Necessary If Party Is to Regain Lost Prestige

(By Fred D. Keister Sr.)

Michigan republicans are determined to stage a comeback in 1934. Already get-together banquets and harmony gatherings are being planned. The platform builders are engaged in getting the old planks down out of the attic, seeing how many are still serviceable, how many replacements and additions will be necessary. Right now the feudists may be indulging in a little dagger sharpening, but this time they hope to use these old instruments of torture on the enemy and not in killing each other off as in former years.

This pre-seasonal activity is heartening to party leaders, who see in it hopes for success a year hence. Although the party has suffered crushing defeats the last two times it has gone to the polls, all of the old time party spirit and enthusiasm remains, needing but little effort to start the signal fires burning on the hilltops. The fact that they have hesitated to assert themselves previous to this time is attributed to good sportsmanship while democratic policies were being put into force, rather than because of lost faith in the cause.

From now on it is going to be different. The period of contrition having been passed Michigan republicans are not going to submit to any more sackcloth and ashes. There can be no objections to such a course. Constructive criticism of their opponents and advocacy of party principles is to be expected. The democrats have not hesitated to engage in combat among themselves and can hardly expect to escape opposition in all of the things they are undertaking. It is not difficult to recall the hair shirt which they put on President Hoover almost the first day he entered the White House nor did they allow him to forget he was wearing the garment until he was safely on the train bearing him to his home in the California hills. Now that the situation is reversed they will know what it means to take a few doses of the same kind of medicine.

Before the republican party in Michigan can hope to be returned to favor it should be prepared to answer some pertinent questions: Has it become humanized by defeat? Is it in touch with the human problems of the nation? Is it ready to shake itself free from the insidious influences which destroyed it as the party of Abraham Lincoln and caused it to be laid low in defeat? Has it become sufficiently humble in spirit to accept the advice of its friends without seeking to punish them as dangerous reactionaries? Will the old arrogance born of a thousand victories be missing? Will the generals cease marching in one direction while the main army is going in another? Just simple, practical questions, but until they have been satisfactorily answered there will be no return from Elba.

Nor must the republican party in this state underestimate the size of the job that lies ahead. Defeating the democratic party in Michigan next year is not going to be an easy task. Right now they are solidified, militant and confident. Their war chests are bulging with golden ikons and thousands of party office holders are prepared to carry the gospel of democracy upon every highway and bywny of the commonwealth. They will not have to face the liability of a national administration that confronted the republicans of this state a year ago. Rather will they have the benefit of a government at Washington which has captured popular fancy. Unless this is a radical change in existing sentiment it will pay an important part in democratic success in the next campaign. Right now their record in state affairs is not one to be bragged about. But they still have time to work out many promised reforms. If they succeed in setting their own house in order they are going to cause the republicans to have many sleepless nights. Time alone will write the answer.

Don't demand public improvements and lower taxes in the same breath.

DEER LAW VIOLATION LARGEST ON RECORDS

Nearly Two Hundred Convictions Reported by Department

Michigan's 1933 deer hunting season and the 15 days immediately preceding the season brought 191 convictions for violations of the deer laws, the division of field administration of the department of conservation reports.

The record is believed to be the highest in the history of the department and results from an intensive campaign carried on by the division through the northern part of the state. Transfer of several officers from southern Michigan during the deer season and the addition of a number of "free lance" men made the campaign against law violations possible.

Included among the 191 who paid fines or went to jail for violating deer laws were 21 convicted of killing does and 12 convicted of killing fawns. In addition were 44 who illegally possessed venison, seven who had deer without metal tags attached and 14 who were caught shining deer.

WINTER FISHING SEASON IS HERE

GOOD HAULS PERCH, TROUT AND WHITEFISH REPORTED

All Anglers Must Have General Rod License to Fish in Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix

Michigan's winter fish spearing season opened Monday, January 1st, and for the first time the man with the spear is required to have a license.

Another significant change, and one which all persons are perhaps not familiar with, is a ruling requiring all anglers to procure a general rod license before taking any species of fish from inland waters. This ruling also covers Round lake and Lake Charlevoix, formerly classed as Lake Michigan connecting waters but now listed as inland lakes, according to Conservation Officer C. W. Bonney.

Anglers were formerly required to obtain a license only for trout fishing, but the general rod license, costing 50c, covers all species and every person must have one or be subject to arrest for violation.

Otherwise regulations governing the winter spearing season are unchanged from last year. Carp, suckers, mullet, redhorse, sheepshead, lake trout, smelt, pike (great northern, grass pike and pickerel), muskellunge, whitefish, ciscoes, pilotfish or menominee whitefish, dogfish and garpike, may be taken by spear through the ice without an artificial light during January and February.

With the freezing over of Round lake and Lake Charlevoix, the usual villages of fishing huts have put in their annual appearance. Quite to the contrary of previous years, Lake Charlevoix, ordinarily classed as waters for lake trout and whitefish, is providing some wonderful perch fishing. Catches are being reported from almost every locality around the lake and off the Belvedere bathing pier hauls of phenominal size were made last week. The "deep hole" midway between the railway bridge and Olds Point has provided many lake trout and whitefish so far, while the usual run of perch is on in Round lake.

WANT QUICK ACTION ON EDUCATION WORK

Completion of Projects by January 16 Urged by Officials

Work-relief projects in education organized to give employment to needy unemployed teachers, in accordance with a Michigan plan as authorized by the federal government, must be completed quickly according to information from Washington.

It is probably that moneys allocated to Michigan for this purpose by the federal government not budgeted by an early January date, will be re-allocated to other states.

To hasten the completion of organization plans, Superintendent of Public Instruction Paul F. Voelker, has designated January 12 as a deadline for the submission of projects to be approved. School officials are urged to inaugurate their programs earlier than this date if possible.

ORGANIZE GROUP TO TAKE REGION BUSINESS CENSUS

Twenty-six white collar workers will get jobs in this part of northern Michigan taking the business census, under the direction of Dell McDonald of Cheboygan, as regional supervisor.

Appointment of the enumerators will start at once, it is said, through the federal re-employment service. The workers will be paid $18 per week, while the regional supervisor will be paid about $300 per month. It is understood that enumerators will work under the 30-hour week plan while the supervisor will be on full time.

KIPMEN WIN AGAIN FROM PETOSKEY '5'

TOOK 15 TO 13 VERDICT IN VERY CLOSE CONTEST

Charlevoix's Kipmen chalked up their second victory over Petoskey's Northmen at the Petoskey gym last Wednesday night, winning 15 to 13 in one of the fastest and most exciting games of the season. Charlevoix won the first game between the two tenms here by a 26 to 16 count.

Pearl scored Charlevoix's winning goal with less than a minute to play and the score knotted at 13-all. The following account of the contest is taken from the Petoskey Evening News:

Both teams presented a practically air-tight defense during the first half. Each squad scored but one field goal during the entire division. Petoskey counted more free throws to lead 5 to 3 at the midway mark.

The action started soon after the opening of the second half when Lesher tipped in a short shot to bring the score to 7 and 3. Pearl unleashed a long shot and Potter looped in a counter from the circle to tie the score. Ance sent Charlevoix into the lead with a foul shot. Carey, shooting from the side of the floor, added two points to Charlevoix's total as the third period ended.

Dombroski made the tally 10 to 8 with a free throw. After a single-handed fight Reid shot a goal for Petoskey to tie the score at 10 points.

Ance sent Charlevoix into a two-point lead with a corner court shot. Lesher made a free throw. A moment later Lesher missed a free throw but took the ball from the backboard and tossed a field goal to give Petoskey the lead 13 to 12. Potter made a free throw to tie the score. In the closing seconds Pearl broke loose to score the winning goal.

Lineup:

Petoskey		Charlevoix
Lesher	rf	Potter
Dombroski	lf	Pearl
Giles	c	Ance (Capt.)
Reid	rg	Foster
Hegener (Capt.)	lg	Carey

Referee: Theron Sutton of Harbor Springs.

In the preliminary game the Charlevoix reserves had an easy time with the Petoskey reserves, winning 19 to 11. In their first meeting this year the Petoskey team was victorious in an overtime game.

Lineup:

Petoskey Reserves		Charlevoix Reserves
Perry	rf	Eceleston
Fraser	lf	Schwab
Jablinski	c	Radle
Greenwell	rg	Hebert
Fochtman	lg	Mayhew

Substitutes: Petoskey, Leismer, Paulus, Ross, Du Chaine, Atkin. Johnson, Clapper; Charlevoix, Livingston, A. Shapton, B. Shapton, Bergman, LaBlanc, Nickerson, Scott.

Referee: W. M. Loveless, Petoskey.

The Kipmen meet their first Tip of Michigan conference opponent Friday night when they journey to Boyne City for a tilt with Coach Brotherton's defending champions. Boyne's title winning combination suffered badly from graduation last spring and represents only a semblance of the powerful squad which went to the state finals last year. Boyne was badly beaten by Petoskey earlier this season and, if comparative scores mean anything, Charlevoix should not be bothered much in taking them into camp.

MACCABEES INSTALL OFFICERS JANUARY 8

The business session next Monday night will be followed by a social hour. Members may bring their husbands and a friend.

LOCAL SCHOOLS TO OPEN MONDAY

TWO-WEEK HOLIDAY VACATION ENDS THEN

High School Classes Will Be Held in Other Buildings Until Improvements Are Completed

While much of the improvement work being done by CWA workers in the high school building will probably not be completed by next Monday, schools will open that day as originally scheduled at the beginning of the holiday vacation period.

This announcement was made by the board of education following its first meeting of the new year, at which plans were made to house senior high students until such a time as the building would be ready for occupancy. Supt. O. P. North assured that classes, while inconvenienced to some extent, could be held by making use of vacant rooms in the junior high and grade buildings, and assembly will be held in the gymnasium. Whatever arrangement is decided upon for classes would only be temporary.

A fine program of improvement is being carried out under the CWA at the high school building. The walls of several rooms and the halls are being completely replastered and in others patched where necessary. Decoration of the entire interior will follow. Woodwork is being newly painted and varnished, seats tightened and necessary repairs and replacements made.

When work in the high school building is completed, classes will be resumed there as usual and the program transferred to the junior high school building which will undergo the same list of improvements. The gymnasium is also included for some extensive changes.

Other CWA projects, including the bath house, storm sewers, Charlevoix-Bellaire transmission line and highway work, are being continued this week, and whenever projects are furnished, men are being given work through the Civil Works Service plan.

MICHIGAN FAILS TO GET SHARE OF CASH

Has Received Only Four-Tenths of Public Works Money Allotted

When the $3,300,000,000 public works fund had been exhausted Michigan had been allotted $2,531,229 and projects costing an additional $26,927,222 were held up pending necessary legislation it has been disclosed.

Michigan's allotment for 21 projects totaled less than four-tenths of one per cent of the $700,000,000 allotted to non-federal projects.

More than 25 other states similarly received less than a pro-rata share of the fund, however, and may expect preferment in allocations under a new fund for which Secretary of the Interior Ickes will ask congress.

Constitutionality of the 1933 statute permitting localities to bond themselves without referenda for construction of their own utilities must be tested before Michigan can secure approval of some of the projects it has submitted, said Frank H. Alfred, chairman of the state advisory board of the PWA.

ROAD COMMISSION FIRES R. T. DAVIS

MAINTENANCE SUPT. IS DISCHARGED FOR INEFFICIENCY

The political axe, poised for many months, fell swiftly but not unexpectedly Saturday afternoon at the office of the county road commission upon the neck of R. T. Davis, maintenance superintendent the past 8 years. As a result, Mr. Davis is no longer working for the county.

Saturday's action climaxed a campaign which had its origin when Samuel E. Rogers was elected commissioner from the East Jordan district. It was just another act in the drama of "peanut" politics centered around the road commission for at least a couple of years. The drama has cost Charlevoix county taxpayers plenty and has done more to throw monkey wrenches into the political harmony of the county than any other cause in a decade.

Teaming with Rogers in the campaign against Davis was Frank Wangeman, Eveline township commissioner, whose status as far as what district he represents is somewhat vague. These two voted in favor of a motion discharging Davis for inefficiency. The charge is preposterous. Anyone who drives an automobile and gets outside the county limits, knows Charlevoix has the best maintained highways in the north. As a matter of fact, Charlevoix county has a state-wide reputation for the excellency of its highways, especially in the winter. These facts do not indicate inefficiency. Perhaps Mr. Davis' discharge was warranted, but certainly not for inefficiency. If Rogers and Wangeman had the best interests of the county at heart, they would have devoted their efforts to cooperating with Davis in his work rather than blocking his every move.

Samuel Tokoly of Boyne City, former county surveyor and present foreman of the Boyne City highway district, was employed to succeed Davis. He took over his duties January 1.

Charlevoix commissioner, Wm. Straw, voted against Davis' discharge and Tokoly's employment after strenuous argument against both moves failed.

Charlevoix county taxpayers can certainly hail the day when our road commissioners are elected by popular vote instead of being appointed by the supervisors. Not until that time will road affairs be removed from politics.

COLLEGEANS DEFEAT POLAR BEAR QUINTET

Margin Piled Up in First Quarter Gave Visitors Victory

The Polar Bears got their attack under way too late last Thursday night to overtake the Olivet College Comets, dropping a 28 to 20 decision for their first defeat of the season.

The collegeans scored 10 points to one for the Bears in the first period and it looked like a walkaway, but for the next three quarters the locals played their opponents on even terms, in fact out-scored them by a single point.

As far as floor work was concerned the Comets had very much the edge, but to overcome this difference the Polar Bears displayed a stubborn defense and an eye for long range shots that found the hoop with regularity. All in all it was a very interesting game.

For the Comets, Kane led with 10 points, matching Davenport's performance for the Bears. Ikens, who played an outstanding game, scored 6, Joe Smith 3 and Supernaw 1. Hugh Mayne refereed the game satisfactorily.

The Polar Bears take to the road for their next encounter. They meet Harbor Springs in a return game next Monday night.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 teachers in northern Michigan are expected to attend the meeting. It is planned to hold the convention during October with sessions on a Friday and a Saturday

HUGH LOAN AWAITING FINAL LOCAL ACTION

St. Paul Land Bank Approves $21,000,000 in Credit for Michigan

More than $18,000,000 loaned on Michigan farms by the St. Paul Federal Land bank in 1933 awaits action by farmers or their creditors to bring the actual cash into this state, according to Leo T. Crowley, general agent for the St. Paul bank.

Two general causes are responsible for the delay in closing these loans. Some farmers in the state owed more money than their farms would sell for since the decline in prices; and the land, for that reason, is not sufficient collateral to secure loans large enough to pay the total indebtedness. The Land bank approved loans as high as possible and will close the loans if the farmers' creditors will scale down their claims so that they can be paid from the bank's loan.

The Land bank does not ask that the creditors reduce claims nor assist in the scaling down. Reduction of claims is a business arrangement between the farmer and his creditors. The Land bank can make loans only as required by law which restricts the size of the loan to the amount of 75 per cent of the fair value of the farm. Creditors who hold claims aggregating more than this amount can block the loan if they refuse to scale down their claims and prefer to resort to forced sales for collecting their money.

Another class of loans is held up because applicants do not furnish the needed records of title, tax, or indebtedness. Such delays can be removed by the farmers themselves. Great tracts of Michigan lands have at one time or another been owned by lumber companies, whose chief interest in the land was the removal of the standing timber. The disposal of this land after lumbering was incidental and little attention was paid to the matter of giving a perfect title to the new owner. Lands owned in partnership were passed to new owners by deeds which only one partner signed, and other similar defects in title are common.

Nearly one-half of all the loans actually closed in Michigan in 1933 were completed in December. The Land bank sent $1,424,000 into Michigan last month. Total loans for the year were $2,700,000.

Mr. Crowley says the Land bank is operated under federal laws which are strictly enforced, but that all officials of the bank will make every effort to speed the $18,000,000 of approved loans into Michigan.

Make the Pennies Larger

WHEN James Buchanan was President and tall beaver hats were in vogue; when gentlemen wore broad cravats and ladies wore hoop skirts, the pennies they tossed to children were as big as quarters. But the cart-wheel coppers your grandfather got for keeping his lace collar clean were not as big in buying power as the pennies of today.

A penny then might buy a pastry, or ten of them take one to the Fair, but your great-aunt and great-uncle couldn't have gone to a movie at any price.

Sixty years ago the ladies could go shopping for dry goods and buy silks that would make you green with envy, linens that were linens and broadcloths that beggar description. But what their favorite store did not have they usually got along without.

You can pick up your daily newspaper and in fifteen minutes you can know what the different shops are offering in fabrics, patterns, varieties and qualities that great-grandmother never dreamed could be gathered together under any conditions.

Times have changed, and so have merchandise and business methods. One of the influences that has helped to bring about so much of change, that has helped to multiply opportunities and increase the spending size of our pennies is advertising.

Every merchant, every manufacturer knows that advertising materially reduces selling costs by increasing the demand for and the distribution of the products of hundreds of thousands of mills. Indeed, many of the things we count today as necessities or simple luxuries could not be made and sold at their reasonable prices except as advertising has created a broad market for them, making millions of sales at little prices and little profits.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"The Original Boy Scout"

COL. J. W. REDINGTON'S friends of today in California know him as a former newspaper publisher and superintendent of the printing office at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, but half a century ago he was "the original Boy Scout." At least that was the title once conferred upon him by no less a person than Gen. O. O. Howard, one of the most successful campaigners of the old Indian-fighting days, who wrote of him:

"He served under my command as a volunteer scout and courier during the Nez Perce and Bannock Indian wars of 1877 and 1878 and also as one of Farrow's Scouts against the hostile Sheepeater Indians in 1879. He rendered very efficient service for, being a lightweight youth, he was able to get many more miles of hard riding out of a horse than could a heavy man. By coming through under cover of darkness he brought in dispatches that kept me in close touch with Captain Fischer's Scouts far in advance, and I well remember how our pickets were instructed not to shoot when they heard his 'Yip! Yip!' signal coming out of the darkness as he approached our camp. The Boy Scout organization did not exist in those days, but certainly Jack Redington was the original Boy Scout."

At the age of sixteen young Jack Redington ran away from his home in Massachusetts to seek adventure in the West. He soon found it, for the next spring after his arrival in Salem, Ore., the Nez Perce Indian war broke out.

On the Fort Hall reservation Capt. S. C. Fischer was enlisting a company of Bannock Indian scouts for service against the Nez Perces and the young easterner obtained permission to go along. A few days later young Redington found himself in the company of fifty Bunnocks, almost as wild as the hostiles they were going out to fight, and only two other white men, Captain Fischer and another scout named Gird.

Then followed his career as a scout for Howard in the epic chase of Chief Joseph's Nez Perces which ended far up in the Bear Paw mountains of Montana where General Miles held the Indian chief at bay until Howard and his weary troopers came up to take part in the surrender of the "Indian Napoleon." The next year Redington was again in the field in the Bannock campaign and the following year he was with Lieutenant Farrow when that young officer and his party performed one of the most brilliant feats in the history of the American army in running to earth the band of renegade Indians known as Sheepeaters.

After this campaign Redington drifted back into Oregon and started on his career as a newspaper publisher which made him one of the best known editors in the Pacific Northwest.

Champion of the Santa Fe Trail

IN AUGUST, 1846, Tom Tobin, scout and guide for Gen. Stephen Kearney, while carrying dispatches from Santa Fe to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., made the trip of 830 miles in a little less than 11 days, averaging better than 75 miles a day. That was considered a great feat of long-distance riding, but Felix N. Aubrey, French-Canadian hunter and trapper, declared that he could have covered the same distance in two-thirds of that time.

When his statement was challenged, Aubrey offered to back his words with money and the result was a wager of $5,000 with no restrictions as to the number of horses he might use. All he had to do was to cover the distance from Santa Fe to Independence, Mo., in seven days and eight hours.

In preparation for his trip Aubrey selected six good horses and had them led with eastward-bound army wagon trains, which he would overtake.

For the first leg of his journey Aubrey had selected a blooded racing mare, which he pushed to the limit of her endurance, confident that he would overtake the train lending his first remount before it had gone 100 miles from Santa Fe. But the train had traveled faster than he anticipated, and it was not until his game little mare had staggered past Wagon Mound, 150 miles from Santa Fe, that he sighted the train.

Stopping only long enough to jerk the saddle from his tired mare and clap it on the fresh horse, grab some food that was handed him, so he could eat it as he rode, Aubrey sped on. His next stop was at a ford on the Arkansas, since known by his name, where he took time out for a few hours' rest. Then he entered on the most perilous part of his journey. The country ahead of him was overrun with hostile Indians and he did not dare to stop for sleep until he had overtaken a wagon train. During the whole journey Aubrey stopped for sleep only three times.

Several times he was pursued by Indians and only the fleetness of his mounts saved him from capture and death. But he made the journey safely and in five days and fourteen hours after leaving Santa Fe he rode into Independence. He had covered the same distance as Tobin in just a little more than half the time required by Tobin and he had used only seven horses as compared to Tobin's nine. Not counting time out for sleep and meals, the French-Canadian had averaged six miles an hour for the entire distance, a feat of endurance that has few duplicates in history.

Fruit Cake of High Quality

Many Ways of Making It, but All Have One Common Foundation—Liberality in Fruit for the Mixture Is Indispensable.

The other day, says a writer on home economics, some one asked me to define different types of fruit cakes according to their native origin. I quite blithely answered, "Why, certainly! English fruit cake is usually dark and southern fruit cake is usually light!" Then, upon looking up recipes in numerous books in my collection, I discovered that I had been too quick in my response. I was answering out of my experience in English and southern homes. I finds that the cook books do not agree with my own experiences and so I think I shall have to designate my fruit cake recipes in some other way, perhaps by their color.

While fruit cake recipes vary, they are all alike in one respect—they must contain plenty of fruit. The mixture which holds them together may be flavored in a variety of ways, and these flavorings are not only responsible for the variation in taste but also for the variation in color. The fruit content varies from the simplest type, which contains only raisins, to the most elaborate, which may have citron, apricots, pineapple, figs, currants, dates, or cherries, candied fruit peels, and almonds or pecans in addition. Old fruit cake recipes call for brandy or sherry to furnish the liquid. In the absence of these you will find fruit juices, cider, jelly, and coffee useful.

No matter what type of cake you decide to make, you must give it a long, baking or combined steaming and baking. Some people find that the easiest way to bake a fruit cake is to steam it first! It will take about two and a half to three hours steaming and then it may be finished by taking an hour longer in a slow oven, to dry it out. A reader asks me to mention the type of utensils used when cakes and puddings are steamed. A regular "steamer" is, of course, easiest. Anything put in this type of steamer must be tightly covered with tin or oiled or parchment paper, or cellophane, held tightly in place by a rubber band or a string. If you haven't a steamer, you can easily manufacture one by using a large kettle and placing your puddings or cakes on a trivet or rack. You will have to renew the water more often in this makeshift arrangement, but it will be perfectly satisfactory.

Naturally the length of time for baking depends upon the size of the cake. Very small cakes will bake in an hour and a quarter, while the large cakes take as much as three hours. To prevent its browning too quickly, it is sometimes covered with paper, or if you are using a glass baking dish you may use the cover which comes with it. After the mixture is in the pans you may decorate the top with candied cherries and almonds in artistic arrangement.

I wonder if you have seen the ready-to-mix and bake fruit cake mixtures which have come on the market? Fruits and nuts of excellent quality cut in large pieces, as they should be for good and true fruit cakes, are combined with the dry ingredients ready for you to add the liquid. One of these products comes in a pan which is lined with paper into which the cake mixture may be put back and baked. This pan may also be used with its cover for storing the cake. You will also find excellent ready baked fruit cakes in fancy boxes suitable for Christmas gifts.

One of my friends, an expert, who is the owner and manager of a well-known restaurant, told me a very interesting thing about keeping fruit cakes. After the cakes are baked and put away for storage she covers them with a layer of brown sugar, which keeps them moist and develops the flavors. I am passing this very valuable hint on to you. And don't forget that the sooner you make your cakes the better they will be at Christmas time!

Dark Fruit Cake

1 pound candied apricots.
1 pound candied pineapple.
1 pound candied cherries.
3 pounds seeded raisins.
1 pound currants.
½ pound raw almonds.
½ pound flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
½ teaspoon cloves.
1 teaspoon nutmeg.
½ pound butter.
6 eggs.
1½ cups cider.
1 glass jelly.
Yield—10 pounds.

Cut into thin slices the citron, pineapple and apricots. Cut the cherries. Wash the raisins and currants and dry them. Blanch and chop the almonds. Mix these ingredients together. Sift flour with baking powder and spices. Combine fruit and flour mixtures thoroughly. Cream the butter and sugar. Add the egg yolks and then the cider and jelly alternately with the fruit mixture. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold them into the fruit mixture. Grease the bottoms and sides of glass baking dishes and fill about three-fourths full. Decorate tops of cake with candied cherries and almonds. Cover and bake in a slow oven, 275 degrees Fahrenheit, 1¼ to 3 hours. The length of baking time will depend on the size of the baking dishes.

White Fruit Cake

1 cup seeded white raisins.
½ cup sliced orange peel.
½ cup sliced lemon peel.
½ cup sliced citron.
1 package shredded cocoanut.
1 cup blanched almonds.
2½ cups flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
¼ teaspoon salt.
½ cup shortening.
1 cup sugar.
3 eggs.
¼ cup sherry flavoring.
½ cup orange juice.

Wash raisins and drain well. Place raisins, fruit peels, cocoanut and coarsely chopped nut meats in bowl. Sift flour, baking powder and salt over fruit; mix fruit through the flour with fingers. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, then beaten eggs. Add flavoring. Stir in fruits and flour mixture alternately with orange juice. Pour mixture into one large or several small greased tins. Bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees Fahrenheit. Makes three pounds.

Honey Fruit Cake

2 pounds raisins.
1 pound currants.
½ pound citron.
¼ pound candied orange peel.
¼ pound candied cherries.
½ pound blanched almonds.
½ pound flour.
6 eggs (well beaten).
1 cup sour milk.
1 cup honey.
½ cup currant jelly.
1½ teaspoons salt.
2 teaspoons nutmeg.
2 teaspoons cinnamon.
¼ teaspoon cloves.
1 teaspoon allspice.
1 teaspoon baking powder.

Chop fruit and nuts and dredge with one-half cup flour. Cream shortening and sugar until light and add the eggs, sour milk, honey, jelly. Mix thoroughly. Sift the remainder of the flour with the salt, spices, soda and baking powder and sift into the egg mixture. Beat until smooth and stir in the dredged fruit and nuts. Pour into well-greased baking dishes. Bake at 275 degrees Fahrenheit for 2½ hours. One-half hour before the cakes are done remove from the oven, brush over with honey and decorate as desired. Return to the oven to finish baking. Cool and then place covers on baking dishes, and if allowed to ripen three weeks or longer the cakes will be better. Makes nine pounds.

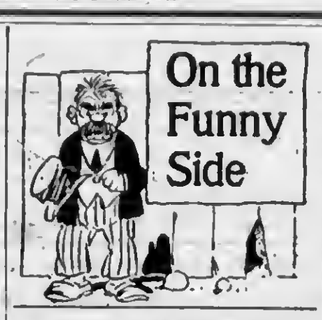
Young Hitlerites Told How to Choose Wives

What kind of a girl should a true-blue German Aryan marry? As first aid to ardent young Hitlerites about to venture into matrimony, the Berlin Das Wissen der Nation (Nation's Wisdom) publishes a series of recommendations designed to ensure the purity of the Germanic race.

This weekly recommends only blonds with blue eyes, an oval face and white skin. The Nazis are warned against brunettes of obviously Mediterranean origin, with long torso and short legs, black hair and thick, sensuous lips.

But the recommendations of Das Wissen der Nation are even more drastic. Suspect also are sophisticated society girls, actresses, breakers of sports records and even young women who earn their living in the liberal professions.

The heroic Aryan is urged to choose a good, industrious and pure girl, who is known to be an adept housekeeper, with an affection for children—"even though she may be stupid."—Literary Digest.



TREAT FOR THE WIFE

The hour of midnight was just striking as the householder crept stealthily down the stairs. With a quick movement he snapped on the electric light and gasped as his eyes fell on a burglar tampering with his safe.

"Jove, a real burglar!" he smiled. "Wait a minute, will you?"

The burglar prepared to make his escape.

"While you call a copper, eh?" he said, "Not me!"

"No," said the householder. "Only wait while I call my wife. She's heard you every night for 15 years, and it'll be a real pleasure to her to see you at last."

FIND THE TREND AND FOUNDATION OF CHILD FEARS

Despite the definite trend toward realism in modern life, children still are afraid of such supernatural manifestations as giants, witches, monsters, ghosts and devils. Mystery and gorilla movies, spooky stories, radio crime programs, and even lurid pictures in newspapers produce distinct fears, while kidnaping returns—even before the sensational kidnaping wave of the past two years—a large element of dreaded fear for many children.

These findings are among the many derived from an exhaustive study of children's fears, desires and fancies just completed by Dr. Arthur T. Jersild, assistant professor of education and research of the Child Labor Development Institute, Teachers' college, Columbia university. Doctor Jersild studied 400 children, ages five to twelve, in public and private schools of New York. He delved into their dreams, asked them what they would do if they had a million dollars, and whether they preferred to be boys or girls.

One of the most surprising findings was the fears of the occult, the supernatural, of mystery, skeletons, corpses and deaths. Twenty-one per cent of the children classed these as their "worst fears." The younger children expressed fear of animals, while seven per cent were primarily afraid of robbers, kidnapers and others of the criminal class. Doctor Jersild said the fear of kidnaping had been engendered by conversation and stories, often by parents, for all but twelve of the 400 children had been interviewed before the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, early in 1932.—Literary Digest.

Those "Good Old Days"

As a sanitary measure Anazarchus, a pleasure gourmet in the suite of Alexander on his Asiatic expedition, made his slaves wear gloves to knead the dough for his bread, and furthermore, the Greeks and Romans, who dipped down in the dishes and ate with their fingers, wore gloves at the table, not only to keep their hands clean, but also to keep from drawing back a blistered nub—food was served hot in those days.

Priests wore gloves at mass in order that they might offer the holy sacrifice with clean and pure hands, while Roman "pancratiastae," boxers and wrestlers of the arena, wore them spiked with iron that they might better claw the eyes out and ears off of their opponents.

DISCUSSES GOVERNMENT

The editorial page of the current edition of the Nebraska Farmer discusses government plans and expenses. The Farmer approves of the distribution of food at government cost among persons who are unable to find work, and approves of projects to create jobs for persons forced into idleness, but it frowns on the establishment of scales of wages out of harmony with the times and above those that farmers can afford to pay for help.

Touching some inconsistencies, the Farmer comments: "We know it is not in the public interest to create power projects where there is not enough demand for the power to pay for the cost of producing it. We know it is not in the public interest to create irrigation projects and bring vast acreage of land into production at the very moment when untold millions are being raised and spent to reduce the number of acres that are now in production. We know it is not in the public interest when the government through these enterprises goes into business in competition with private business, thus taking away the taxable value that now exists in private property and substituting for it public ownership that pays no taxes. These are simple facts that the least schooled can see if the mind is not too warped by a preference for state socialism and all that it implies."

A FEDERAL PROMOTION

Now the government is spending a million dollars of taxpayers' money to establish and maintain an electric home and farm corporation, the objective being: To help finance the consumer who wants to buy standard electrical equipment; to obtain reductions in power rates; to work for cheaper electrical devices through research and education.

The bewildered taxpayer may legitimately inquire why the government should help finance the consumer of electrical equipment any more than the consumer of automobiles, steam heating equipment or other devices. And is it the business of the federal government to work for cheaper power rates any more than for cheaper gas rates, water rates or gasoline prices?

There might be little objection to such enterprises, even to a study of the utilization of old razor blades or the promotion of sales of hot water bottles, if they did not call for heavier and heavier demands for funds. But there is a limit to the ability of the people to support these promotions. It is already questionable whether this limit has not already been reached.—Grand Rapids Press.

ITEMS OF RECOVERY

Two major factors likely to impede rapid recovery in 1934 will be found in the threat of unsound money and doubt about profits in industry. We now have nearly ten million unemployed workers in this country. Formerly one-half of this number were engaged in the production of durable goods, such as machinery, buildings, automobiles, furniture, bridges, ships, locomotives, cars and a long list of articles made of the metals, lumber, stone, clay, glass and cement. If these five million producers of durable goods could be set to work, the five million producers of services and consumers goods would immediately find employment.

In normal times there is a demand for 40 billion dollars worth of durable goods. This has shrunk to about 16 billions. Offsetting that is the government $3,300,000,000 building works program. Financing the production of durable goods come from faith, faith in the belief that loans made to industry will be repaid in sound money, faith that profits will guarantee industry sufficient to provide for the repayment of loans. Until this has been accomplished we can hardly hope for a full return to prosperity.

ONE OF THOUSANDS

As a good example of what happens when you get in the clutches of a loan company, let us cite a case that occurred in Pontiac, last week. The Home Auto Loan Co. was granted a judgment of $108.48 against a Pontiac man, who was also ordered to pay court costs. The man originally borrowed $250 on his furniture. He has paid up to date in interest and principal $301.60. Several months ago he obtained an injunction to restrain the company from seizing his furniture. Under the state law, loan companies have a right to collect interest at 42 per cent. After you have noted the above figures carefully you realize the interest amounts to nearly as much as the loan so beware of loan companies. You pay dearly for the accommodations and they show no mercy once you are in arrears.—Rochester Clarion.

SHIP BY RAIL

For the first time the railroads are making a constructive effort to regain the short haul traffic business which has been going to the trucks in recent years. Recently the principal lines in Michigan announced a "door to door" freight service, which means that in all cities and villages the railroad will call for and deliver your freight without extra charge.

The country needs the railroads. They still constitute our major transportation system. They contribute in taxes for a large part of the cost of our educational structure. If we would retain the important service which they render to business life it is important that they be given proper support. Merchants and manufacturers, and all others needing shipping facilities, should keep this thought in mind while giving out their short haul freight business. It is a lonesome community that no longer hears the warning signal of an approaching train. Think that over.

CIVIL WORKS WORKS

The Civil Works Administration seems to have been one of the agencies of the government for the giving of employment over which it could exercise control, without its being impeded by the bureaucrats. So far in Michigan, it has made a decided change for the better by employing workers. The injection of its payroll into the incomes of the people of the state, has shown a result already in three ways. One is the reduction of doled support from taxes. Another is the expenditure of the money received directly by the recipients for their own expenses. The third is the impulse that has been given retail trading as a whole, not only by the actual facts of buying furnished by the newly-employed, but by the example afforded to others who could afford to buy, but were not doing it. Civil Works works.—Michigan Manufacturer & Financial Record.

CALL THEM BY NAME

What magic there is in being called by name, especially in a place where one does not live and have the associations which come from neighborhood ties. The merchant who is alert to know his customers who come from surrounding towns, and who can call them by name, and who sees that his salesmen have the same acquaintance, will draw them to his store.

A friendly interest in a customer and some knowledge of his surroundings and needs, helps both buyer and seller. And so we are coming to realize that it is not only the doctors and ministers and other professional men who should emphasize the personal note in their contacts, but the man who supplies the every day needs for our homes and families should understand those he is dealing with.

WATCH OUT FOR THIS!

When the people voted a year ago in November for the 15 mill amendment they made an exception for tax levies to pay debts previously incurred. New debts incurred directly or indirectly after November could not become a charge on general property except under the 15 mill limit. The proposed redraft of Article X of the state constitution which the legislative council now has under consideration would reenact the 15 mill amendment, but note this:

If the 15 mill amendment is reenacted next November and the language remains the same as is now proposed, debts incurred between November 1932 and November, 1934, would then be outside the 15 mill amendment. Is it possible that someone is trying to slip over a fast one?

Despite a reduction in tax rates and an increase in tax delinquencies the last year, the city of Manton is starting the new year with a cash balance of $382.95 after having retired all of the city's bonded indebtedness. A survey by the Michigan Municipal League disclosed that Manton had accomplished the greatest tax reduction in the state in 1933. The tax rate of one per cent in 1933 also will be levied in 1934.

At an estimated loss of $35,000 including tools, machinery and trucks, the county highway garage at Cheboygan burned down Thursday night. The fire apparently was under way shortly after the men left the building at the end of the day. The origin of the blaze was attributed to have been caused from short-circuited wiring on one of the trucks as the first fire center was at the front end of a truck. The equipment was partly covered by insurance.

An appeal to farmers and sportsmen to feed game birds in winter "pinch periods" of severe weather has been broadcast by the state conservation department. Quail, pheasants, Hungarian partridges and ground-feeding songbirds can be brought through periods of deep snow, severe cold or sleet with little danger of loss if food is provided for them, the department says in urging widespread winter feeding. Corn, wheat, buckwheat and other grains may be used. Corn in the shock forms a natural cafeteria.

A packed house at the Methodist vesper service last Sunday listened to the beautiful carols service, given by the union choir. Everyone pronounces it very beautiful, and for once, postponing an affair did not spoil it. The very inclement weather and difficult highway conditions prevented the attendance of some from abroad, but others very graciously offered to take their places. The charm and beauty of Miss Carey, acting the part of the angel visitant, was much spoken of. The various details of the program have already been published. The church expresses sincerest appreciation to all who so graciously helped. Mrs. Belding and Mrs. O'Brien were very successful in the management and conducting of the affair.

URGE SOLONS RETURN PASS WORKS PROGRAM

Democratic Leaders Seek Adoption Administration Bills

Democratic leaders of the state, called into conference by Governor Comstock, issued a demand that members of the legislature, "regardless of their political faith," return to Lansing January 3 to pass legislation enabling the state and its municipalities to participate in the federal public works program.

A resolution containing this ultimatum was adopted by the group after the governor had branded members who had opposed the program "slackers and traitors." Particularly, the resolution urges that the governor's $30,000,000 institutional building program which the senate snubbed, be approved, but passage of bills similarly empowering municipalities to borrow federal funds for public works projects was also demanded.

Shirtwaist Dress Plays Dual Role

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ALWAYS doing the unexpected—fashion is just like that. This time it is the revival of the shirtwaist dress which is causing no end of enthusiasm and excitement among followers of the mode.

Of course, if you have in mind the old-fashioned interpretation of the shirtwaist dress, that it is a prim waist-and-skirt frock neatly tailored of serviceable material, as should be a strictly utilitarian garb doing solely office, sports, schoolroom and other practical service, you have but half sensed the newer meaning of the modern shirtwaist costume.

The shirtwaist dress as now is may be utterly informal or it may take on formality of highest degree. The dual role which the modern shirtwaist costume is playing is entirely a matter of the material which fashions it.

To be explicit, the smartest and most out-of-the-ordinary evening gowns of the season are shirtwaist frocks whose skirts are of either velvet, satin or crepe in black or some one or other of the very new dark tones which are so voguish at present. Of course, to be formal, these skirts go to great lengths, touching the floor, and even boasting trains as most of the latest night-life frocks do. These form-fitting, statuesque, slenderizing skirts set off by contrast the brilliancy of the glamorous bodices that top them. The same being tailored in strictly shirtwaist fashion of resplendent gold or silver tissue cloth.

The figure sketched in the foreground of our illustration is just such. The skirt is of regal black velvet. The shirtwaist is just what it claims to be—strictly a tailored shirtwaist. It is its material which performs the magic—a perfectly exquisite gold lame of tissue weave with a glitter of rhinestone buttons down the front. All of which bespeaks the sumptuousness which is characteristic of current evening modes. The little halo of velvet with its gold-mesh veil is also a necessary evening luxury.

Sometimes the theme of the formal shirtwaist is varied in that it is fashioned of gleaming satin perhaps in the new gold color or some other equally as effective hue. These satin types are often graced with twists of self-satin about the neckline or perhaps they develop a cowl drape or a soft berthn effect. Their sleeves are also apt to take liberties in that they are short and are ingeniously pleated or gathered into the armhole.

In the daytime the smart set is going about in shirtwaist frocks which are tailored to a nicety of black satin, observing meticulously the rules of patch-pockets, waist-length sleeves, neat belts and prim collars. The sketch above to the left in the picture conveys the idea—just the type of dress to wear under "comfy" fur coats.

When a daytime shirtwaist dress is not of black satin or one of the new ribbed silk variety, then it is almost sure to be of a mannish bright woolen, the newest thing in woolens being stripes. These gay stripes make up effectively as the shirtwaist frock centered in the group bears testimony.

DINNER ENSEMBLE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The latest style program calls for a matching wrap with the dinner gown. It may be a clever jacket or a cunning cape effect. In the instance of the costume pictured a cleverly flounced cape is chosen to carry out the ensemble theme. The trend to pinching fullness at the back is here emphasized in the arrangement of tiered flounces on the skirt. The hat with its gold mesh veil, the cape and the dress are all three of sapphire velvet.

TRIMMING TOUCHES AID TOT'S CLOTHES

Children's clothes can easily be made more attractive by touches of trimming. Bias-trimmed buttonholes, faggoting, feather stitching, narrow tucks and tiny crocheted edges give a smart, handmade look. A good thread in hollfast colors should always be used in sewing on clothes that must stand a great deal of rubbing and scrubbing.

Buckles are used to fasten most belts this fall. Large, simple buckles are put on many sports frocks and coats. Belts are either of the material of the costume or of leather. These buckles have cleverly concealed clasps. Most popular types are made of composition materials, either plain or with irregular carving that gives them a mossy appearance, in harmony with a similar trend in fabric weaves.

Parisian Designers Are Reviving Old Fashions

Paris designers have certainly become internationally minded. Furthermore, they wander as freely in time as in space, reviving the mode of the Renaissance, the 80s, the 90s, and even fashions as recent as the reign of King Edward.

It remains for the woman who finally buys and wears the clothes to keep her head amid all this embarrassment of riches, and decide whether she looks best as the figure in a Renoir painting, or in a Chinese coolie coat or a hobble skirt of the Edwardian era.

Dilkusha and Helm, two leading couturiers, liked the Renoir paintings. They made quaint tight-fitted bodices, buttoned right up to the chin, with long, tight sleeves, and skirts reaching to the floor. Dilkusha even revived the bustle, in her black moire dinner dress, draped up at the back in a puff.

Fur-Trimmed Frocks

Fur trims fashionable frocks this year in ways both old and new. The use of fur around throats and around heels has given the mode a luxurious finish not equaled in many years.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Charlevoix County Selected for Farm Housing Survey

While business men are takiag their January inventories, to see how they are to prepare for 1934, the farm families of Charlevoix county will be having another and most interesting inventory of their owa plants, the farm homes, through the medium of the rural housing survey to be conducted by the bureau of home economics in Washington, and the home extension agents in the various states.

Here in Charlevoix county the work will be directly in charge of Gladys L. Lahym, working under the direction of Edna V. Smith, state director of extension work, in Michigan. The survey has been approved as a federal civil works administration project, and the field work will be done by women who will be appointed from the re-employment rolls in the county. Employment is thus made available to those who need it while valuable information is collected as to the present adequacy of farm homes and the needs and resources for improvement.

"It is heartening for the men and women in farm homes to see that farmers are to be regarded again as consumers and employers," says B. C. Mellencamp, county agent here, in speaking of the survey, which is expected to begin locally January 2, 1934. "They have wanted new houses, or new rooms, repairs, furnaces and electricity. For too many years, they have had to budget their crop returns with the utmost care to provide for food and clothing, taxes and interest. In too many cases there hasn't been enough income to pay for the repairs that every good housekeeper and every farmer know are necessary to keep the property from running down, and there has been practically nothing for new equipment.

"The community in general, I feel sure, will be interested in the tabulations that will be made after the field survey. These will show farm house condition and, if they have adequate equipment.

"Not every county will be surveyed, but in those selected all farms will be visited. Full information will be obtained as to the condition of the house and equipment, and the need for repairs and improvement.

"Just after Christmas is the time when all women begin to think of fixing up their homes. For that reason I am sure the women here will cooperate with our field agents in every way. We recognize of course that this survey is only a foundation for what may be done in the future, perhaps only after several years have passed. But even if farm people can't see their way clear to making any improvements on their houses this year we want their full cooperation as we now make the survey which will give the facts as a foundation for future planning."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Charlevoix and Ironton

The series of sermons on Grace was interrupted early in December to allow messages in keeping with the Christmas season. Beginning next Sunday we will take up the series on Grace where we left it. Over a period of several weeks we considered the theme under the general subject, "Fundamental Fact About Grace." Next Sunday we will consider the theme in a wider sense under the subject "Salvation by Grace."

Last Sunday evening we began a review of Dr. G. Campbell Morgan's book "God's Plan for Man." The book is a very instructive one on the general theme of "Prophecy." Next Sunday evening the subject will be "The Dispensation of the Spirit."

The church school has undertaken a special program for the young people of the church. The young people's service will be changed from Sunday evening to a mid-week night. The regular service will take up the first part of the allotted time. After this service the remainder of the time will be given over to social activities. These activities will consist of games that are popular with the young folks and will be under the direction of a committee composed of the heads of three families. The committee will be responsible for light refreshments at the close of the evening's activities. The evening's program will last only two hours. It is proposed to begin this plan next week. The committee in charge will be Mr. and Mrs. Hiller, Wisenburger and Young.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page.

The passing of New Year's day brings us to the long stretch of winter which used to result in spring fever. With plenty of milk, of the fresh and canned fruits and vegetables which are to be found so abundantly in the markets of 1934, this ailment should disappear.

Oranges and grapefruit are fine in quality, plentiful and reasonably priced. Apples in variety are low in price. The grape and cranberry seasons are nearly over.

The markets are well supplied with fresh vegetables, including Brussels sprouts, broccoli, both new and old cabbage, celery, cauliflower, green beans, lettuce, mushrooms, peas and spinach in addition to the regular root vegetables.

AN EDITORIAL CREED

As a leave-taking of the reader at the end of one of his books, the late Walter Hines Page put down the words that follow, embodying the principles upon which he wrote as an editor:

"If any reader of what I have written shall find anywhere a single word of bitterness, I pray him rub it out. For I have not meant to write such a word. Sympathy for all, and for all tolerance; pity, for many, and for some affection; against ignorance and narrow-mindedness, war to the end; but bitterness toward no human creature.

"Nor have I ever meant to complain, for complaint furthers no man on his way. If the world does not please us, the least we can do is to try with cheerfulness to make it more to our liking, and, the harder the task the more good will we need."

FEEDING HOGS TO AVOID SOFT PORK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The so-called soft-pork problem—the feeding of soy beans, peanuts and other softening feeds, to hogs in such a way that a firm carcass will be produced, and involving factors aside from feed—is gradually being solved. Investigators of the United States Department of Agriculture, co-operating with several state experiment stations, have just published the second bulletin on the subject, known as Department Bulletin 1482-D, "Some Results of Soft-Pork Investigations, II."

Establishment of the fact that soy beans, as well as peanuts and other feeds, have a softening influence on hogs has made the soft-pork problem one of nation-wide importance. Soy beans have a wider adaptation, are produced in greater quantity, and are utilized in pork production to a greater extent than any other recognized softening feed.

Hogs fed mainly on soy beans, peanuts, rice polish, rice bran, or mast, generally produce a carcass that is soft or oily. Soft or oily hogs are difficult for the packer to handle. The dealer prefers to sell firm pork products to his customers because they hold their shape better, cut up better, and present a more attractive appearance. Lard from soft hogs often is of such consistency that it will not harden even in the refrigerator. As a result, farmers suffer a reduction in price of soft hogs averaging about 2 cents a pound.

It is of importance that means be devised for feeding these valuable feeds in such a way that they will produce a firm carcass. Such factors as age, sex, type, rate of gain, initial weight, thrift, previous treatment and breed, are regarded as having more or less bearing on the nature of the fat found in the hog carcass. Many combinations of these factors with different rations have been tested with negative results. In other words, the investigators have formed numerous conclusions on what not to do in feeding for firm carcasses. Such results are valuable in solving the problem.

One favorable conclusion recently reached, however, is that soy beans grazed with a supplementary ration of 2.5 per cent of shelled corn, with or without minerals, self-fed to pigs starting at weights of 115 pounds and over and making gains of approximately 40 to 90 pounds through a period of from six to eight weeks will produce firm carcasses in the usual case provided a subsequent gain in weight is made on corn with tankage 1.5 times the gain previously made on the soy bean—2.5 per cent corn ration.

It was also concluded that soy beans grazed with a supplementary ration of 1.5 to 2.5 per cent of shelled corn and with minerals self-fed to pigs starting at weights ranging from 25 to 85 pounds and making gains of approximately 40 to 75 pounds through a period of from eight to ten weeks produce, in the usual case, carcasses of a satisfactory degree of firmness when a subsequent gain in weight of 125 pounds or more has been made by the pigs on corn with tankage.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

LOWER PRICES IN SURPLUS OF COWS

New York Dairy Official Is Pessimistic.

"If we do not have another drought this summer, the manufacture of dairy products will increase, and this lower the farmers' return," said H. A. Ross, of the Borden company, at Cornell university's farm and home week. "The farmer has not heeded the trend in the supply of cows and today is facing the situation of having 11.8 per cent more cows than in 1929."

Doctor Ross predicts, however, no material reduction in the number of cows, and perhaps even a slight increase. "I cannot blame the farmer for not cutting his herd," he said, "because of the overhead expenses and the lowered cost of feed. But the situation today is serious. Butter is now going into storage rather than being drawn from storage."

Many people seem to think that with the present lowered prices, demand will increase. Doctor Ross indicated, however, that such might not be the case. He estimates that the buying power of the people is about one-half of that in 1929. This is due to both the unemployment situation and decreased wages of those who are working.

In New York state the farmers are facing the situation of store sales of milk as contrasted with route sales. If more milk is sold in stores, the farmer will receive less for his investment. He said that the basic situation could not be remedied now, but that the farmers could help by selling his herd and aiding the control of store sales.

Ration That "Fills Bill" in Variety of Proteins

Since some proteins are particularly rich in some amino acids, while others may furnish more of some others, one protein may supplement another. We know that every feed a cow eats, whether roughage or grain, contains some protein and different proteins.

It has been shown that the protein of alfalfa or legume hays supplements those of silage and grains. The protein of the high protein feeds supplement those of the grains. There is little supplementary value between the several grains.

From this an Iowa experiment concludes that where a cow is getting a ration consisting of plenty of legume hay, silage, and a grain mixture of 10-12 per cent digestible protein, her demand for protein variety is fairly well met. With mixed hay, the grain mixture should contain from 14 to 16 per cent digestible protein, while with non-legume hay it should contain 16 to 20 per cent digestible protein.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Why Milk Tests Vary

Milk tests vary from day to day due to perfectly normal factors, state specialists at New York State college, who have tested samples of Holstein and Jersey milk to determine effects of sampling on fat tests. Some of the factors are: Advancement of the lactation period of the cows, which means more fat in the milk; the amount of exercise the herd receives; completeness of milking; feeding practices; age of the cows; the breed; individual difference of the cows; the seasonal changes with higher tests when the temperatures are low and lower tests when temperatures are high during the heat of summer. In New York state two testers working independently will check within 0.1 per cent in 60 per cent of the samples they test. The Babcock test is not expected to give greater accuracy than this.

Methods of sampling have been held responsible for daily variations, and the recent investigation indicates the reasons why tests may vary even though all sampling is done uniformly. —Prairie Farmer.

Keeping Calves Healthy

Dirty feeding pails are often the contributing cause of an outbreak of common scours in calves. Avoid this by scalding the pails after each feeding. Allow the sun to shine on them during the day. Some dairymen keep a separate pail for each calf. Overfeeding is another frequent cause of scours. Feed around one pound of milk for each ten pounds of live weight, and during the first few days give the calf several feeds per day. The milk fed can be gradually increased with growth until the animal is getting around two to two and one-half gallons of skim milk per day. Begin giving the calf some ground grain or other concentrate as soon as it will eat.—Wallace's Farmer.

A little known sidelight on the occupation of Paul Revere, Boston's famous silversmith and horseman, is that he made and sold false teeth.

1934—Have you made your New Year's resolutions?

Mr. and Mrs. William DeJong of Resort district, visited with relatives here Monday afternoon.

ST. JAMES, B. I.

Owing to weather conditions during the past week our island has been isolated from the outside world. Several holiday visitors were held over in Charlevoix, but a break in the weather permitted them to return for the New Year holiday. After a perilous seven hours through ice and fog the gas boat owned by Ernie Smith of Charlevoix, brought the delayed mail and passengers.

We have experienced our coldest weather in 26 years at this time of the year. Roads have been impassable and many were confined to their homes for several days.

Marguerite McDonough is here visiting with her parents. She is a nurse in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McDonald returned to Charlevoix. They spent the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. A. Gallagher.

The Misses Marie and Raymunda McDonald and sister, Anna, are visiting their mother, Mrs. Ella McDonald.

The tug "Venus" has been unsuccessful in an attempt to get through the ice in the harbor for a contemplated trip to Charlevoix for freight.

Notice to Marion Taxpayers

I will be at the Charlevoix County bank the following two Saturdays, December 30 and January 6. L. E. McGhan, treasurer.—Adv. 52t2 pd.

START AIRMAIL DELIVERY TO ISLAND

FIRST CROSSING WAS MADE ON WEDNESDAY MORNING

Supplies and 5-Day Mail Accumulation Delivered Sunday on Fish Tug "Bonnie"

After being delayed several days at Port Huron by stormy weather last week, Wilmer C. Harder, Detroit aviator awarded the Charlevoix-Beaver Island airmail contract for the present winter, arrived here Monday afternoon to take over the route.

Preparations were made for the first crossing Tuesday afternoon, but the trip was postponed because of snow and poor visability. A heavy crust, covering a considerable depth of snow at the landing field, presented difficulty which was taken care of by a crew of CWS workers who Tuesday prepared a runway for the plane to take off. It is understood that in case snow continues to bother at the airport, landings in the future will be made on Lake Charlevoix off Parmelee's warehouse. St. James harbor will be used as a landing place at Beaver Island.

The abrupt close of navigation between the Beavers and Charlevoix last week left considerable supplies and a quantity of kerosene and gasoline accumulated here for delivery. Partial delivery of these supplies, also a five-day accumulation of mail was made Sunday by Ernest Smith with the fish boat "Bonnie." Taking advantage of Sunday's soft weather, St. James residents sawed a channel through the harbor to release the Sendenberg boat, which battered its way to open water, making a passage through which the tug "Bonnie" was able to reach the harbor. Smith arrived here on the return trip early Monday morning with a number of passengers. It is understood, however, that many others await at the island for transportation to the mainland. They are expected to come over on the McCann steam tug "Venus" which is coming here for supplies.

The first delivery of mail by plane was made Wednesday morning and this service will now be continued as long as lake navigation is closed.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Production Credit Association Being Set Up in Gaylord

At a meeting held recently at Gaylord and attended by farmers from Charlevoix county, a charter was applied to serve the needs of this section. A board of directors consisting of seven members was selected to handle the business of the association. Charles Shepard of East Jordan was selected as the director to represent Charlevoix county.

The Production Credit association is the local organization of farmer-borrowers and will handle the short term needs permanently. The headquarters of this association are at St. Paul, Minn. The capital of the organization comes from a fund appropriated by the Farm Credit Administration in Washington in each of the twelve land bank districts.

This new organization will take the place of the crop production seed loans and the livestock loans which were strictly emergency in their make-up.

Each borrower has to take out 5% in stock in the local association, which means if he wanted credit of $500, he would have to buy $25 worth of stock which gives him a voting franchise and a voice in the affairs of the association. The interest will be approximately 6% and not in excess of 6½%. The majority of loans made will be for periods ranging from one to 12 months. In no event are loans made for more than three years. Loans will not be made for less than $50. No individual will be permitted to borrow an amount greater than 20% of the capital of the association unless his application is approved by the Production Credit commissioner.

The borrowers may use the loans to pay the expenses necessary to produce corn, potatoes, beans, fruit or other cash crops or may be used to buy livestock and dairy cattle. The crop loans will be secured by first mortgage liens on growing crops and other personal property. The livestock loans will ordinarily be secured by a mortgage on the livestock and feed. Any loan made must be secured sufficiently to insure prompt payment when due. It is hoped that this association will be in shape for business by about the first of February. Further announcements will be made relative to this Production Credit association which will be of great interest to farmers who will need production credit this spring.

First Machinery School for Charlevoix County Farmers

Michigan winter sunshine can not be used to cure hay, but county agricultural agent, B. C. Mellencamp, says it is the best kind of weather for curing some of the troubles which are sure to occur during the next harvest season if the haying equipment is not repaired and adjusted before the rush of farm work starts.

A meeting has been arranged at which a specialist in agricultural engineering from Michigan State college will show Charlevoix county farmers how to repair and adjust a mowing machine so that it will be in first class shape for next summer's hay crop. Ways of adjusting and repairing other farm machinery will also be discussed.

The Charlevoix county meeting will be held at the old warehouse, Charlevoix Co-operative Association, Wednesday, January 17, beginning at 10 o'clock. The mowing machine will be torn down in the forenoon and assembled during the afternoon.

AT THE MOVIES

"Too Much Harmony," Musical Sensation, Wins Critical Okay

A few years ago Paramount produced an outstanding musical picture titled "Close Harmony." Since that time the screen has witnessed many more musicals, but none has excelled "Too Much Harmony," a sort of sequel to that first film, which will be screened at the Palace theatre Saturday and Sunday.

The audience seemed, from its enthusiasm, not to be able to get enough of the film, rather than "too much." A remarkable cast, headed by Bing Crosby; senational chorus routines, staged by LeRoy Prinz; "hit" songs, written by Arthur Johnston and Sam Coslow; and Edward Sutherland's talented direction have combined to form a truly exceptional picture.

Father of the Old Chisholm Trail

THE Old Chisholm Trail! What a wealth of romance is contained in those four words! What pictures they bring up of an era in American history that is gone forever—the pictures of thousands upon thousands of long horn cattle, driven north from the wide plains of the Lone Star state to the roaring cow towns of Kansas by as bold, as reckless, as brave a crew of daredevils as the world has ever known, the old-time cowboys.

The scene of many a story in our "Wild West" magazines is laid on or near the Old Chisholm Trail. "Cowboy singers" on the radio keep its fame alive. But who was the man who gave it his name?

Jesse Chisholm was the man. In his veins flowed the blood of red men and white. He was born in the old Cherokee Indian country in East Tennessee in 1778. His father, Ignatius Chisholm, the son of John D. Chisholm, the last hereditary chief of the Cherokees, was of Scotch descent.

Some time after 1850 Jesse Chisholm established a trading post not far from where the old California Trail crossed the South Canadian river in the present state of Oklahoma. Later on he had another trading post at Council Grove on the North Canadian, a few miles west of the present Oklahoma City.

By this time he had deserted his own people entirely and was an adopted member of the Wichita tribe with whom he went north into Kansas at the outbreak of the Civil war. For more than six years the Wichitas camped at the mouth of the Little Arkansas where the city which bears their name is now located. There they were visited by James R. Mead, a trader, who in the spring of 1857, was invited by Chisholm to join him in a trading expedition to the valley of the Washita in the vicinity of Fort Cobb and the former Wichita agency.

Mead accepted the invitation. So they loaded their wagons and drove to the crossing of the North Canadian where a short side-trip to Chisholm's trading post at Council Grove was made. Later Chisholm made other trips over this route from Wichita, Kan., to the valley of the Washita and to Chisholm's Trail. It became famous as the Old Chisholm Trail and it gave to Jesse Chisholm long after his death a renown which he little suspected was to be his while he was still living.

A Hero of Fact and Fiction

THE Battle of Monmouth was over and Sir Henry Clinton's British army had retreated toward Sandy Hook and crossed over to Staten Island. Hanging on their flanks were several detachments of Gen. Daniel Morgan's famous American riflemen. On the New Jersey shore, among the horses and wagons yet to be ferried over, stood a phaeton—perhaps General Clinton's own, thought the buckskin-clad rifleman, scowling toward it.

He noticed, too, that the phaeton was guarded by two sentinels, but the next moment he was dashing forward shouting for them to "surrender or die." One of them fled immediately, but the rifleman disarmed the other and ordered him to hitch two of the best horses to the phaeton immediately. As the frightened Briton did this, the other sentinel came running around the wagons only to receive a lather from the long rifle of the buckskin bravo.

The sharp crack of the rifle attracted the attention of British artillerymen across the channel, who immediately opened fire. But the Morgan rifleman rode safely away in his captured phaeton with his prisoner beside him and another daredevil escapade had been added to the career of David Ellerson.

Ellerson was a Scotchman, born on the high seas while his family were emigrating to Virginia. He won distinction as a sharpshooter and Indian fighter in Lord Dunmore's war in 1774, and a year later he marched away to Boston as a member of one of those rifle companies who bore the legend, "Liberty or Death!" emblazoned across the breasts of their buckskin shirts.

He became one of the picked men who made up Morgan's rifle corps, and as the boon companion of Timothy Murphy, he became an almost legendary figure in the annals of border warfare with the Indians and Tories on the New York frontier. With the redoubtable Tim he strides across many a page in Robert W. Chambers' historical romances—a hero of fiction as well as of fact.

Ellerson had many a hairbreadth escape from death, none perhaps closer than that day in 1779 when he was a member of the scouting party led by Capt. Thomas Boyd near Genesee during General Sullivan's expedition against the Iroquois. Their rash young captain led his men into a nest of Indians and Tories. "Full Tool, Davy!" shouted Tim Murphy as the rifles of the enemy began to blaze around them and "full feed" they did to such good purpose that they barely escaped the terrible fate which befell Boyd at the torture stake of the Senecas.

After the Revolution, Ellerson became a farmer in the Scholarie valley of New York. He died in 1831 and is buried in the Flat Creek cemetery in Gilboa, N. Y.

Rebuild the "Eternal City"

Systematic Beautification, and the Restoration of Historic Structures, Is Today Renewing the Grandeur That Was Rome.

Striking thrice with a gold hammer on the "Holy Door" of St. Peter's basilica in the Vatican City, Pope Pius XI inaugurated an extraordinary holy year. Normally the Holy Door is opened once every quarter century, but this time it has been sealed for only eight years.

Again to thousands of pilgrims and tourists, "all roads lead to Rome." Modern sky routes, too, now focus on this historic city. Many visitors will arrive at the 300-acre airport of Littorio; others will disembark from seaplanes at nearby Ostia.

"Today, new sights will greet the eyes of visitors to Rome because the eternal city is being transformed by a huge building and beautification program," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "With a metropolitan record of 26 centuries, the 'seven hills' have seen a dozen Romes, but modern Rome is as interesting as its historic predecessors.

"Rome today is to a very considerable extent a boom town. But it is more than that, because its city planners are archeologists as well as architects. 'Remember, and Onward!' seems to be the watchword of the day. Forums, the temple of Vesta, the theater of Marcellus, and a thousand other monuments of past grandeur are being preserved and restored with the same careful attention that marks the construction of a new ministry building or a group of up-to-date apartment houses.

"No longer will ancient palaces and the colosseum be rock quarries or lime kilns where precious marbles are burned. Classic Rome protrudes everywhere in the present city.

"New Rome has her catacombs—and plans for subways. The famous Diocletian baths are overshadowed by the biggest treasury building in Europe. Even the baths have been turned into a museum containing one of the richest collections in the city. Hadrian's tomb, or the Castel Sant' Angelo, now faces an immense new ministry of justice. The famous seven hills have been partially leveled or tunneled to answer the requirements of modern transportation. Other hills have been taken in by an expanding city, as preparations are being made for a future population of 2,000,000, approximately twice what it now has. Fifty new bus lines have replaced many trolleys.

"Ancient Rome is said to have invented uniform kitchenette apartments; the new city continues the policy by constructing blocks of modern apartments in the outlying districts. The Capitoline Hill district has been cleared and beautified with parks in order to display to better advantage the restored theater of Marcellus, the temple where the vestal virgins once kept their holy fires burning, and the $5,000,000 Victor Emmanuel II monument (symbol of unified Italy and New Rome).

"An abundant water supply is provided through ancient and modern aqueducts that come stalking in from distant sources. And lovely fountains, such as the Trevi, which spouts 17,000,000 gallons of water a day, have been illuminated by electric lights to enhance their beauty.

"Even the old consular roads that lead to Rome have been widened and resurfaced. A new road, the Via del Colli, carved through a former congested district between the Victor Emmanuel monument and the colosseum, has recently been opened by Premier Mussolini. Visitors will find also that they have to walk on the left instead of the right sides of the streets, or be told about it by the police. Some of the streets have become one-way thoroughfares to pedestrian traffic.

"Another change that pilgrims will find since the last holy year is that the Vatican is an independent city. Occupying only a little over 108 acres, approximately one-eighth of the size of Central park in New York city, it has its own civil government, coinage, postage stamps, telegraph and radio. The letters S. C. V. (Stato della Citta del Vaticano) appear on the tags of all motor cars belonging to residents of the Vatican City.

"This smallest independent government also has the world's shortest railway line, but one of the finest. It is only about 600 feet long, is double tracked, and has a beautiful station. A 300-foot tunnel under Vatican hill serves as the railway 'yards.' The three coaches belonging to the pope are unusually magnificent.

"The Vatican library, a portion of which collapsed on December 22, 1931, destroying several thousand valuable books and pieces of ceramics, has recently been repaired.

"That Rome welcomes the pilgrim and tourist from the United States is evidenced by the fact that Italian visas are not necessary for American passports."

GRAIN AREA AS SHOWN IN 1932

Figures on World's Cereal Consumption.

What does the world eat?

Its two thousand millions of population managed to consume in 1932, in one form of another, 158,000,000 tons of wheat, 59,000,000 tons of rye, 51,000,000 tons of barley, 82,000,000 tons of oats, 122,000,000 tons of corn, 105,000,000 tons of rice.

At any rate, that much was produced, according to the latest figures of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, of which the United States is a member, which keeps track of world production.

The statistical picture is carried through the first half of 1932, when reports from all over the globe showed 1,210,916 square miles devoted to the culture of wheat, corn, rye, barley, oats, rice and minor cereal crops.

The two billion individuals are shown to be scattered over an area of 315,000,000 square miles—about five and a half persons to the square mile. Only about one three-hundredth of the total area is devoted to the production of cereals—a total of 1,240,046 square miles.

The United States had the largest amount of land devoted to cereal production, a total of 84,125,000 hectares, a hectare being approximately two and a half acres. India was a close second with approximately 79,000,000 hectares.

Asia, with a population of 1,072,447,000, was far in the lead in respect to population, containing 53 per cent of all the people on the globe. Europe, without Russia, had a population of 380,585,000. Russia's population was estimated at 163,166,000, or just a little below that of North and Central America, which totaled 168,706,000. South America trailed the continents in population, with 84,538,000 persons.

The tables show little increase in the amount of land under cultivation during the last decade. The land devoted to wheat culture has increased about 10,000,000 hectares over the period from 1923 to 1927, but rye, barley and potato acreage has remained stationary. There has been about a 5,000,000 hectare increase, however, in the land devoted to corn and a 3,000,000 hectare increase in the rice area.

By far the greater part of the world's land remains unplowed, the figures show, with a great amount of it not adapted to cultivation under present conditions.

Mind-Reading Machine

The old story about the walls of jerry-built houses being so thin that you could hear your neighbor changing his mind seems likely to come very near the truth.

A machine invented by Dr. Alexander Cannon records any mental reaction, and consists of flexible tubes which are attached to a human subject.

The reactions of the brain are recorded on graph paper. Simple emotions—like surprise, love, hate, are recorded, and the machine also registers mental fatigue, the capacity of the mind, reaction to tension or concentration, suicidal tendencies, and whether the subject is telling the truth or lying.

Among other things, it shows that waltz music is soothing, and that it relieves asthma by inducing regular breathing. It is also claimed that it proves telepathy to be a physical fact.

MADE BLIND BY "GOD OF MONEY"

Of course, it is true that few men love, and slave for money for its own sake. What they desire and seek is what money will buy—comfort, ease, luxury, security, place and power. Others are drawn by the fascination that they find in the game of money-making, and to many it is only a game, calling for skill, nerve and courage on the part of those who play it. It is not so much "the love of money" that is "the root of all evil" as the love of and absorption in those things for which it stands, and which it will buy. These soon, and very naturally, become the soul's ideals, above which it is impossible for the soul to rise. What is really challenged by both apostle and philosopher is materialism as a life gospel or philosophy. "To be carnally minded" says St. Paul, "is death," but, "to be spiritually minded is life and peace." The contrast is between two types of life, and it is sharply drawn—between a real life, and a life that is, or issues in death. There is, according to the teachers, "a god of this world who hath blinded the mind," and done it very effectually. There have been people, and "woe" is pronounced on them, "who call evil good and good evil, that put darkness for light, and light for darkness." These, we may suppose, were men whose minds were blinded by "the god of this world." The final catastrophe is when a man ends by being proud of his money and of himself because he is rich. There is a message to all such, if any there be: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?" The issue is far broader and deeper than one might suspect from the way that it is so often dealt with. It involves the whole of man's life on this earth, his character, and his attitude toward realities, and his ability to recognize them.

That a man should have a little more or a little less money is not in itself a matter of serious consequence. We are not dealing either in bank balances or the lack of them. The problem that interested both St. Paul and Epictetus was not one of bookkeeping. The concern of both was with human souls. In the thought of these two great teachers man was essentially a spirit, or as Alexander Pope puts it, a "vital spark of heavenly flame." The choice for him, therefore, is whether or not he will or will not live in loyalty to his own divine nature, coveting only "the best gifts." Happy is the man who so lives that he is able to respect himself. Wretched is he who loses his self-respect. It is not easy to imagine a more deplorable loss. Perhaps it may be said the ideal life for any man is one which he can respect, and it may be reverence. The ideal always points to perfection and completeness. There is in it something of the absolute. To be without ideals is to be miserably poor. Again the poet says "man never is, but always to be blest." There must with every intelligent man ever be an "earnest looking forward" and upward. "Set me upon the rock that is higher than I"—so prayed the Psalmist. It is a wisely human prayer. The ideal, if it be truly such, must be "higher" than he who is blessed with a vision of it. It is shocking to think of what should be a soaring or climbing soul as a grubber for wealth as life's great prize. The great benefactors of mankind have been almost, if not wholly without exception, poor men. It is so. Grub street and its slaves that men go for inspiration.—From "Case and Comment," in the Indianapolis News.

Time's Changes

"In grandmother's day," says the Louisville Times, "a hairbrush and a cookie jar were all the equipment needed in child training." Today's mother, of course, needs a maid, a book on child psychology, an can-opener and a membership in a cultural-uplift society. — Ft. Wayne News-Sentinel.

A Little Bit Humorous

PRACTICAL APPEAL

"Some facetious members of the congregation," said the vicar, "have been in the habit of pulling buttons in the collection plate. May I suggest that, in view of a recent arrival at the vicarage, they substitute safety pins?"—London Tit-Bits.

He Didn't Want It

It was threshing time on the farm. One young girl who was serving dinner passed the coffee to an elderly man. He refused it, saying:

"No, thanks. I do not care for coffee."

As the girl turned away, someone bumped her elbow, knocking the cup from her hand and pouring the coffee down the elderly man's back.

"I told you I did not care for coffee," he said, without change of countenance or voice, and went serenely on with his dinner.

Not His Specialty

The President—The college laws which you have violated were made so plain that he who runs may read.

The Sophomore—But I'm not a runner, sir. I'm in the weight events.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Liked the Part

A high school class was rehearsing for a play. A lad whose part to a dramatic climax was to embrace his play sister said to the coach:

"Is there any time limit to the last scene?"

Hopeful

Conductor—Are you hurt?

Hilarious Victim—You bet I am! I knew my rabbit's foot would bring me luck. I'll bet you five to one I'm badly damaged.

Shining Light

"Very. Everything she says casts a reflection on somebody."—Stray Stories.

REALLY NOT HIS FAULT

Office Boy—Please, sir, can I have the afternoon off? My grandmother is dead.

Employer—Why, this is the third grandmother that's died since you've been here.

Boy—Yes, sir; I know, sir; but I I can't help it, grandfather will keep on marrying again.

Diplomacy

The Smythes were very fond of their baby.

"Which side of our house do you think he most resembles?" Smythe demanded of their bachelor neighbor.

The other was anxious to say the right thing.

"I don't know, old chap," he answered haltingly. "I can't see that he looks very much like the side of a house."

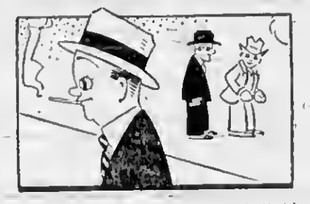
Points of Stress

"My boy Josh is a great help," said Farmer Cornstassel.

"How?"

"He criticizes my speeches. He says my emphasis is all right, but sometimes I put it on the penult instead of the antepenult. It's the first time I knew we had raised any such things on the place."

NOT THE SAME



"Then you can recommend Dobbs as a man of good character?"

"No, merely as a man of good reputation."

Irked

The train had stopped on the line and the guard was tired of answering stupid questions.

"What's the matter, guard?" came yet another query.

"The signalman up there has got red hair," replied the guard, "and we can't get the engine to pass the box!"—London Tatler.

Time for a Lot of It

Mrs. Nexlore—My daughter has arranged a little piece on the piano.

Old Grump—Good! It's about time we had a little peace.

A FINE APPOINTMENT

Whatever one may think of the liquor control bill signed by the governor Saturday, there is some satisfaction in knowing that Frank Picard has been re-appointed to head the new five-mun commission. He did a fine job with the old commission and was outspoken in his fight for moderation while the present bill was being written. Possibly there are other men in the state who could handle this thankless job as well as Mr. Picard but we believe it would be difficult to find one who could do the work better.—Hastings Banner.

SELF HELP

In the news columns of this newspaper will be found a story concerning a recently launched farm movement to assist in reducing the surplus of butter in the hope that better prices for the farmer-dairyman may result. The movement is nation-wide and Michigan is just getting started upon it. It is fostered by about all the important dairy and farm organizations of the state and officered by some of its best known citizens.

This newspaper has opened its columns in support of the self-help plan proposed and hopes that its readers will respond so far as possible.

The plan is a simple one, and not at all new. In fact, the Michigan beet sugar producers are using the plan with success. The issue raised by the dairymen is just as clear and just as logical as that of the beet sugar producers. In fact, there is one factor in the dairy campaign which cannot be found in that of the sugar producers. Milk is the best and cheapest food product on the market today. Beet sugar producers have been forced to teach the consumers that their sugar is just as good as the cane sugar produced by coolie labor under foreign flags. Everyone knows that pure milk and milk products are far superior to any substitutes manufactured from cocoanut oils from the south seas or made from cheap animal fats. To increase the use of milk and butter is to provide the family with far more palatable food which is much more nutritious and health giving.

To eat up the butter surplus will result in destroying the greatest enemy of the mid-west farmer and at the same time will give the consumer the most for his money. It is a "help yourself to help your neighbor" plan. It is self-help with a two-fold purpose. It involves no bond issues or combination of alphabetical characters, to produce immediate results. Every farmer who produces milk, whether made into butter or not, is a victim of this wicked butter surplus for the market price of every pound of surplus milk is set by the price of butter and that is set by the amount of surplus on hand. With an existing surplus exceeding one hundred million pounds and that total mounting daily, there is no hope for better dairying conditions unless we all help.

Eat more butter and live better. It will help the consumer because it will help the producer who in turn becomes a consumer of another's commodity.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

More than 1,500 Michigan corporations whose charters have been lost in recent years through inability to pay the state corporation franchise fees, will again be given the opportunity to engage in business because of legislation enacted at the last special session of the legislature.

The law was sponsored by the department of state. It provides that any corporation whose charter became void through non-payment of corporation fees, may, by payment of not less than one-quarter of the total delinquent fees prior to August 31, 1934, become reinstated and its corporate powers restored.

The measure, which became effective December 26, 1933, is in line with measures adopted earlier in the year in providing for the installment payment of delinquent property taxes. Notices to more than 1,500 companies affected, have been sent out by the department of state.

Every automobile factory in Michigan is favorably affected by the recent ruling of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles of Ohio.

Several months ago, Ohio ruled that starting in 1934 it would not permit driveaways to pass through the state unless each vehicle bore plates issued to a bonafide Ohio dealer. This would have prevented Michigan's principal product to have been transported through that state.

But as a result of a reciprocity agreement worked out between the two states, Michigan will recognize Ohio driveaways and that state will allow Michigan cars to be driven through Ohio when equipped with two plates. In the past it has been usual to use but one plate on a car being driven from factory to dealer but Ohio now announces that each vehicle must be equipped with two plates.

POLAR BEARS HAND HARBOR A DRUBBING

Scored 34 to 20 Victory Monday Night—Boyne Here Thursday

Outscoring their opponents by a wide margin, the Polar Bears handed the Harbor Springs Legionnaires a 34 to 20 trimming at Harbor, Monday night. It was the second win for the Bears over Harbor, their previous meeting on the local court resulting in a 19 to 16 victory.

Jumping into an early lead, the local tossers had Harbor down by a 15 to 4 count at the half. The last two periods were more closely fought, however, with the losers failing by only three points to equal the Polar Bear tally.

Every member of the local team shared in the scoring. Supernaw led with 8, Ikens scored 7, Beaudoin 6, Vic Smith and Joe Smith 4 each and Kipke 3. Quinn was best for the losers with 8 points.

The Polar Cubs defeated the Harbor seconds in an overtime preliminary.

The Polar Bears play at home this week, taking on the flashy Boyne City aggregation Thursday night at the high school gym. The program is a double bill with the reserves of the two teams meeting in the preliminary at 7:15. The main contest will start at 8:15.

Immunize All Pigs to Prevent Cholera

Advisable to Apply Treatment Before Weaning.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Swine growers in localities where there is danger of hog cholera may prevent future losses in their herds by immunizing the spring pigs against the disease, says Dr. T. P. White, veterinarian of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. Even if hog cholera has never occurred on the immediate premises, there is always a possibility that infection may be introduced into the herd through various channels when the disease exists anywhere in the neighborhood.

Pigs from immune sows have a degree of natural immunity against cholera, but this protection lasts only while they obtain all their nourishment from the sow. It gradually diminishes as the pigs grow and by the time they are weaned the immunity has entirely disappeared. It is therefore advisable to apply the treatment before the pigs are weaned in order to insure protection against the disease. The pigs are more easily handled at that age and the cost of immunization is considerably less than when they are older and larger.

Guard Against Injury Done by Common Worms

Corn ear worms are so common in this country that most farmers do not consider it worth while to make efforts to fight them, but tests conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture show that ears with long, tight husks suffer less than half as much injury as ears having short, loose husks.

Ears with long, tight husks are characteristic in some varieties, the department says, but there is enough variation in all varieties for a farmer to select for seed only ears with long, tight husks. In this way he can build up a strain having better husk characteristics.

Long, tight husks are also good protection from other insect pests of corn, such as the corn weevil, in sections where corn is stored in the husks. This is an additional reason for farmers to select their corn in the field, where they can give proper consideration to the type of husk.

Avoid Beetle Injury to Young Asparagus Plants

Beetle injury to young asparagus shoots may be avoided by cutting the crop clean every three to five days. In this way all the eggs deposited on the shoots will be removed before they hatch or soon afterwards. All volunteer plants should be destroyed and it will often pay to have a row here and there uncut to serve as a trap on which the beetles will congregate, feed, and lay their eggs. Here they may be poisoned with calcium arsenate or lead arsenate. After the cutting season, plants may be protected from beetle injury by two or three applications of calcium arsenate or lead arsenate dust, 5 pounds mixed with 85 pounds of hydrated lime.

Control of Weeds Most Important With Flax

The control of weeds is probably one of the most important things to consider in growing flax, says the Iowa State college. That is also one reason why newly broken soil free from weeds has generally been used.

Now that wilt-resistant varieties have been developed, wilt-free soil is only essential from the standpoint of weed control. In the last few years several large-seeded, wilt-resistant varieties have been isolated—Bison, Buda and Rio. Last year the Bison variety surpassed all other large-seeded varieties in the Iowa experiments. The Bison variety appeared particularly well adapted to early planting, the April 30 seeding yielding highest.

Many Scotch Pews Empty

Religious leaders in Scotland are becoming alarmed over the decline in church attendance. Congregations in some parts of the country are dwindling to only a faithful score or so. Churches capable to seating 500 or 600 worshipers are attended by a few dozen. It is predicted that a number of places of worship must be closed for lack of support.

Mogan, managing director of the state board of tax administration, in a recent interview. "These returns can be readily distinguished from the monthly returns by their color. NO CRIMINAL ACTION IN PELLSTON CLOSING

Audits Reveal Poor Management of Bankers, Says Washburne

Although audits of the People's State Savings Bank of Pellston reveal poor management on the part of the officers and directors, "there is no evidence of criminal action," according to Prosecutor A. T. Washburne. Reporting his findings to the county hoard of supervisors last Tuesday, Prosecutor Washburne stated there wns nothing upon which criminal prosecution could be based.

The board in its October session authorized an audit of the bank's accounts, seeking grounds for legal action to protect the county's deposit of $8,000 in the closed bank.

While a criminal suit cannot, be made, Mr. Washburne stated, "I believe we can show through the audit that the bank was insolvent back in 1931 when the county's deposit was made. On this ground we can proceed against the bank and the directors in a straight law suit to obtain the funds. It will be practically the same as proceeding under the bond, as the signers of the bond were the directors of the bank."

When the county's $8,000 deposit was made in 1931, a bond wns given by the hank. The bond expired January 1, 1933, while the bank closed in February.

LOWER FISH LICENSE INCREASED 1933 SALES

Purchases by Non-Residents Tripled During Last Year

A reduction in the fee charged non-residents to fish in Michigan wnters in 1933 almost tripled the number of tourists who purchased licenses, the department of conservation reported recently.

While in 1932 only 19,565 non-resident fishing licenses were sold by the department, the figure reached 56,000 in 1933, the department said.

This figure, it was stnted, almost equals that for the peak yenr of Michigan's tourist nnd resort business, 1929, when 64,000 non-resident anglers' licenses were sold.

LARGER SPORTSMEN'S CLUB AID DEPARTMENT

Represent Wider Viewpoint On Matters of Conservation

County conservation organizations with memberships frequently running well over the thousand mark are gradually replacing the functions nf the older hunting and fishing clubs in Michigan, according to George R. Hogarth, director of conservation.

The past three or four years have seen a radical change in the organization of conservation interests, Director Hogarth said. There are now seven county-wide organizations in the state and the number is increasing rapidly.

One nf the stumbling blocks in the path of conservation in the past, he said, has been the fact that there was no consistent local opinion. Clubs with small memberships and located in the same areas often disagreed among themselves. The small membership represented but a fraction of local sentiment. The administration of a definite and consistent conservation policy in such a section was hampered and often actually blocked.

Growth of county organizations has changed this. The department in areas where county leagues occur, is able to deal directly with one body that presents a fnir representntion of the sentiment of a large area. At the same time, because of larger resources county organizations are able to carry on effective projects, he said.

Marbles Aid Light Bulb

When toy manufacturers found a demand for lighted toys, such as pocket flashlights, miniature automobiles and motorboats, lamps for such purposes were unsatisfactory. They gave light, but lacked adequate control. What was needed most, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, was a tiny lamp that would emit a powerful spot of light, resist breaking and operate from a single dry cell small enough to be installed in the toy. Marvin Pitkin, Nela Park scientist, got an inspiration from watching boys play marbles. Some of the marbles were clear glass "aggies." After a little study an order was placed and a quantity of aggies soon arrived. When attached to the "dope fading these aggies provided just the light "spot" required.

Latest in Skate and Ski Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE than ever it is color of the most vivid sort around which winter sports costume design revolves. When you go skating or skiing no matter how dark and somber your divided skirt or your Norwegian-style trousers (either are in fashion) may be, the top of your costume, to be chic, must intrigue the eye with a riot of color. Jackets and sweaters (twin sweaters are the rage), likewise scarfs and caps and the gloves that go with them make animated color their theme.

As rampant as color is and as delightfully frivolous as current snow togs may seem in all appearance, when it comes to genuine practicality sports clothes as now designed are amazingly utilitarian, in that they are provided with all sorts of devices which add to their comfort and their wearableness.

For instance the girl skating in the foreground of the accompanying illustration is wearing a well-styled divided skirt of fine-wale corduroy which has a versatile waistband which can be so regulated by means of an adjustable slide fastener as to fit the waistline to a sixteenth of an inch. Instead of wearing trousers this smartly clad young enthusiast prefers a becoming divided skirt which has the graceful and feminine lines of a sports skirt, but with all the freedom of movement that trousers afford.

As to what is new and what is colorful in winter sports togs here you have it in this bright plaid scarf which has a plaid cuffed glove to match. This matching glove and scarf sets give skating costumes just that dash and splash of color which they need.

A very clever idea brought out recently is a vividly striped stocking cap, one long end of which is brought down to wind about the throat—a sort of a two-in-one proposition. To this scarf and cap combination is added a pair of matching gloves.

You will be perfectly charmed with the skating costume, shown to the left above, when we tell you it is made of black velveteen, the circular skirt of which is lined with red taffeta. The red appears again in the facing of the tie. The jacket fastens with silver clips and the Tyrolean knitted cap has a red feather. This costume is outstanding because of its effective color scheme.

For sheer practicality, with lots of style added, the model shown to the right scores high. It consists of sturdy Norwegian corduroy trousers topped with a chamois vest, a turtle-neck white sweater and a flannel jacket, the latter an extra protection when wintry blasts grow fierce. The chamois vest is bordered with a metal fastener so that it is easily put back to serve as a coat lining. It heightens the color effect when the vest is dyed a bright green or red although many are buying these chamois sleeveless jackets in natural color.

All-in-one, the line one is impressed with the tendency shown to make this season's ski and skate clothes as picturesque as possible even to the point of being spectacular.

DESIGN FUR COATS IN MEDIUM LENGTH

Women have a way of getting what they want. When they demanded fur coats in trotteur length, the designers got busy and turned out some extremely dashing models. These coats that are neither long nor short are especially suited to the youthful, boyish figure.

This season's versions include straight, belted or swagger types. Some have yokes. Collars are standing, Peter Pan or cravat. Sleeves relate the story that has been going the rounds this year: Pleats or shirring at the shoulders, fullness below the elbow.

Short-haired furs, such as lapin, galyak and kid are the happiest choices for the fur trotteur that is belted or swagger. Seal and krimmer make handsome straightline finger-tip length coats.

Trimmings Are Important in Late Paris Fashions

Feathers in the shape of a fringe for a flower, sparkling strass buttons and diamante belts trim the rich velvets and satins which build the evening mode. Satin and velvet buttons and bows ornament afternoon frocks; fur sleeves appear on wool ensembles.

One of the most striking frocks in the collection, worn by the blond French actress, Jeanne Aubert, is a dinner gown of pink satin which has a tiny cluster of pink rosebuds perched on each shoulder and is accompanied by a muff of the same pink rosebuds.

A black velvet evening gown has a high front decollete and a low vee back edged in diamante braid. A taupe velvet dinner gown is designed with a shoulder line edged in glycerinized coque feathers.

Velvet Bows

Tailored velvet bows in light tints add a new touch to the badness of dark wool frocks. Shell pink appears on black, blue-green on brown.

EXQUISITE CAPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Only alone could do a wrap like this. To create this lovely fantasy Ardanse poses tiny squares of ermine upon a foundation of chiffon transparent velvet, with beaded work of strass in the open spaces which glistens and sparkles in keeping with the snowy whiteness of the fur. Note the wide sparkling jeweled bracelet. A wide handsome bracelet is inevitable for evening chic. This is only one of many of the beguiling little capes which glorify formal attire this season. Another model which is so pretty and dainty and feminine you want it for your own at first sight is fashioned of thinnest and suppliest of white velvet, the same bordered all around with roses made of the identical white velvet.

Ostrich Capes

Short capes of fluttering ostrich, shimmering velvet of soft coque feathers are a favorite accessory for winter evening frocks, and luxurious waist length capes made of silver or gray foxes are among the richest evening wraps.

Four-Footed Servitors Still Valued on Farm

More than 15,000,000 American horses and mules still hold their jobs on farms, and Wayne Dinsmore foresees the return of these animals to first place in the esteem of good farmers, since "men who stick to horses and mules, planning their work wisely, raise just as much crop at much less cost."

Writing in Horse, Mr. Dinsmore observed, "As a matter of fact, the horse and mule, as a chief source of power, never left the farm. Some decrease occurred, it is true, but much less, so far as work animals actually in use are concerned, than is generally supposed.

"In 1918 we had about 17,000,000 head of horses and mules at work in harness or under saddle on farms; in 1932 about 15,500,000 were so employed. This is a decrease of about 1,500,000 at work, due to an increase of tractors from 246,083 in 1920 to 920,210 in 1930, and of motor trucks from 139,169 in 1920 to 900,385 in 1930."—Literary Digest.

NATION-WIDE DAIRY MOVE HITS SURPLUS

MICHIGAN JOINS 30 STATES TO HELP FARMER

Butter Surplus Seen As Blocking Farm Machinery, "Help Your Neighbor" To Be Slogan

A new venture in practical farm relief is about to be attempted in Michigan. A state-wide organization is now being perfected and made a part of a national organization in which are now organized the allied dairy interests of more than 30 states of the union. The objective of this organization is to increase the use of butter and other dairy products and thus reduce the tremendous surplus of butter now on the market and aid in increasing milk and dairy prices all along the line.

In this nation-wide organization are found representatives of every business engaged in the production, distribution, and sale of fluid milk and every business engaged in the manufacture, distribution and sale of dairy products, including butter, cheese, ice cream, infant foods and condensed, powdered and evaporated milks. All along the line in this formidable array of dairy soldiery, the battle cry is "ent up the surplus."

According to government authorities at Washington the surplus of butter in the United States now stands at approximately 100,000,000 pounds. This is quite a sizable churning but unless something is done quickly to reduce the growing surplus, the total will continue to increase.

Dairy Production Increased

"What is the matter with the dairy market?" farmers are inquiring. What is written here is not the product of some brain trust but the result of inquiries among those who are in a position to know. During recent years, dairying has been promoted throughout the United States. Boarder cows have gone to the butcher shop and those left behind for the milking line, by selective breeding and more intelligent feeding, have greatly increased production per animal. Then along came the slump in beef and other meats together with even a greater slump in the price of grains and feeds. The result is that a great deal of farm feed, heretofore marketed at the elevator or turned onto beef, pork and mutton, has been turned into the dairy herd as the best available means of marketing. As if to add to the plight of the dairyman, the consumption of the town dweller has fallen off materially for the very good reason there was no pay check in the family from which to buy milk, butter, cheese and ice cream.

The National Dairy council already formed proposes to do something about the emergency. Voluntarily its members have imposed a processing tax upon their own businesses. From the funds thus obtained they have gone out into the several milk producing states and formed organizations of distributors and producers as well as manufacturers. Their sole objective is to enlist the interest of the farmers themselves and the residents of the dairy states in a movement to increase the daily per capita consumption of milk and milk products. For the purpose of visualizing the movement they have chosen to speak in terms of pounds of butterfat.

Committee Organized

In Michigan the organization is known as the Michigan Butter committee. The state organization is made up of affiliated groups representing all phases of the dairy industry—producers, distributors, creamery operators, condensaries, cheese fnctories, farm organizations of all kinds including the extension service of Michigan State college.

According to reliable figures there are 170,000 farm families in Michigan. If one-half this number can be induced to increase their consumption of milk and butter, cheese and kindred products to an equivalent of one pound per family per week that increase alone will reduce Michigan's share of the 100,000,000-pound national surplus to the tune of 340,000 pounds each month.

What is happening all over America is indicated in the recent action of authorities in the territory supplying New York and Brooklyn. There an embargo has been placed upon milk from other states and there a similar embargo is said to be under consideratinn against the importation of dairy cattle. This merely backs up the flow of milk and floods the mid-west field, throwing just that much more milk into butter and cheese production thus again piling up more surplus.

Seek Consumption Increase.

The Michigan organization is just getting under way. One of its first efforts will be directed to securing pledges from Michigan families to use dairy products, especially butter, more liberally on the family table. The goal is to increase the consumption of butter by one pound per family per week or by using more milk equal to a pound of butter. This means that each family will consume an added pound of butter each week or will consume from 10 to 12 quarts of fluid milk either in cooking or on the table as a drink.

County farm agents of all counties where farm extension work is being carried on will head up the Michigan campaign. In other counties prominent dairymen will assume sponsorship.

Within the next few months the people of Michigan are going to hear considerable of this militant dairy organization. Newspapers, the radio, the lecture platform, farmers' clubs and organizations, parent-teachers associations, health groups, women's clubs and every other available means of securing publicity will be employed in teaching the lesson of self-help to cure the dairy distress—self-help because when the householders help themselves to an extra piece of butter or use an extra amount of cream or butter they also help the farmer to a better price for his best product.

To Feature Quality.

Better butter and better cheese will also be featured in the campaign. Good quality dairy products are spread thick. Unsavory butter is spread thin and unpalatable cheese is eaten gingerly. The gospel of good products of the dairy and their proper use will be dinned into the ears of the consumers of Michigan along with dependable information on the economy of health-giving milk products as against substitutes lacking their nutritive qualities.

It is significant that notwithstanding the fact that all dairymen supplying fluid milk to the Detroit market actually contribute from each milk check to boost the sale of their products to city dwellers it is now found necessary for another organization to spend money and effort to force back and teach the farmer to use his own. But this campaign goes farther than just that. It is aimed not only toward inducing the farmer to eat his own product, it is aimed also at inducing the people of the smaller cities to help their neighbor farmers by eating healthful, home-produced dairy products of the farm in preference to substitutes of foreign manufacture.

Cyclones carry off everything but the mortgage.

USE BUCHU AND GIN

Make This 25c Test.

It is as valuable in the bladder as castor oil to the bowels. Drives out impurities and excess acids which cause the irritation resulting in getting up nights, burning, frequent desire, leg pains and backache. On account of the alcohol use juniper oil from which gin is made. Ask for Bukets, the bladder laxative also containing buchu leaves, etc. After four days, if not pleased your druggist will return your 25c. You are bound to sleep better after this cleansing. F. J. Fessenden, Druggist, Charlevoix, and J. K. Gerris, Boyne City, say BUKETS is a best seller.

SERVICE— THAT WAS COXIE

By FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

IN THE eyes of the world, Coxie was somewhat of an enigma. He was one of the most successful life insurance agents in his district, a large metropolitan one, and yet he never seemed to get anywhere. That is, he never seemed to get anywhere in the sense that his less successful colleagues did. People in a position to judge estimated that Coxie's earning capacity, what with the policies he was writing from year to year, should have carried him to a high-figure income.

The jolly little fellow, warming his way up from office boy of the vice president of the huge company that employed him, had managed to capture the liking of the theatrical profession. Most of his policies were confined to the people of the play world. He had a way with them. He loved their emotional, volatile, friendly qualities and they in turn, because of those qualities, reacted with enthusiasm to Coxie.

He was so downright likeable. His round, good-humored face radiated amiability and something strangely deeper. Coxie had a soul. He felt it. And here let it be said that there were those in the profession who knew, almost reverently, that Coxie had a soul. These were the people who knew why Coxie, unlike his colleagues who drove cars and bought country homes, continued to live, a somewhat reluctant bachelor, in a rooming house and use the subway.

It was said of Coxie by one of these clients of his who had reason to know that he had a soul, that it was simply impossible for the little insurance agent to sit by and see a policy lapse for want of funds. His faith in human nature was so enormous, His confidence in the ultimate decency of human beings was infallible. If his confidence in these dealings had on various occasions been undermined, Coxie was the last to confess it. He went on believing and he went on digging into his own pockets to meet payments that for one reason or another could not be paid—and all these reasons were passionately poured into Coxie's sympathetic ears.

Men and women died blessing Coxie in sentimental and unashamed gratitude. Coxie had saved many a gay Thespian from a pauper's grave; and many a Thespian's child from the pinch of poverty.

And the little man himself, known to all Broadway, loved by Broadway, loving it in return, gloried in his job. Service . . . that was Coxie.

The fly in the ointment, however, was as big as a frog in the puddle. There were ragged hurting edges to Coxie's fiesta and the reason was Annabelle Evans. Strangely enough, she was not of the theater. She was a forelady in an artificial flower factory. She and Coxie had met at a theatrical benefit for disabled children and for twelve years had been unofficially engaged, as the saying goes.

Twice a week, Coxie took Annabelle, who was pretty in a birdlike fashion, to a theater or to a motion picture and on Saturday night spent the evening with her in the prim parlor of the prim little flat she shared with a prim little aunt. Coxie loved Annabelle and, in what was becoming a tearful, patient and almost hysterical fashion, Annabelle loved Coxie.

The fact of the matter was that Coxie could not afford to marry. That is, unless he permitted Annabelle to continue her work in the flower factory. That prospect was abominable to both of them. Not only did Annabelle dislike her work, but she had developed a curious racking cough from her surroundings.

Time and time again, Coxie, who bore with her heratings because he felt he deserved them, promised to conserve his income which in its entirety was more than sufficient for them to start life together in comfort and even a small degree of luxury. But year after year showed a deficit in Coxie's finances. He could not let a policy lapse and since his willings were in the name of the most improvident people in the world, constant and multiple were the demands upon him.

And then the inevitable happened. It had not ever occurred to Coxie that it could happen, but it did and that was probably the reason that this little man of indomitable good faith, good will and good heart, found himself crushed.

A rival for the hand of Annabelle Evans stepped in. It had all happened so quickly that Coxie walked around Broadway for two days thereafter with his moon-round face all fuddled with daze.

A young shipping clerk in the factory where Annabelle was employed had fallen heir to ten thousand dollars. To Annabelle's astonishment, it seemed that he had looked upon her with yearning for years and now it had all come about and was possible. The young shipping clerk wanted to marry at once, and suddenly, after years of the procrastination, the delay and the disappointments and the deferred hopes that went with Coxie, here was a concrete opportunity to salvage happiness.

A home of her own. Freedom from the work that she hated. Freedom from the worrisome cough that racked her health.

It was a tempting change. For years Annabelle had confused her love of Coxie with a love of home—of comfort, of safety. To her, marriage meant freedom from the misery of daily going in a factory. Freedom to make a home that would bring happiness not only to herself, but to the man who provided it for her.

And now here was her chance. At once, without further delay, she could leave her home, freedom from work she hated, a chance to regain the health she was afraid of losing. It was too good a chance. Annabelle's longing hopes were dazed with this chance of fruition.

Coxie was terrified by this blow more than by anything that had ever happened to him, feeling the entire meaning of life slipping between his heart and his fingers, but he dared not intercede. Annabelle was right. Annabelle's aunt, who had long since lost patience with Coxie, was right.

The young shipping clerk's name was Macy. A nice enough boy with a lean face and a nervous habit of blinking his eyes. When Coxie first laid eyes on him the evening that Annabelle had told him her decision, it seemed to him almost more than he could bear. This young man was about to inherit the earth. Coxie must go out empty-handed, empty-hearted.

And then, as if Fate had not been sufficiently content with handing him this wallop in the abstract, there developed, in the course of the brief conversation Coxie had with Macy, this ironical fact: The money which young Macy had inherited was from a distant uncle whom he had never seen. This uncle was an actor whom Coxie had insured ten years before.

Time after time, Coxie had met these premiums, reluctant to let the old man's policy lapse. Meanwhile his wife and those immediately dependent upon him died and in stepped this lad as the only surviving relative.

Life had played boomerang to Coxie, except that the story does not end here. Curious thing. When Annabelle, who was not present during the conversation between the two men which brought about this disclosure, came back into the room that new look of decision which had been on her face for the last few days was suddenly removed from it. Looking at her, the two men seemed to know almost simultaneously that Annabelle was not going through with the engagement to Macy.

That is precisely what happened.

Annabelle and Coxie are together three evenings a week again. Coxie, with his kind, round face fairly bursting with determination, promises that this year his deficit in his income is to be a surplus.

They plan to be married on New Year's eve.

Robert aged six, ardently desired a sister, and was told that if he prayed for one a baby might come. So he added to his nightly prayers a petition for a little sister.

Results not coming as soon as he wished, one night he added:

"If you can't make it before tomorrow morning, don't wait to put in her tonsils or appendix, as they usually have to be cut out, anyway."

OLD AGE PENSION CENSUS IS NOT COMPLETED

Payment of $2 Head Tax Must Be Made Before March 1st

Completion of taking the old age pension census in Charlevoix county, which started last fall, will not be reached until February 15, according to County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow, who is charged with responsibility of this task.

Weather and other factors have delayed the work, according to Mr. Bulow, who added that there is no use of people whose names have not been listed by the census enumerators, coming to his office. When the census has been completed on February 15 there will still be time for those missed to call and give their names.

Payment of the old age pension must be made before March 1. Places to be designated for payment will be county, city and township treasurer's offices. With the old age pension census completed, the next step will be the payment of the tax of $2 per person by every individual in the county over 21 years of age. There is no maximum age at which the pension tax stops. All of the money collected is to go into the old age pension fund of the state, from which monthly pensions will be paid to dependent persons over the age of 70 years. No notices of this tax will be sent out by the county, city or township.

Applications are being received for the benefits of the pension and the county old age pension board will investigate these applications. Where they are found worthy the actual payment of the pension is expected to start March 1.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page.

The household marketer should find it easy to provide her family with a varied diet and yet keep within her budget these days.

Meats are relatively low in price. Especially low even compared to last year is fowl for fricassee. Fish are not so plentiful nor low priced when the weather is cold or stormy as it is in summer but supplies are adequate.

Vegetables continue to be plentiful and moderate in price. Spinach and string beans offer outstanding values. New cabbage and potatoes are beginning to come into market. Tomatoes are more plentiful than in recent weeks.

Some points of interest from our annual meeting:

In the three years of the present pastorate 1933 takes the honor in point of attendance. Twenty united with the church, all on confession except one.

Our roll suffered the loss of six through death.

The pastor had 18 speaking engagements aside from the regular church activities. He also performed 23 per cent more weddings than any previous year in his experience, and officiated and helped at 28 per cent more funerals.

The 1934 budget represents a slash of 20 per cent. This will effect all activities except missionary obligations.

The Ladies' Aid society, through the aid of the Circles, helped the board of trustees more than years before by about $200.00.

Several outstanding special church services received special comment with emphasis upon "Glad Sunday" in August when the church was decorated with over 500 gladioli blooms and the church and Sunday school Christmas services.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Subject for Sunday, January 14, is "Sacrament."

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"God" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, January 7.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Job 23: 3,10): "Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat! But he knoweth the way that I take:"

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p. 140): "That God is a corporeal being, nobody can truly affirm. The Bible represents Him as saying: 'Thou canst not see My face; for there shall no man see Me, and live.' Not materially but spiritually we know Him as divine Mind, as Life, Truth, and Love."

NEEDY SCHOOLS WILL RECEIVE FINANCIAL HELP

Release of $1,200,000 for use by needy school districts of the state during January was authorized Thursday by the augmented state administrative board.

The allotment is the first to be made under the emergency school relief bill signed last week by Governor Comstock. About $500,000 of the January money will come from the sales tax and $700,000 from the so-called emergency school fund.

DIRECT WELFARE RELIEF REDUCED

COUNTY ALLOTMENT CUT TO $6,000 FOR JANUARY

Washington Order to Stagger CWA Employment Expect to Double Quota and Relieve Situation

Welfare work is being carried on in the county by the emergency welfare relief commission on a greatly curtailed scale, due to the fact that the January allotment of welfare money for Charlevoix county has been cut.

Reduction in the allotment for the current month, caused by curtailment of state releases, is approximately 45 per cent, representing a drop from $11,000 allowed for December, to $6,000 for January.

Emergency relief constitutes distribution of food, fuel, clothes, etc., with some recipients working out the amount of relief given their family. Inauguration of the CWA program in November took many from the direct welfare relief rolls and placed them on a set wage earning basis. Despite the fact the CWA had lessened the welfare burden considerably, $11,000 was needed for this work in December.

With the limit for welfare relief in January set at $6,000, the commission will be able to feed only the hungry. They will only be able to take care of the most urgent cases. This condition will work a hardship on many persons, but the money can only be stretched so far, it is pointed out.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington appearing in Tuesday's Grand Rapids Herald, authorization has been given by Harry L. Hopkins, civil works administrator, to employ the "stagger" system of employment on CWA projects in towns under 2,500 population in rural areas. Orders to this effect are expected by the local CWA commission, and when this plan is inaugurated the county quota, now set at 655 men will be doubled. Thus men now dependent upon direct welfare will be given employment and the situation brought about by curtailment of funds alleviated.

In the meantime, county officials are making an attempt to obtain weight tax money due from the state, a part of which has been pledged for welfare relief. At the October session of the board of supervisors, it was voted to divert one-third of the weight tax, estimated for the year at around $40,000, for welfare relief, but to date no transfer has been possible for the reason no payments have been received from the state.

BOYNE FALLS FARMER ADMITS KILLING BUCK

William Giem of Boyne Falls, arrested last Friday by Conservation Officers Harry Dunsmore, Ed. Deuell and C. W. Bonney for illegal possession of venison, pleaded guilty to killing a small spike horn buck. Taken before Justice Cook at Boyne City, Giem was given choice of fine and costs of $56 or 30 days in the county jail

SMELT FISHING IS ADDED LOCAL WINTER ATTRACTION

Ice fishing for smelt, a sport in recent years almost wholly confined to the east end of Lake Charlevoix off Boyne City, is this winter available here at Charlevoix.

The local "smelt village" is located off the mouth of Stover creek, scene of the first smelt run in Lake Charlevoix several years ago. While the migration of smelt up this stream has been negligible since the original run, the catches being made at the present time would indicate the fish are very plentiful in the west end of the lake. Individual anglers have reported hauls of 200 in a single day. Lines with several hooks baited with small minnows or pearl buttons are being used in about 40 feet of water.

Equally as unusual as the smelt fishing now available here is the number of perch being taken this winter from Lake Charlevoix. Perch fishermen, who have usually confined their operations to Round lake harbor, are now fishing in the larger lake with excellent success. Local sportsmen are unable to account for the radical change in conditions which have provided perch, smelt and whitefish on grounds heretofore producing lake trout.

BEAVER ISLAND IS SHORT STOCK FEED

ASK STATE AID — THIRTY DAY SUPPLY ON HAND

Rep. Tibbitts and B. C. Mellencamp to Lansing Thursday to Confer With Governor Comstock

Beaver Island farmers, facing extermination of their livestock herds because of a shortage of winter feed, have asked for state aid, according to advices received here Wednesday morning.

Through Fr. Frank McLaughlin, Island priest, a request for aid was made to Gov. Comstock. With the matter referred to the state department of agriculture, Rep. D. D. Tibbitts and B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, have been called to Lansing for a conference Thursday with Gov. Comstock regarding the situation.

According to Rep. Tibbitts, who has been in communication with Fr. McLaughlin, the island feed supply is only sufficient to last thirty days. It is estimated 150 tons of hay and 25 tons of grain will be needed for the winter. The need of immediate action, so that the supplies can be sent to the island by boat before ice prevents, is being stressed. The situation was caused, it is stated, by unfavorable growing conditions last summer, coupled with a low market for livestock which prevented the island farmers from disposing of the usual surplus stock in the fall.

It is anticipated the state will provide means of purchasing needed feed within the county to be taken by boat to the island.

Mr. Tibbitts stated Wednesday morning that he would attempt at Thursday's conference with Gov. Comstock, to enlist his aid in a move to exempt the portion of Michigan north of the Bay City-Ludington line from the federal corn-hog reduction program now being instituted. Rep. Tibbitts, who has already referred the matter to Cong. Prentiss M. Brown, contends that few farmers in Northern Michigan raised the required three litters of hogs necessary to make them eligible to the reduction benefits of $5.00 per head provided by the act, while after February 1st they will be required to stand a loss on sale of butchered hogs from their small herds through the $2 per hundred process tax which must be paid. He contends that unless some provision is made for exemption, Northern Michigan farmers will have to stand a big loss.

MAY USE HALF YEAR AUTO LICENSE AGAIN

Fitzgerald Will Adopt Plan Unless Legislature Reduces Fees

Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald has announced that he will authorize the issuance of "sticker automobile licenses on March 1 if the legislature does not reduce the present fees charged for the plates.

The "sticker permits, issued at one-half the price of regular licenses, were used in 1933. They were recognized by law enforcement officers until August 1, after which time the remaining half of the annual fee could be paid and motorists receive their full-year plates.

COUNTY GETTING HEALTH SERVICE

RURAL SCHOOLS TO BENEFIT BY NEW PROJECT

Toilet Facilities and Water Supply Being Checked—Aid Offered Home Owners Also

A complete program of community health and sanitation service is being established in the state, the objective of which is to eliminate all the old outdoor toilets in sections not served by sewage systems and modernize all rural school sanitation and water systems.

This work is being carried on by the state department of health under sponsorship of the United States Health service. Michigan has been divided into two divisions and C. F. Browning, sanitation expert who has just completed organizing the sanitation forces of West Virginia for a similar campaign, has been placed in charge of the northern division which includes the north half of the lower peninsula and all of the upper peninsula. His headquarters are in Traverse City. Dr. A. R. Renwick of the District Health Unit, is in charge of this district, which includes four counties, and Don McHugh has been selected as county administrator of the project.

Under the plan, which is already in operation, every school district in the county will be inspected and its toilet and water facilities checked. In most cases it will be necessary to construct new, fly-tight toilet buildings according to specifications derided upon after many years of experimentation. Where a new and pure water supply for the school is found necessary this will also be cared for.

Model toilets are being built in sections at the county highway garage here, trucked to the sites where they are needed and erected.

In addition to the school and project, private residences not connnected with sewage systems will be assisted in modernizing their outdoor sanitation. Old toilets will be salvaged and the property owner will be asked only to pay for such material as is needed in excess of the salvage material and the toilet will be set up at no other expense. The cost should average, it is stated, from $18 to $20 for each toilet.

The outdoor toilet, health authorities maintain, is one of the quickest and most active agencies in the spreading of epidemics and it is to correct this situation that the new organization has been formed.

COUNTY BANK EXAMINED FOR FEDERAL DEPOSIT GUARANTEE

Another forward step in the reorganization plans of the Charlevoix County bank, operated under restrictions since last October, was taken last week.

Examination of the institution's books was completed by representatives of the Federal Deposit Guarantee Corporation, with which the local bank seeks affiliation as a means of offering its clients deposit guarantee upon reopening. If the institution's reorganization set-up is accepted, opening, it is understood, will not be far distant, as application for charter has been approved by the state banking department.

Waivers of over 95 per cent of deposits totaling $400,000 have been obtained, according to Robt. Bridge, cashier.

STATE-WIDE MOVE TO BOOST RESORTS

GOVERNOR NAMES COMMITTEE TO MAP PROGRAM

Entertainment to Attract Tourists Planned — Summer Business Important Industry

Plans to place Northern Michigan in higher ranking as a tourist and resort district were set up in Lansing last week at a meeting of members of the legislature, state officials and representatives of the four tourist associations.

A committee was appointed by Governor Comstock to devise means for the enlargement of advertising of the northern country and stimulate the resort and tourist business. The program applies to both the upper and lower peninsula of the state.

Serving on the committee will be Governor Comstock, Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, George R. Hogarth, director of conservation, Hugh J. Gray, Grand Rapids, secretary of the West Michigan Tourist association; T. L. Marston, secretary of the East Michigan Tourist association; J. Lee Barret, secretary of the Southeastern Tourist and Publicity association; George E. Bishop, secretary of the Upper Peninsula Development bureau; and Roger M. Andrews, chairman of the Mackinac Island Park commission.

The committee was named after a resolution providing for it had been adopted.

Addressing the group, Governor Comstock said that "Michigan must get back into the tourist business."

"Our goal is to carry to the entire United States that Michigan must induce out-of-state vacationists to come to our state."

The plan of the tourist interests is to provide a series of entertainment features for at least a week and possibly two in the various resort cities to attract residents as well as visitors. Pageants depicting historic events are contemplated.

"It is a sound business proposition," Governor Comstock said. "In 1934 prospects are that employment will increase. There will be more money available that will be spent in the tourist sections of Michigan.

"Michigan has been competing Canada, Minnesota and Wisconsin for its tourist business. What we must do is to lure vacationists from these states to Michigan."

It is possible that the skeleton of the state administration may move to the northern part of the lower peninsula for a short time while the proposed program is in full swing. Meetings of the state officers would be held with only the clerical force remaining in Lansing.

A request will probably be made at the next special session of the legislature for at least $80,000 to finance the program.

ALANSON YOUTH TAKEN FOR COTTAGE LOOTING

Edward Copeland, 17, Arrested by Sheriff Ikens Last Thursday

The mystery surrounding the looting of the Charlevoix Beach hotel and six adjacent cottages was cleared up Thursday by the arrest and subsequent confession of Edward Copeland, 17, Alanson high school student, by Sheriff Floyd Ikens and Traverse City state police.

Working on the slender clue that Copeland might be their man, due to the fact he was employed at the hotel last summer, officers took the youth from school, found his finger prints matched with those obtained in the hotel, and the confession followed. Copeland admited, according to Sheriff Ikens, that he occupied a room in the hotel for approximately a week during school vacation.

All of the loot, which included some valuable jewelry, clothing and miscellaneous articles was recovered. Copeland has been bound over to circuit court under $1,000 bond.

WINTER CARNIVAL DATE FEBRUARY 24

DAY OF SPORTS SPONSORED BY AMERICAN LEGION

Attractive Merchandising Scheme Is Connected With Carnival to Benefit Buying Public

(By F. V. Tyler.)

Saturday, February 24, 1934, is the date set for Charlevoix's one-day winter carnival, conducted by the American Legion under auspices of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce.

This carnival is to be unique of its kind, as it is to be preceded by a four weeks' period of special inducements offered by the merchants, professional men and other business enterprises to trade with them individually and especially to trade in Charlevoix. Full particulars of the scheme, which is designed to secure a better distribution of the weekly CWA and PWA payrolls among the business houses of this city, will appear on handbills which will be given a wide circulation throughout town on Friday of this week. The special inducements above mentioned will be on display in the show windows of local business places on Saturday morning, at which time the plan is to go into effect.

The carnival program in February will include the usual dog sled races, skating races and other street sports, followed by an old time dance in the evening at the high school gymnasium, to which a nominal admission will be charged. Here the Charlevoix consumer will have a chance to cash in on his faithful patronage of Charlevoix merchants during the preceding four weeks' period.

Watch for the handbills that carry the story Friday, the 19th, and then look in the shop windows Saturday.

CITY BAND TO GIVE FREE MUSIC CONCERT

Program Rehearsed Since Last Fall at Gym, January 28th

Of interest to the public generally is the announcement that the city band will give a free concert at the high school gyninasium the evening of Sunday, Jan. 28, at 8:15 o'clock.

The concert has been rehearsed since early last fall and promises to be one of the most enjoyable ever given here. The program will consist of new marches, a cornet solo by Robert Magor, director, two or three old favorite numbers and several novelty numbers. Among the numbers will be "The Raymond Overture," a beautiful selection for which the band has held many rehearsals; a descriptive fantasia "In the Clock Store," a novelty in which the band imitates the opening of a clock store in the morning by the apprentice.

The full program for the concert will be announced as soon as it is available.

TALKIE ON WILD LIFE IS RELEASED BY STATE

"Nature's Gangsters", the first sound picture to be released by the department of conservation has been released and is now being shown in Michigan theatres. FEDERAL LOANS GREAT BENEFIT

OVER HUNDRED THOUSAND RELEASED IN COUNTY

Farm Loans Total $61,500 and Home Loans $45,543.83 in Period of Slightly Over Two Months

That Charlevoix county has benefited greatly by the operation of federal farm and home loan agencies is revealed in figures made available by Frank F. Bird, register of deeds.

According to county records, farm loans completed since October 27th total $61,500, while home loans since November 1st have aggregated $45,543.83, or a total of $107,043.82 in a trifle over two months time. With the work of granting loans just nicely getting under way, much more can be expected along this line. In fact, indications point that loans completed in the month of January will set a record.

Recording and abstract work connected with the completion of loans has made the register of deed's office the busiest since Mr. Bird took charge on January 1, 1925. The work has more than tripled since October when receipts totaled approximately $100, as compared to $212 in November and $336 in December. Mr. Bird stated the January work would be half as large again as December, setting a new record for the office.

While on this subject it might be interesting to the public to know that Charlevoix county was the first in the Northern Michigan district to have a loan completed. According to Ben Gardner of Walloon Lake, secretary-treasurer of the Charlevoix National Farm Loan association for the eastern half of the county, the rapid completion of loans is directly due to the efficiency with which abstracts are handled in the register of deeds office here at Charlevoix. Representing the eastern part of the county as attorney is Probate Judge Ervan A. Ruegsegger, while in the western portion of the county, Wm. F. Johnson is secretary-treasurer and Rollig L. Lewis, attorney.

When the above mentioned sums are taken into consideration along with funds released for welfare and CWA projects, the public may realize more thoroughly what the efforts of the Democratic administration mean to this region.

BRIDGE IMPROVEMENT WORK IS COMPLETED

New Fender Protection for Pivot Pier Nice Piece of Work

The work of constructing fender piling for the pivot pier of the swing bridge on U. S. 31 has been completed and equipment moved away.

The project has resulted in a wonderful channel improvement. The old structure, badly decayed from years of use, has been entirely replaced by new piling and timber work, constructed along water lines. A walk, with hand railing, a feature which was not a part of the old structure, is included.

The project was a part of the state highway department's PWA program.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY TO GIVE BENEFIT AFFAIR

The Charlevoix Hospital Auxiliary is sponsoring a card party for the benefit of the hospital, the evening of Tuesday, January 23rd. The affair will be given at the gymnasium. Pedro, auction and contract bridge may be played. The public is cordially invited to support this worthy cause.

LILLIS FLANDERS, 9 YEARS DEPUTY, APPOINTED TREASURER

Miss Lillis Flanders, deputy since 1925 under her late father, Joseph William Flanders, was last Wednesday appointed Charlevoix county treasurer to fill vacancy.

Inasmuch as Miss Flanders has been employed in the office over this long period and is consequently thoroughly familiar with the duties, her appointment was logical and a generally favorable one.

The committee empowered with the appointment consisted of County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow, Prosecuting Attorney A. L. Fitch, and Probate Judge Ervan A. Ruegsegger. Miss Flanders has not as yet named her deputy.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"Fitz-of the Broken Hand"

HISTORY has given to Gen. John C. Fremont the title of "The Pathfinder" and made him famous. But it is strangely silent about the man who once "found the path" for Fremont and who probably knew more obscure corners of the Great West than any other man of his time, not even excepting such worthies as Kit Carson, Jedediah Smith and Jim Bridger.

Thomas Fitzpatrick was his name and he was a young Irishman who came to this country about 1816 and joined the famous Ashley fur trading expedition into the Upper Missouri country in 1823. The next year he accompanied Jedediah Smith on the exploring expedition which discovered the South Pass through the Rockies, that portal through which a flood of emigration to Oregon and California was to pour within the next two decades.

One of the organizers of the Rocky Mountain Fur company, he soon became "chief of the mountain men" and was a leader in the dramatic struggle between rival British and American companies for supremacy in the fur trade. After five years Fitzpatrick's company sold out to John Jacob Astor, for he saw the inevitable decline of that industry.

But his next occupation added to his reputation, for in 1841 he led the first emigrant wagon train to Oregon; in 1842 he guided Fremont on his second expedition to California and back; in 1845 he guided Kearney's dragoons on their expedition to South Pass, Fort Laramie and Bent's Fort, and in the same year he went with Lieutenant Albert on his southwestern survey. The next year he was again Kearney's guide, this time on the famous march of the dragoons to Santa Fe.

After the war with Mexico was over, Fitzpatrick was made agent for the Indians of the Upper Platte and the Arkansas. As a trapper and a trader he had been one of the most skillful Indian fighters on the plains, but because of that fact "Broken Hand," as the Indians called him, had the respect of every redskin in the region. So he made a record as an Indian agent and exercised a control over the red men which has never been equaled, except possibly by that other Irishman of an earlier day, Sir William Johnson, the one white man the Indians of the East ever trusted.

Fitzpatrick's crowning achievement was the great Indian council of 1851 at Fort Laramie at which 10,000 Indians of all tribes forgot for a moment their ancient enmities to smoke the pipe together because "Broken Hand" told them to. He died in 1854, a white-haired and broken man at the age of fifty-five. If he had lived a few years longer there might have been fewer shameful pages in our Indian history.

Big Bat and Little Bat

IN THE post cemetery at Fort Robinson, Neb., among the long rows of little headstones, all of which look exactly alike, is one that bears this inscription: "Baptisto Garnier, Employee Q. M. D." And this marks the end of the trail for a really great frontiersman—a simple slab of granite which records the fact that here lies buried an "employee of the quartermaster's department" and doesn't even spell his name correctly!

For Baptiste (not Baptiste) Garnier was the "Little Bat" of Sioux Indian war days, a scout for our hard-riding, hard-fighting troopers in the seventies, eighties and nineties, a guide for many a party of big game hunters and an interpreter in many an important council—certainly a man who deserved a better memorial than this.

Officers of the old army will tell you that there were two "Bats,"—"Big Bat" and "Little Bat"—both of them good men and true. "Big Bat" was Baptiste Pourier, scout for General Crook during the campaign of 1876 and hero of a daring escapade at the Battle of Slim Buttes.

"Little Bat" was the son of a French father and a Sioux Indian mother and he grew up among his mother's people near old Fort Laramie. Valuable as were his services to the whites as a scout during the Sioux war of 1876-77, they were even more valuable as interpreter when Red Cloud's Ogalalas were finally penned up on a reservation and started on "the white man's road" during the eighties. When the Ghost Dance excitement started among the Sioux in 1890, if "Little Bat's" advice that the Indians be left alone until they had "danced themselves out" had been followed, it might have averted some of the tragedies which followed.

One of these tragedies was the Battle of Wounded Knee and there "Little Bat" had one of his narrowest escapes. Acting as interpreter, he walked among the lodges of Big Foot's camp, unarmed, to impress the Indians of his conviction that they were in no danger. Then the firing started. In the storm of bullets his clothing was pierced several times, but by some miracle he escaped death.

Eight years later a murderer's bullet accomplished what those fired in battle could not do. For "Little Bat" was shot down in Crawford, Neb., by a barkeeper whom he had regarded as his friend, and who was never punished for the cold-blooded murder of a man noted for his peaceable disposition, as well as for his stark courage in time of danger.

Lunch for the School Child

Mothers almost at their wits' end struggling with the problem of devising and preparing nutritious and attractive food for the younger members of the family will be interested in the following comment and advice:

"The nutrition column has received several letters in the past few weeks in regard to the problem of luncheon for school children. As soon as little children begin to leave the constant care of the home, adjustments must be made in the plan which has been developed and followed since infancy.

"School days begin early for some children these days, as the nursery schools take children from two years on. These are becoming increasingly popular, especially for the mothers who do work outside their own homes. Day nurseries which care for children of working mothers have been in existence for a long time, but it is only within the past few years that new educational methods for good training in all habits include that of eating wisely.

"The nursery school—so called—in its highest development may be seen at Teachers' college, Columbia university, where teachers are trained especially for this work. Children in these schools stay for the greater part of the day.

"Even when kindergarten and primary school children go home for lunch, mothers often find that the change from home routine creates some meal problem. I should like to recommend to all mothers a bulletin prepared by Mary E. Sweeney, assistant director, Merrill - Palmer school, and Charlotte Chatfield, specialist in food and nutrition, bureau of home economics, Washington, published by the United States Department of Agriculture as circular 203. The title of this is 'Midday Meals for Preschool Children in Day Nurseries and Nursery Schools,' and this bulletin is the product of the experience of the Merrill-Palmer school, which has been the pioneer in this work. While this material has been developed scientifically, all mothers will find here material for study and for application. The modern mother is always looking for help of this sort. The portion on menu planning, while it has been developed particularly for the needs of young children, in principle applies to the feeding problem of all children. I quote a portion of this for your consideration:

"'The nutritive value of the food is not the only consideration in feeding the young child. His appetite or desire to eat, which is affected by many factors, internal and external, has an important bearing on his food intake. In order to attach pleasant memories to food, all associations during the meal hour should be attractive in flavor, color, odor and texture. Careful preparation and attractive service contribute also to the esthetic appeal of food. Serving food that is burned, undercooked, lumpy or too hot may take away the appetite and give rise to a prejudice that it requires months of re-education to overcome.

"'A diet containing the right proportions of the different nutrients tends to promote a good appetite. A specific influence on the appetite seems to come from vitamin B. Small portions of food and an opportunity for second servings, inspire a much greater desire to eat than large portions. Small servings also help the child form the habit of finishing what is placed on his plate. Appetite is stimulated physiologically by hunger contractions in the empty stomach. A regime that places meals far enough apart and reduces or eliminates the practice of eating between meals allows normal hunger to develop and stimulates the desire for food.

"'The physical and emotional condition of the child plays an important role. The healthy, active, well-nourished child usually has at mealtime a noticeable eagerness for food that is often absent in the child who is physically below par. Frequent colds, ear troubles and other infections, all seem to affect the appetite. In a healthy child a sudden lack of interest in food may be a sign of approaching illness or fatigue. Children who are fatigued from overstrenuous play, excitement or insufficient sleep may show a disinterest in, or even an active distaste for, food. Their desire to eat is usually restored by a short rest just before mealtime. Emotional upsets from fear, anger or disappointment, if experienced near the meal hour, also affect the appetite. Urging children to eat a full meal under any of these conditions is not advisable. It is better for them to eat nothing or to eat lightly, and to rest quietly until the next meal. If poor appetite becomes chronic, the advice of a physician should be sought. The child whose mealtimes have always been treated without stress or apparent concern is not likely to develop faulty food habits. Wholesome food properly prepared and given to the child without special comment is usually eaten as a matter of course.'"

NEED SPIRIT OF THE PIONEERS

The three general reasons for thanksgiving which the President asked us to recall were the courage of the pioneers, the vision of the founders, the steadfastness of those who have fought "to keep pure the ideal of equality and hold clear the goal of mutual help." The greatest of these is the first, for it is fundamental to the other two. Without courage there could not have been the America "set aside for mortals not to mar." Without it we shall not have vision and steadfastness for new thanksgivings.

America's social development, as Frederick J. Turner, the historian of the frontier, said, "has been continually beginning over again on the frontier." He was thinking of the geographical frontier, and its primitive conditions with which the pioneers had to fight naked-handed. What they were is suggested by this fragment of a letter from one of these pioneers to friends in the East:

"But if you can bear grief with a smile, can put up with a scale of accommodations ranging from the soft side of a plank before the fire (and perhaps three in a bed at that) down through the middling and inferior grades, if you are never at a loss for ways to do the most impracticable things without tools, if you can do all this and some more come on. . . . It is the universal rule here to help one another; each one keeping an eye single to his own business."

We are now out on other frontiers, where discomforts challenge even more fiercely the spirit of millions for whom there are no unoccupied lands beyond and still beyond. With this call for courage on their part is the frontier obligation of mutual helpfulness, resting upon their neighbors, either in individual or community or more widely associated effort.

One thing that impressed De Tocqueville, when he visited America one hundred years ago, was that these settlers of a wilderness had the capacity for "extra-legal, voluntary association." The house raising, the apple paring, the squatters' associations whereby they protected themselves against speculators, the camp meetings, the cattle raisers' associations, are a few of the indications which Professor Turner cited in emphasizing the American trait which in its later applications has come to be one of the most important features of the United States of today. In 1918 this historian of the frontier was saying, as if in prophecy of what is happening today: "America does through informal association and understandings on the part of the people many of the things which in the Old world are and can be done only by governmental intervention and compulsion."

There is the heritage that the courage of those who settled a wilderness left us: "A passionate belief that a democracy was possible which should leave the individual a part to play in free society and not make him a cog in a machine operated from above; which trusted in the common man, in his tolerance, his ability to adjust differences with good humor, and to work out an American type from the contributions of all the nations."—New York Times.

GREAT NEED SEEN IN THE TRAINING OF CHILD TASTE

There seems to be no unity of thought or action on what is suitable for the children to see and hear.

One group advocates reducing literature and the stage to a status where it is safe for the children, another is all for giving the children untrammeled freedom to see and read what they like.

In one case the world would have to be adjusted to the moron, in the other, the undeveloped mind is forced beyond its capabilities. That there might be a middle way seems to have been forgotten.

The level of moron intelligence is seldom over twelve years, and the prospect of making the artistic world safe for them is appalling to the average adult.

Some educators are aware of the dangers of a too strong emotional diet for the young. Some, here and there, have studied the situation and instituted children's days at movie houses and theaters. Nearly every library has a children's department, book stores grade their children's books according to age.

But in spite of all the effort which has been made, the children still flock to sophisticated plays and pictures, still read the trash, often broad book or paper of the moment, until the chief cry of the reformer is "We must censor!"

Much of what is written and produced is no doubt unnecessary and undesirable, but censoring merely drives it underground and increases its danger.

If we allow our children unlimited license we spoil the children, if we attempt to suit all books and drama to their capacities we ruin art.

What we need far more is to pay attention to the children's development, to keep track of what they are seeing and hearing, and to start early to train their taste.—Brooks Peters Church, in Indianapolis News.

Carillons Increase in Favor With Americans

Holland and Belgium have long looked upon carillon playing as a great national institution, but it is only within the last few years that carillon recitals have drawn crowds in the United States.

To read that 25,000 people flocked to a little village in Massachusetts, and that traffic was diverted from an important arterial thoroughfare in a New Jersey town, and all to hear the ringing of bells, sounds like a fairy tale. But such are the facts.

Few ever heard of Cohasset until Mr. Cram built a small church with a rugged tower there, and a wide-awake rector hung fifty-one tuned bells in the tower. We used to motor through Morristown, N. J., with one eye on the traffic cop and the other on McKim, Mead and White's fine tower. But since thirty-five tuned bells have been hung in that tower, we stand in the graveyard in snow a foot deep and freeze our toes, simply to hear the unearthly music that Mr. Rocke or Mr. Parsons can send floating down.

Within the last nine years, some thirty carillons have been brought into the United States and six or eight more into Canada. In spite of the depression their number is constantly increasing.

A carillon is a series of at least twenty-three bells, tuned so as to play a chromatic scale. From this small battery of two octaves it may range in size to that of the great Riverside church carillon in New York with seventy-two bells and the Mountain Lake (Fla.) carillon, with seventy-one. On such a set of bells one may play almost anything that can be played on a modern organ, with its standard keyboard of five octaves.—F. R. Webber in the American Mercury.

EVER FORWARD

Civilization cannot go back; civilization must not stand still. We have undertaken new methods. It is our task to perfect, to improve, to alter when necessary, but in all cases to go forward. To consolidate what we are doing, to make our economic and social structure capable of dealing with modern life—is the joint task of the legislative, the judicial, and the executive branches of the national government.

Without regard to party, the overwhelming majority of our people seek a greater opportunity for humanity to prosper and find happiness. They recognize that human welfare has not increased and does not increase through mere materialism and luxury, but that it does progress through integrity, unselfishness, responsibility and justice. —President Roosevelt.

A GOOD START

With the beginning of the new year, there should be aroused renewed determination to pay accumulated obligations as far as possible. Every debt paid puts money into circulation, and may mean the payment of many debts. Every obligation neglected is likely to hold back satisfaction of many obligations. Paying bills is largely an exchange that establishes credit, and keeps the wheels of commerce and industry moving. A good resolution to make and preserve for all time is one to pay promptly, and to contract no obligation that cannot be paid according to agreement. This plan would solve tough problems for a lot of people, and it would be a powerful force in restoring prosperity.

POLAR BEARS CONTINUE ON MARCH OF VICTORY

Defeated Fast Boyne City Outfit Here Thursday Night

The Polar Bears showed real class in defenting a good Boyne City team on the local court last Thursday night by a 33 to 15 count.

The visitors, producing the flashiest combination they have had in recent years, equalled the Polar Bears for speedy play but not in team work and precision, thus their overwhelming defeat.

With their team play clicking fast and positive, the Polar Bears piled up an 8 to 2 lead at the quarter. They led 20 to 6 at the half and 27 to 13 at the third intermission. The fourth quarter was another runaway, the Bears marking up 6 points to 2 for the visitors.

Kirby led the local team in scoring with 12 points, followed closely by Supernaw with 10. Joe Smith contributed 5 and Benndoin and Vic Smith 2 each. For Boyne, Tryon was high with 8, Barden scored 4, Bradley and Fox 2 each.

The Polar Bears bump into stiff opposition again tonight when they engage the East Jordan Canners at East Jordan. This team, composed of former East Jordan and Ellsworth high school stars, is unbeaten so far this season.

"Sacrament" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, January 14.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Matt. 3:11): "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p.241): "We should strive to reach the Horeb height where God is revealed; and the corner-stone of all spiritual building is purity. The baptism of Spirit, washing the body of all the impurities of flesh, signifies that the pure in heart see God and are approaching spiritual Life and its demonstration."

MANY CWA PROJECTS APPROVED IN REGION

Many Thousands of Dollars Allowed for Permanent Projects

Throughout the Northern Michigan region CWA projects along lines of permanent nature have been approved in Lansing.

At Traverse City construction has started on a museum which will house a purely Michigan collection of relics and antiques at a cost of approximately $26,500.

At Pellston progress is reported on a CWA school improvement program which includes construction of a brick addition to the gymnasium, the installation of showers and sanitary toilets.

At Harbor Springs approval has been granted to rebuild the former Michigan Transit dock recently purchased by the city. The project will cost $16,000.00.

CITY RETAINS ENGINEERS ON SEWAGE JOB

Greeley & Hanson, Chicago Firm, Get Contract for Supervision

Following up the Public Works Administration grant of $87,000 for construction of a sewage treatment plant, the city council last Wednesday afternoon took action to get the project under way.

Meeting in special session, the council voted to retain the Chicago engineering firm of Greeley & Hanson, who have acted as consulting engineers on preliminary plans, to supervise construction of the utility. In this respect the council is thought to have acted wisely in view of the fact the engineers they have retained are considered the most reliable in this field.

It is understood about six weeks will be required for completion of plans before bids are asked. On this basis, it is doubtful if actual work will be started until spring.

Thirteen million trout eggs are now in the trays of nine of the state's fish hatcheries, the foundation for the fingerlings that will be planted in Michigan's streams next fall. The fish division of the conservation department reported that it now had hatching 7,800,000 brook trout eggs, 4,200,000 brown trout eggs and about 1,500,000 eggs of early spawning rainbow trout. To this list will be added about 1,750,000 eggs of native Michigan rainbow trout next spring, making a total of about 15,000,000 eggs for the year's trout propagation activities.

—Back in December, about the 16th, Charlevoix, like most of the northern part of the United States, had a storm of yellow mud along with a snow storm, and Montreal scientists have decided it was volcanic ash. A thin coating of yellow or light brown mud came down with the snow storm to an extent that it made the snow yellow. The Canadian scientists took samples of the mud and found it to have come from some volcano. The ash, they believe, was shot into the air from the crater with such force that it went into the upper atmosphere and drifted eastward before falling to the ground. Now if someone will explain the cause of the Year of the Blue Snow, these queer storms will all be cleared up.

Twenty local leaders of the M. S. C. extension course met in one of the class rooms of the new Charlevoix school building Tuesday, January 16th, to receive the fourth lesson given by Miss Irene Taylor, clothing specialist on the project, "Fitting Your Dress." Leaders were asked to bring their dresses basted and ready for a supervised litting, to the next meeting, on February 27th.

Various speakers discussed the advisability of continuing or discontinuing the support of the State Council of Religious Education, and later the merits and demerits of the new Goodwin Plan of church finance. The February meeting will either be in Harbor Springs or again held in this city.

So many are willing to take a chance in the matter of religion. Because they can pass as good citizens they consider that accomplishment entitles them to a happy hereafter. There is not one word in the New Testament that suggests that one's good deeds saves him. God through His Grace saves man that he may perform good works. Until one accepts salvation his good works are not recognized by God. Learn all you can about the wonderful plan that God has made for the salvation of humanity. We will give you something to think about next Sunday as we continue our subject, "Salvation By Grace."

In the evening at 7 o'clock we will undertake to explain Daniel's missing week. At the end of this age, and some very worth while students say that is not far off, there is to be a very interesting period of time. It will satisfy, no doubt, the millions who have tried to forget God and to whom righteousness is a nightmare. During that period the Church will not be here, the influence of Christ and the Holy Spirit will be removed and evil will be unchecked. Refusal to believe will make very little difference with the plans of God. True religion is not a matter of one's opinions, but a matter of what we do with the Christ.

Our budget supper will be held Thursday evening, January 25. R. F. Sloan is chairman of supper committee and E. E. Cross chairman of subscriptions.

About Swagger Crochet Accessories

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WOULDN'T you just love to be the proud possessor of some one, or for that matter, all the dress accessories here pictured? There are thousands of us that always point on after the holidays as the time to "do fancy work." Such fun as it will be to work on these pretty things during the long and tedious midwinter hours! And think of the joy of having a collection of these swagger dress accessories in readiness to wear with your spring and summer frocks.

These dainty little fancies are actually crocheted (the sailor collar is knit) from crepe paper. There has been quite a lot of crepe paper items going the rounds this season but we think the ones we are here showing are smarter and more outstanding than any which have gone before. The best of it is the expense is next to nothing, for the crepe paper of which they are made costs but a few pennies.

If you have in your wardrobe a simple dark dress that needs a bit of "life" or some good old standby frock that needs a new look, one of these nifty little crochets is sure to "do the trick." One of the joys of making these items is the fact that the crepe paper comes in as many as fifty delectable colors and you can work any color scheme your costume calls for. And best of all, nobody ever dreams that they are made of crepe paper.

In this limited space it is not possible to give detailed instructions "how to make," which need worry you not at all for it is possible to obtain working directions at most any place where materials for paper handicraft are sold. We might say, however, that the swagger collar, cuff and belt set photographed on the standing figure is done in the favorite fish net stitch. The set pictured is in a lovely Chinese red and the dress is beige.

Fish net, by the way, is one of the easiest stitches to do and with the crepe paper you get a true fish-net lace effect.

The sailor collar, sketched to the left at the top, is a youthful design. It is knit, instead of crocheted, of white crepe paper with a contrasting strand of the paper drawn through between the border and the collar. The buttons are a matching red.

The sporty girdle or belt, sketched to the right above, is crocheted from brown crepe paper, cut in strips, stretched and twisted. The crocheting is done in the favorite popcorn stitch and the finished effect in the brown is distinctly that of leather. Brass buttons set this girdle off to perfection.

The vest and cuff set, sketched below to the right, is decidedly out of the ordinary. Taking its inspiration from armor that knights wore in days of old, the designer most appropriately refers to it as the "armament set." The original of this sketch was made of jade green paper. Worn with a simple black dress it is very effective. It is also good looking with a crepe dress in matching green.

SUBDEB'S DRESSES RIVAL BIG SISTER'S

Vibrant coats, suits and dresses have been made this season for the subdeb. With her shirtwaist dress, floor-length evening wrap, and "hostess" gown, she needn't take a back seat when big sister is around.

Evening wraps designed especially for her include a white bengaline mandarin coat with jade dragon buttons and a long, black velvet with white fur puffs on the upper part of the sleeves.

An unusual laced treatment marks the neck of a black silk frock. The lacing is spaced to give a shirred, soft drape to the neckline. Other dresses for the jeune fille are accented with ruffs and draped crew collars.

Her evening frocks comprise a velvet creation with flowers clustered at the throat, and one with white ribbed metal cloth top and black skirt.

Shoes Are Going Higher and Higher Up the Instep

With shoes going higher and higher up the instep, the matter of trim fit has become a real problem. The whole beauty of this extreme type of shoe lies in the perfect molded look over the instep and around the ankle.

To meet this situation designers have resorted to various expedients. One exceedingly smart black suede shoe, perfectly plain and mounting well up on the ankle has narrow elastic inserts on the side, after the manner of the old Congress gaiters. When the shoe is pulled on it fits like a glove and is exceedingly flattering to the foot.

Velvet Fancies

Velvet makes many fashionable fancies in the new winter mode. In plain, plaid, ribbed, crinkled and quilted weaves it adds a note of novelty and contrast to both daytime and evening costumes.

NEW WAYS OF FUR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Out-of-the-ordinary fur trimmings on cloth coats are giving us something new to think about this season. The model pictured is especially likable, since it accents two outstanding trimming trends. The one is the fur jacket top which is carried out to a pleaty in this instance. The other is the fur ejaculet effects which are so widely exploited as a means of arriving at the wide shoulder silhouette which fashion demands at present. The model pictured is of gray wool with fur of matching gray kidskin. With it is worn a peaked hat of black velour, gray kid opera pumps with light gray banding, and black gloves and bag.

BIG FACTOR IN CURE IS TRAVEL TO ATTAIN IT

I am not denying virtue to the European thermal springs. I believe that they have it. Anyhow, the foreign cure almost invariably is based on it. It may take the form of mud packs, as in Czecho-Slovakia; the water may and does vary in temperature and in its very mild chemical constituency. But the European cure remains largely a "water cure," supplemented by diet, rest and exercise.

That these cures are effective is shown by the almost incredible number of people, Europeans, British and American, with whom the visit to this spa or that bad is an annual affair. They go back year after year for their cure. Just how many of them could find precisely the same thing at home is a controversial matter. It is my own belief that all of them probably could, but that very often a part of the cure is this very matter of escape from home.

But one outstanding fact became more and more evident to us as time went on. The people who received most benefit were not the actively ill, but the ones who needed reconditioning. For this purpose, and for the ailments which lack of condition always implies, foreign cure is admirable.

Not because practically the same thing could not be taken at home. America at least has a wealth of thermal springs. But because it would not be taken. The man who has crossed 3,000 miles of ocean in search of improvement is likely to do all he can to secure it.—Mary Roberts Rinehart in the Saturday Evening Post.

Road Statistics Prove Sunday Is Danger Day

Between seven and eight o'clock at night is the world's most dangerous hour. The 6,000 fatal accidents on Britain's highways during the past year bear witness to this fact. But most accidents of all kinds occur between five and six o'clock. From six to seven there is a decided lull.

It is curious that although the accidents recorded between 10 p. m. and midnight are fewer than from eleven o'clock in the morning to three in the afternoon, the number of fatalities in these two night hours is much greater.

In America last year 400,000 accidents, resulting in 13,000 deaths, occurred between the hours of 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., whereas in the night half of the clock out of a total of 336,200 accidents no fewer than 15,500 proved fatal.

The most dangerous day of the week for road-users—motorists and pedestrians—is Sunday.—London Answers.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Corn-Hog Reduction Program Announced for Charlevoix County

The latest step developed by the federal department of agriculture in the farm program is the corn-hog program. This program is to be carried on in every county in the state of Michigan, but obviously there will be more interest in some counties than in others. The main objective back of this program is to materially reduce the number of pigs which now has reached numbers that demoralize prices. This activity will no doubt be of interest to some 20 or 25 farmers. Briefly, the following statements will present a picture of how the plan operates:

1. For both corn and hog producers or either one separately.

2. Any farmer who grew less than 10 acres of corn for grain (not including corn for silage) and three litters of pigs during the years 1932 and 1933 is not eligible to sign a contract.

3. Reduction payments on hogs will be $5.00 per head for 75 per cent of the average production of the farmer during the two years, 1932 and 1933. This payment will be divided into three installments. Example: If you raised on an average 60 pigs for this two-year period, you now would have to decrease 25 per cent or to 45 pigs for 1934, and the government will pay you $5.00 for 45 pigs (75 per cent of 60) or $225.00. This ought to interest you.

4. Reduction payments on corn will be 30 cents a bushel, less local administrative expenses on the average production of land taken out of corn. This 30 cents will be paid in two installments. You must reduce your acreage 20 per cent. Example: If you grew 20 acres on an average the last two years, for 1934 you can only raise 16 acres (one-fifth reduction). If your production per acre is 30 bushel, you would receive 30 bushel times 30 cents times 4 acres (out of production) giving you $36 for reducing your acreage.

This plan looks as though it will interest any farmer who can comply with the requirements. Any farmer who has an average of 10 acres of corn for grain for the past two years and three litters or more of pigs should immediately inform, county agent, B. C. Mellencamp, at Boyne City. While an accurate list of names is being secured, it might be that someone will be left out so if any farmer does not get his circular letter, be sure to inform your county agent if you are interested and additional material will be sent you at once to speed up the program.

Production Credit Association Directors Meet at Gaylord

The first meeting of the newly elected board of directors of the Gaylord Production Credit association was held at Gaylord last Tuesday with all the directors present. Under the direction of C. L. Nash, economics specialist from M. S. C., complete details of the association were carefully discussed. The election of officers resulted in the following elections: president, Irvin Cole, Alanson; 1st vice president, Charles Shepard, East Jordan; 2nd vice president, Charles McClure, Alpena; secretary and treasurer, A. J. Townsend, Gaylord. The other three directors are E. L. Porter, Onaway, Frank Zerby, Petoskey, and Roy Anderson, Alba.

This newly formed association gives every evidence of being of wonderful assistance to farmers who desire short time credit and who, by past performances have shown that they have the proper credit rating. With very few exceptions, the maximum length of time on these loans is twelve months with interest at around six per cent.

This association has its main office at St. Paul and is quite similar in its make up to the Land bank. Each borrower must take out five per cent in stock.

Within the next week or so more information will be available regarding this matter. Watch the papers for further developments.

Farm Housing Survey

Preliminary reports from seven women, who are field agents for the survey to secure data on additions, repairs, and improvements needed by the farm homes of the nation, indicate that farm owners in this vicinity are cooperating whole heartedly in the survey. The field agents for this county are Mable Bird, Marthn Wagbo, Stella Szepelak, Martha Beidel, Maurine Jenkins, Leva Newville and Sarah Blake. The state chairman and vice chairman are Miss Edna V. Smith, home demonstration leader, and George Amundsen, extension specialist in agricultural engineering.

In some of the 300 counties in the United States which were chosen as typical and therefore adapted for the purposes of the present survey work was delayed because of the holiday season, and storms or floods slowed up the work elsewhere. Following New Year's day, however, field agents were at work in most of the counties and the schedules they are filling out are being returned to county headquarters for compilation and tabulation. Later the schedules will be sent to state headquarters, and the final compilation will be sent to Washington.

The survey is in charge of the bureau of home economics of the U. S. department of agriculture. In each state the extension service is cooperating with the department.

In addition to the immediate employment benefits which come during the quietest months of the farm year, local survey leaders point out that the survey will give the farm owners themselves and the department of agriculture an indication of the most immediate needs in farm homes. Needed improvements would, if financed in a way satisfactory to the farmer, produce activity in the building and equipment trades, thus benefiting trade and agriculture alike.

WHY GET UP NIGHTS ?
USE BUCHU AND GIN
Make This 25c Test.

It is as valuable to the bladder as castor oil to the bowels. Drives out impurities and excess acids which cause the irritation resulting in getting up nights, burning, frequent desire, leg pains and backache. On account of the alcohol use juniper oil from which gin is made. Ask for Bukets, the bladder laxative also containing buchu leaves, etc. After four days, if not pleased your druggist will return your 25c. You are bound to sleep better after this cleansing. F. J. W. C. T. U. NOTES

Mrs. Cross outlined the new crusade plans of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the meeting held last Friday afternoon in the community room.

"Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man in whom there is no help . . . Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God."

Thus the crusaders of 1873-74 comforted and cheered themselves as they began their work "for God, home and native land." These same words are the comfort and cheer of the new crusaders of 1933-34 as they carry on to completion the temperance work begun sixty years ago.

A very comprehensive new crusade program has been formulated which includes the promotion of personal total abstinence; an aroused community consciousness relating to the effects of the drink traffic and the drink habit upon home conditions, child life and all phases of community welfare; a dissemination of the findings of science and medicine relating to alcohol; renewed emphasis on teaching in the schools the effects of alcohol and other narcotics on the human system; bringing to Christian people their particular responsibility to rid the world of an evil which keeps man from the Kingdom of Heaven, and bringing to citizens generally their responsibility for the nomination and election of officials who will themselves observe the laws and perform their sworn duties.

Courageously, with faith in the right, the W. C. T. U. will go forward, and it will not quit until the liquor traffic quits.

A discussion followed the presentation of the topic in regard to the sale of liquor by the glass and other questions arising under repeal. Mrs. Ball, n state vice president, who was present, gave an encouraging report of councils and township boards in southern Michigan who were voting against sales by the glass. The matter of seeking like action here was left with the executive board.

Mrs. Kelderhouse and Mrs. Palmer sang a very pleasing duet with Mrs. Pearl as accompanist. Gratifying reports were received from the welfare and play committees. Announcement was made that the February meeting will be held with Mrs. Parker at the Congregational parsonage. A guest meeting and tea in charge of group two is scheduled for January 26th.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

Michigan motorists who are unable to purchase 1934 plates, may drive to New York or Chicago as well as travel adjoining states with 1933 plates without fear of embarrassment.

After it was announced that 1933 plates would be legal in Michigan until March 1st, 21 states and two Canadian provinces notified the department officially that they would honor 1933 Michigan plates until that date.

From informal reports reaching the department, many other states are allowing 1933 Michigan plates to be used as long as they are legal here. Several motorists have driven to California without being halted and in cases where local officers have questioned the motorist, the state motor vehicle administrators have declared the Michigan driver could proceed on his journey.

Neither the department of state nor any employe of the department is connected with the Michigan Automobile Tax Reduction League, which is soliciting signatures on petitions seeking a reduction in license plate costs.

In many cities and villages, solicitors are endeavoring to secure signers and small fees, according to reports to the department, by linking the league with Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald.

"I have advocated license plate fees of $3, $6 and $9 but I hope no one will get the impression I have any connection with the circulation of these petitions," he said.

COUNTY MAY SHARE IN DROUGHT RELIEF WHEAT

Proof Must Be Shown Rainfall Was Insufficient Last Summer

County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow has received notice from the United States government that Charlevoix county will be given an opportunity to come in under the drought relief effort now being made and that if any farmers of the county are short of feed for their stock, due to last summer's dry weather, application for a supply of government wheat may be made.

Mr. Bulow has turned the letter over to County Agent Mellencamp who is asked to take charge of any effort to be made to secure some of this drought relief wheat for this county. Proof will have to be made to the state emergency welfare relief commission that the rainfall in this county last summer was so scant as to constitute a drought.

It will be necessary for the commission to send a member into each county to take testimony as to rainfall before the county's application for surplus wheat can be honored.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page.

It is interesting to learn that the old time winter vegetables, potatoes, cabbage, onions and turnips are returning to popularity. This does not seem to reduce the demand for the various green vegetables in market. New cabbage is now selling at about the same price as old. Cauliflower is plentiful and unusually reasonable in price. Broccoli and Brussel sprouts are of good quality and moderately priced. Green beans are somewhat more expensive than they have been. Peas are fine quality but expensive. Tomatoes are of better flavor as well as more plentiful than in recent weeks.

Strawberries are fairly plentiful and moderately priced. Grapefruit, oranges and apples are of excellent quality, abundant and relatively low in price.

Low Cost Dioner

Spaghetti with Chopped Beef and Tomato Sauce
Buttered Spinach
Bread and Butter
Tapioca Cream with Sliced Bananas
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Fresh Ham
Mashed Potatoes

Apple Pie
Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Mixed Appetizers
Braised Chicken

CWA AND WELFARE MUST FOLLOW RULES

Program Is Unjustly Criticised by Those Who Are Uninformed

We are reproducing the following article from the Elk Rapids Progress for the reason the points it brings out in regard to the CWA and welfare are applicable to Charlevoix county:

"The government is getting criticised in some quarters because its well-known CWA has not a variety of positions to offer the prospective applicant.

"With empty larders it seems incongrous for the jobless to start to dictate what they wish to work at and what they do not wish to work at, taking into consideration, however, that some men are more adapted to the heavy type of work than are others. Most CWA workers are happy with their jobs and pay checks.

"Officials and others interested have asked that an attempt be made to clear up some mistaken ideas that exist among men seeking employment.

"First, let it be understood emphatically that the quota for this county under the CWA is full, and no more can be taken on, unless someone now working would quit or get fired for cause. Do not leave any employment you now have no matter what the difference in wage scale with the idea that you can pick up a job on the CWA. It just can't be done. No one has power to change this condition.

"Now as to the work on the welfare jobs. This is a relief measure, just the same as handing out grocery orders without work. None can get on this without applying for public aid, for subsistence, and only enough work will be given each person to supply the needs of the family for a short time. It is useless to visit the welfare office and ask for work, other than this, for they have no other work to give you."

FITZGERALD WILL RUN FOR GOVERNOR

Formal Announcement of Candidacy Recently Made

Formal announcement that he will be a Republican candidate for governor at the next September primary has been made by Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state.

In a statement in which he called for party unity to bring an end to "extravagance in state government" he said that he is in the race "to the finish."

While secretary of state, who was the only Republican member of the Republican ticket to survive the 1932 Democratic landslide, has been generally considered as a candidate for gubernatorial honors this fall, this recent announcement was the first definite statement of his position.

It also apparently dispells doubt as to his intentions should former Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck enter the race. There have been many who felt that Fitzgerald has been waiting until after Groesbeck revealed his plans before definitely committing himself.

BUSINESS CENSUS ENUMERATORS ARE NAMED

Work of Taking Census, a CWA Project, Started Saturday

The work of taking a business census of Charlevoix county, a project sponsored by the Federal Civil Works Administration, was started Saturday.

Appointment of the county field force was made Friday by Dell J. McDonald of Cheboygan, census director for the district of which Charlevoix county is a part.

Those named enumerators were William Linsey of Boyne City, Richard Muma of East Jordan, James M. Winter of Charlevoix, and Ray S. Hamilton of Charlevoix, representatives-at-large, whose territory will include rural districts and Beaver Island.

It is anticipated it will require a month to complete the county census.

PAT HOLLAND HOME IS DAMAGED BY BAD FIRE

Fire thought to have been caused from defective wiring in the attic, caused damage estimated at $300 to the Pat Holland residence on Antrim street, Tuesday afternoon. The blaze was made more intense when it caught in a quantity of gill nets stored in the attic. This equipment was totally destroyed. Quick response by the fire department prevented the fire from spreading beyond a small area.

LOCAL CAGERS DEFEATED HARBOR '5'

WON 26 TO 20 DECISION IN FRIDAY CONTEST

Reserves and Junior High Beaten in Prelims—Play Traverse City Here This Week

Returning to early season form, Charlevoix's high school cagers polished off Harbor Springs last night to continue their campaign for Tip of Michigan class C honors. The final count was 26 to 20.

Harbor's all-veteran team was first to score but were overtaken before the closely-fought period terminated. With the 5 and 4 lead to start the second quarter, the Kipmen pulled away to a 17 and 7 advantage at the half. They increased this advantage 22 to 16 at the end of the third session and from there coasted on to victory.

Potter, lanky forward, was Charlevoix's scoring ace with 12 points. Pearl and Foster each contributed 5 and Ance 4. For the losers Brower was best with 9 points.

The score by quarters:

Charlevoix	5	12	5	4—26
Harbor	4	3	9	4—20

Charlevoix	FG	FT	F
Potter, f	5	2	3
Pearl, f	2	1	2
Ance, c	2	0	1
Foster, g	2	1	1
Roen, g	0	0	1

Reserves, Juniors Lose

Harbor Springs copped both of the preliminary games. Their reserves defeated the Charlevoix seconds by a 16 to 12 count, while their junior high cagers were victorious over the locals by a 16 to 12 margin.

The Kipmen step into class B competition again Friday night when they play the Traverse Trojans in a return game on the local court. Traverse defeated the Kipmen in their initial contest of the season and the locals will try hard to reverse the decision on their own hardwood.

LEGION ACTIVITIES

By F. V. Tyler

The dugout at the Legion home is a warm and cheerful place to visit these cold nights and reception on the post radio is great. Thirteen members were present at the regular meeting Tuesday evening.

A membership campaign has been started. "General" Clarence Meggison, chairman of the membership committee has chosen as captains, Comrades Charles A. Hamlin and Charles Martini, who will each pick a staff of assistants from the present paid membership, get a roster of eligible ex-service men and former members of the Legion and go to work with a will. Everything will pass as "fair" in this contest except hitting below the belt and using brass knuckles. "Hi-jacking" is permissable and whichever side can land a prospective candidate can chalk him down to its credit, even if found within the "enemy's" lines.

The losing side has to put on a free feed to the winning side and the new members and serve it. This enjoyable, gustatory event will take place on the first regular meeting night in February, at the dugout.

PROPOSED COURT HOUSE PLAN HERE

PRESENTED TO COMMITTEES AT MEETING TUESDAY

Optimism Expressed Over Possibility of CWA Approval—City Promises Fullest Cooperation

An exterior sketch and floor plans of the new Charlevoix county court house proposed as a CWA project were seen Tuesday by the several committees working on the proposition at a joint all-day session here.

They were presented by William Kuhni, Detroit architect, retained by the committee to prepare plans and designs for submission to state CWA officials for approval. Present at the meeting were members of the county supervisors' committee, the Charlevoix Association of Commerce committee, the mayor and members of the Charlevoix city council, the Charlevoix county road commission and J. M. Foster, chairman of the county CWA commission.

The design is unique and a thing of beauty. Construction is planned of hard-head stone, 10 to 12 inches in size, with slight Bedford stone trim. The architecture follows the Roman castle design and the architect assures that no other municipal or county building of its kind exists in the middle west. The design is in keeping with this city's slogan of "Charlevoix the Beautiful" and in this purpose the goal has been attained. The sketch is being framed and will be displayed at the Charlevoix Abstract & Engineering Co. office for public scrutiny.

With success of the project depending upon federal extension of the CWA program, Mr. Kuhni assured the committees Tuesday indications are that Congress will make necessary appropriations for the purpose. He added that court house projects under $200,000 are being looked upon favorably by state CWA officials and would likely receive first consideration when the program is extended.

The importance of city cooperation to the extent of furnishing materials and necessary financial aid to such projects was stressed by Mr. Kuhni, and any doubt of Charlevoix's cooperation along this line was removed when the city council pledged its fullest support.

Plans call for the new building to be constructed on the present court house site. The old building would be torn down in order to take advantage of a credit of around $15,000 for razing, materials and old equipment. It is the hope of the committees to group county projects to an extent where the labor involved will raise the proportion between labor and materials to a point which will completely cover the cost of materials, thus removing necessity of raising finances for material purchases.

The committee is progressing satisfactorily with the proposition and, given public cooperation, will bring this needed county improvement to a successful conclusion.

COUNTY CWA PAYROLLS HAVE TOTALED $82,921.20

According to an announcement by Lillis Flanders, county treasurer, CWA payrolls released in Charlevoix county since inauguration of the program have totaled $82,921.20, including the payroll for last week.

COUNTY BANK AWAITING WASHINGTON PERMISSION FOR OPENING

With application for charter approved by the state banking department, and application for membership in the Federal Deposit Guarantee Corporation now in Washington, officials of the Charlevoix County bank are awaiting permission for reopening.

This gratifying announcement was made Wednesday morning by Robert Bridge, cashier, who predicted it would be another week or two before word is received and details necessary for reopening worked out.

Patrons of the County bank will receive this announcement with no little satisfaction. The work of reorganization and meeting requirements necessary for reopening has not been accomplished without great effort, and the fact that the task will soon be brought to a successful conclusion will be gratifying to all concerned.

EAST JORDAN CANNERS DEFEAT POLAR BEARS

First Northern Michigan Team to Upset Fast Local Quintet

The Charlevoix Polar Bears lost their first game of the season in Northern Michigan competition last Wednesday evening, dropping a 29 to 21 decision to the East Jordan Canners.

The fast East Jordan outfit, composed of former local and Ellsworth high school stars, piled up a commanding lead in the first half and, while out-scored in the final two periods, held a winning margin at the final whistle.

The Canners held a 14 to 2 advantage at the quarter and an 18 to 9 lead at the half. The Bears scored 12 points to the Canner's 11 in the last two stanzas, but their late stort spelled defeat.

Sommerville, who in high school competition was one of the best court men in class C ranks, led the Canners with 14 points, while Ikens was high for the Polar Bears with 10.

The Polar Club defeated the East Jordan seconds 16 to 15, in the preliminary.

Reviewed Work of 1933 and Plan Active Campaign for the Coming Year—Will Hold Regional Meet

The Charlevoix Sportsman's Club held its annual meeting Monday evening at the K. of P. hall with a large attendance of members present.

At the election of officers, William H. Wallace was chosen to succeed Harold Hallett as president of the organization. Other officers chosen were: vice-president, Charles Munson; treasurer, P. D. Campbell; secretary, Clarence N. Wood, the latter succeeding himself.

Reports were given and work of 1933 reviewed with a note of satisfaction over the accomplishments. The past year saw completion of a successful campaign resulting in enlargement of the Stover creek rearing ponds, construction of control dam at the head of the system, addition of ponds to handle a larger number of fry, successful rearing to fingerling stage of thousands of brook trout, steel head and rainbow trout, and last, but not least, construction late last fall of a by-pass to control flood waters during the periods of heavy rain.

This last improvement will prove very valuable and eliminate heavy loss of fry during frequent flood stages. The by-pass, built from the control dam to a point below the series of upper ponds, will permit diversion at any time of water in excess of that needed in the rearing ponds. It will eliminate choked screens and subsequent overflow and loss of fry.

The Club voted to extend to the state conservation department the use of its patrol boat for lake patrol, planting and other work, providing the department take over maintenance of the craft.

Plans were formulated and a committee appointed to arrange for a regional conservation meeting in Charlevoix in the near future. Sportsmen's clubs and like organizations of Northern Michigan will be invited to attend. An effort is being made to have a department speaker here for the meeting.

The local organization is looking forward to a year of promotion and activity aimed to better hunting and fishing conditions of Charlevoix county. The result of its work has already been an important factor in betterment of conditions.

BASKETBALL TOURNEY SITES ARE SELECTED

Harbor Gets District Meet and Petoskey the Regional

Dates and places for the district and regional basketball tournaments were announced this week by Charles E. Forsythe, state interscholastic athletic director.

The district tournament for class C and D schools, alternated between Charlevoix, Boyne City and Harbor Springs, will be held March 1, 2 and 3 at Harbor this year. Petoskey has again been chosen one of sixteen schools to entertain regional tournaments on March 8, 9 and 10.

WORKING HOURS OF CWA ARE REDUCED

STATE ORDERS CUT FROM 30 TO 24 AND 15 HOUR BASIS

Welfare Officials Get State Release of Funds and Pay Back Direct Relief Bills

Effective immediately and in compliance with orders of Fred L. Johnson, state emergency relief administrator, working hours for all CWA workers in Charlevoix county have been reduced.

The new instructions received here Tuesday afternoon set the working week for CWA at a maximum of 24 hours for cities and 15 hours for rural districts and cities of less than 2,500 population. Under this arrangement workmen in the Charlevoix and Boyne City districts will be employed 24 hours. The plan further calls for two shifts, which will result in dividing the workmen into two crews, each working three 8-hour days, 24 hours for each shift, providing 48 hours of labor on the projects. In the East Jordan district the same plan will be followed out only on a 15-hour basis, it is understood. There will be no increase in quota.

The new arrangement will be put into effect Thursday morning, according to advice received from J. M. Foster, county chairman.

Previously county CWA workers have been employed 30 hours. The curtailment is nation-wide in scope, brought about by near-exhaustion of national CWA appropriations. It is the national administrator's plan to continue the work until May 1, but as funds were appropriated only to finance the work until February 15, expenses have been ordered reduced. If Congress makes additional appropriations, the program will be extended.

Meet Welfare Bills

Along with the radical change in the CWA program comes an announcement from County Clerk Fenton B. Bulow that payment of all November and December direct welfare bills is being made. This is not bad news for county merchants who have been "holding the bag" for something like $11,000 for a couple months, much to their own embarrassment, financial and otherwise.

Mr. Bulow, together with county welfare officials, made a successful finance mission last week end to Lansing. A release of $5,000 for December was made and the balance of the allotment for that month, $3,625.64, is expected shortly along with $2,400 for January needs which have been limited to $6,000.

Equally as heartening was a check for $12,000, a portion of this county's share of weight tax money, which Mr. Bulow brought back with him. This amount was an advance on the $34,446.73 the state owes the county in weight tax for the second and third quarter of 1933. The county will receive the balance when they are able to pay the state $12,234.49 for delinquent taxes collected. Of this debt to the state, the county has $7,469.88 impounded in local banks and $4,737.61 on hand.

A part of the $12,000 advanced will be used to augment welfare relief funds as provided last October by the board of supervisors when they voted one-third of the weight tax money should go for welfare, one-half to the sinking fund for bond retirement and one-sixth to be apportioned by the finance committee as deemed necessary.

LOCAL TOSSERS UPSET TRAVERSE

TOOK 12 TO 9 VERDICT FROM BIG SIX LEADERS

Contest Fastest Seen on Local Court This Season—Play Mancelona Quint Friday

In a game filled with intense action from start to finish, Charlevoix's Kipmen upset the Traverse City Trojans, undefeated northern Michigan Big Six leaders, by a 12 to 9 count here Friday night.

The set-back interrupted a record of six wins for the Trojans and atoned Charlevoix's defeat on the visitors' court in their first contest of the season in December. The game was a great defensive battle and with tension high, saw more than usual contact between players of the two teams.

The first quarter ended in a 4 to 4 tie, Charlevoix counting on goals by Potter and Pearl and Traverse on Norris' deuce and Ginther's two free throws. Charlevoix's scoring clicked in the second stanza, resulting on two goals by Potter and a single by Ance for 6 points. Traverse was held to a single goal by Ginther and the half ended with the Kipmen out in front 10 to 6.

Strong defensive work was displayed by both teams in the second half with only five points being registered in the two periods. Charlevoix came through with a field basket in the third stanza while holding Traverse scoreless, and in the fourth the Trojans reversed the procedure by stopping the Kipmen and adding a goal and free toss.

Potter was high point man for Charlevoix with 6. Pearl contributed 4 and Ance 2. Ginther and Norris shared the scoring for the Trojans, the former with six and the latter 3.

Charlevoix County Celebration to Be Held at Moonlight Gardens

Warm Springs Foundation, President Roosevelt's pet charity for the relief of children suffering from the results of infantile paralysis, will be the beneficiary of the President's birthday ball to be held at Moonlight Gardens on the night of Tuesday, January 30, while similar affairs are being staged all over the nation.

Charlevoix county's participation in the national movement is in charge of the county Young Democratic committee. The party will be featured by an old-time dancing party to which the public is invited. Entertainment features and refreshments will be provided by the committee.

From 11:15 to 12:15 the night of the celebration an exclusive Roosevelt program will be broadcast over all radio broadcasting chains. All other broadcasts will be suspended for this hour.

In the hope that Charlevoix county will contribute generously to the Warm Springs fund, those in charge of the arrangements urge all who can to attend.

COUNCIL SEEKING CWA CONTINUANCE

SEND RESOLUTION TO NATIONAL ADMINISTRATION

Approve Plans for New City Dock—Vote Sewage Plant Inspection Trip to Chicago—Pass Big Payroll

Among other things, the city council at their regular session Monday night, passed a resolution to be forwarded to Harry L. Hopkins, national Civil Works administrator, urging that the CWA program be continued.

Plans prepared by R. F. Sloan, city engineer, for docks proposed on Round lake harbor on property acquired for a sewage treatment plant, were approved by the council. The plans will be sent to the war department for final o. k. The new dock will connect with the government pier on the channel and extend the full length of the property. The plans call for steel sheet piling and concrete surface.

An ordinance creating a public utility for the operation, management and control of what is to be known as the Charlevoix Sewage Disposal System and issuance of revenue bonds to defray the cost, was adopted by the council, but was later recalled upon request of City Attorney Rollie L. Lewis until some technicalities could be straightened out.

By unanimous vote, the council decided to make a trip to Chicago for the purpose of inspecting sewage disposal plants similar to that proposed for this city. The inspection trip was suggested and urged by the firm of Greeley & Hanson, retained as engineers for the local project. In view of the large expenditure involved in construction of the plant and the importance of having first hand knowledge regarding the decisions they must make before final plans are completed, the council felt the taxpayers could be better served if they were to avail themselves of the knowledge such an inspection trip would afford. The mayor, six council members, city engineer and superintendent of municipal utilities will leave for Chicago Thursday afternoon.

One of the largest payrolls in recent months, including unpaid bills for the months of November and December, and aggregating $3,651.24, was paid.

MASONS FORGE AHEAD IN CRIBBAGE SERIES

Lead Odd Fellows by 258 Points After Monday Night's Session

The Masons increased their cribbage lead over the Odd Fellows by a substantial margin as the result of Monday night's play at the I. O. O. F. hall.

Scoring 16,169 points to 15,945 for their opponents, the Masons, previously leading by 34 points, are now out in front by a margin of 258 at the close of the third session of the winter series. Ray Ashdon led the Masonic scoring spree with 959 points, while Alfred Gill was the high Odd Fellow with 934.

The next contest of the series will be held Monday evening, January 29th, at the Masonic temple.

URGE NEW METHOD TAX COLLECTIONS

ASK STATE TO CONSIDER BUSINESS PLAN.

System Similar to Method Used for Lights, Phone and Gas—Would Get Cash on Time.

A system for payment of real estate taxes in monthly installments is being closely studied by the legislative council as preparations were being made for the coming second special session of the legislature.

Although the proposal — which would be one of the most revolutionary changes in the state's tax structure proposed in recent years—is still tentative there is strong possibility that it will be embodied in legislation the solons will be asked to consider.

The idea has been advanced by Rep. Tracy W. Southworth of Monroe, D., administration floor leader in the house and it has the support of at least one other member of the council's sub-committee on taxation, Rep. Vernon J. Brown of Mason, R. The other committeeman is Sen. Herbert P. Orr of Caro, R.

"With such a plan in operation," Rep. Southworth explained, "the salaried man would be able to spread his taxes over the entire year just as his income is. There would be no one big load coming at one period in the year.

"It would work out, we believe, in much the same way as electric light, telephone and gas bills are collected."

The proposal in its present form also contemplates discounts for the prompt payment of taxes each month and for a larger discount for those who are able and who desire to pay the entire year's levy at one time.

In subscribing his approval to the installment proposal, Rep. Brown said that although its chief benefits would be for the salaried man in the city it would also aid the rural areas which he represents.

"The discounts proposed for those who pay their entire taxes at one time would benefit the farmer," he said. "The farmer gets the bulk of his income in the fall when he sells his crops and it probably would be advantageous for him to pay the year's taxes then and secure the discount."

Both legislators discounted the objection that the monthly collections would be more costly than the present annual system, asserting that public utility figures favor the monthly plan.

Details of the proposal, all of which are still in process of formation, provide for appointment of community stores or banks as collection agencies, following the system used by many public utilities.

Payment of the year's levies would be spread over a 10-month period with no collections in November or December during the holiday season and when fuel expenses are higher.

Under the present system property reverts to the state after five years of tax delinquency. Under the Southworth plan they would revert at any time when taxes are unpaid for 24 one-month periods—either successive or cumulative months. They would also revert if even one month's taxes of the sixth year were still delinquent.

"By making it easier for payment, however," Southworth said, "we feel that delinquencies will be reduced to a minimum. We will have provided rewards for prompt payment instead of penalties for non-payment."

WELFARE SUPPLIES FEED FOR BEAVER ISLAND LIVE STOCK

A shortage of feed for live stock on Beaver Island has been alleviated through action of the state welfare commission in granting an increase of $1,000 in the January welfare appropriation of Charlevoix county to care for the situation.

A portion of a consignment consisting of 85 tons of hay, two tons of corn and 200 bushel of oats was taken to the island Monday by the coast guard cutter Escanaba, which arrived here early that morning from its base in Grand Haven. The balance of the cargo, together with CWA building supplies and a quantity of bulk coffee, tea and sugar was taken Wednesday, the boat leaving here at noon.

The Escanaba was able to reach a point within 300 feet of shore in St. James harbor. The supplies were unloaded and transferred to shore by sleigh and truck.

CENTRAL LAKE

This time we had a real "January thaw."

Miss Lois Russell is now helping Mrs. Rushton, the sheriff's wife, at Bellaire.

Welford Davis, the rural delivery man, has been going with sleighs this week. He formerly went part way with the car.

Arden Bennett has closed the bakery again after a short run and is not employed as draftsman for the CWA, so we are told.

O. R. Morse and sons are loading some potatoes for Charles Austin of Bay View this week, and some for Art Carpenter of Lake Edge.

The CWA park work is going on about one-third time now. A number of men have been laid off. Illinois and Tennesee reports that all CWA money has been used.

Mrs. Hattie Stevens is rapidly closing out er banking business since the announcement two weeks ago of its closing. August Banoski of Bellaire severed his connection with the bank Saturday.

Elmer Carroll has moved back to town from Central Lake, but is still in the honey business. Late years he has been bothered with the rheumatism so that he has had to change his occupation.

If it isn't one thing, it's two. Samuel Insull no more than gets out of Greece then he gets into "hot water." Verily, the life of the transgressor is hard. Mrs. J. C. Siegars, who formerly lived here, but now of Chicago, lost $200 through the Insull failure.

O. R. Morse's warehouse here has been designated by Administrator Harold Lamb of Bellaire, as distributor of the Red Cross products for this place. Twelve hundred pounds of butter and several tons of pork were received. The nineteen sacks of flour went off quickly, but more is supposed to come in this week.

We enjoyed the trip with Rev. E. M. Mumby to his appointments at Barnard and Norwood Sunday afternoon and evening, respectively. Fifty-six people were in attendance at Barnard Sunday school last Sabbath, and about 20 at Norwood services. Sunday school at Norwood has been discontinued. An Epworth League with Miss Ruth Matchett as president has been organized, which meets Sunday evening. Some of the christian people from Barnard are attending Sunday evening meetings at the Baptist church at Charlevoix from which they receive great spiritual inspiration, which is saying much for Rev. and Mrs. Rauch.

James Dawson is now running his tractor steam engine at the CWA town hall project at Bellaire. It furnishes steam for the concrete mixer in the work. Probably it could be hired to run the steam roller of the county dads for a small sum. Mr. Dawson had quite a time getting the tractor out to M-88 from his saw mill about a mile north of the main pike at Bay View. It could not get through entirely under its own power so C. Bennett of Atwood was hired with his gas tractor to assist. By going around through the fields it was finally taken to the main road. After that it easily ran to Bellaire under its own power with Si Carpenter of Bellaire at the throttle.

Ye correspondent and Rev. Earl M. Mumby, M. E. pastor, enjoyed the hospitality of the E. R. Jones family, where we took supper last Sunday evening. The pastors and friends are always welcome at this home in Norwood. "E. R." is quite partial to preachers since ong of them did him the kindly act of uniting him in marriage with a certain Miss Newland just forty years ago last Saturday. If friends had known about it there would probably have been a surprise party for them. The pastor has been invited to the L. A. S. dinner at Norwood Wednesday, and one at the George Block home, at Barnard, Thursday. The pastor has been kept pretty busy looking after Carol Louise, an eight and one-half pound daughter which arrived at his home recently, so he has not been able to attend all the "functions." We told Rev. E. S. Carrol that a birthday present will be due from him a year hence but he says he isn't that kind of a Carol, and never sings carols.

ROCK ELM

The rural house inspector was in this locality last Thursday.

Mrs. Metz called on Mrs. Ben Smatts Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Lawton called on Mrs. L. Jensen and Mrs. Metz one afternoon last week.

Mr. VanderArk of Ellsworth, was in the neighborhood buying potatoes last week.

G. Jensen, who suffered a stroke of paralysis a few weeks ago, is slowly recovering.

Our school bus ran off the road one morning last week. No damage was done except to cause a load of boys and girls to be about two hours late for school.

Hank Monk, Stage Driver

OF ALL the men who guided the lumbering Concord stage coaches across the plains and over the mountains of the West in the days before the railroad came, none was more famous than Hank Monk. He is not so much remembered, however, as he should be—for being the driver, who, on July 30, 1858, brought the first coach mail over the Central Overland route to its western terminus at Placerville, Calif.—as he is for being the man who once "squelched" the great Horace Greeley, the New York editor who felt qualified to give advice to anyone and everyone, including Abraham Lincoln.

The story of Hank and Horace is one of the classics of the West. In 1859 Greeley made a trip to the Pacific coast and it happened to be Hank Monk who was on the "bridge" of the coach which took the renowned Easterner out of Carson City, Nev. As they started, Greeley leaned out of the window and informed Hank that he expected to be in Placerville right on time so he could catch the connecting coach for Sacramento.

Hank was not accustomed to taking orders from anyone, least of all from an eastern tenderfoot. But he only smiled blandly and said "All right!" The first few miles of the trip were upgrade and Hank had to take it slow. But when he reached the crest of the Sierras he began to "throw the leather" into his six-horse team. Down the rocky trail thundered the heavy coach, bouncing and lurching over rocks and chuckholes.

Three times the terrified easterner tried to lean out the window and shout some more advice. But every time he was thrown back into the coach. The fourth time he succeeded and, to his shrieked commands to Hank to slow down, that Western John shouted back gaily, "Keep your seat, Horace! I'll get you there on time!" And he did! When the admiring populace of Placerville heard the story they presented Hank with a gold watch engraved with these words: "Keep your seat, Horace," and for the next half century that became a byword when a westerner wanted to rebuke impatience.

There was another aftermath to the incident, however. When Greeley was a candidate for President, Monk sent word to Horace that if he was elected it might be a pleasant memento of their ride together if Greeley would give him some easy government job. To this the testy editor replied: "I would rather see you ten thousand fathoms in h—l than give you even a crust of bread. For you are the only man who ever had it in his power to put me in a ridiculous light before the American people, and you villainously exercised that power."

Custer Disaster Messenger

IN THE gray twilight of the dawn of June 25, 1876, the men on the steamer Far West, tied up on the banks of the Little Big Horn river in Montana, were awakened by a splutter of rifle fire. As they rushed on deck, they saw a horseman galloping furiously up the valley, turning now and then in his saddle to fire back at the whooping Indians who were pursuing him. When the redskins saw the steamer they gave up the pursuit and the lone horseman dashed up. Springing from his saddle, he staggered on to the Far West and gasped out: "Custer and all his men have been wiped out by the Sioux!"

He was "Muggins" Taylor, a scout attached to General Gibbons' command, on his way to Fort Ellis with dispatches from his commander. Discovered by the Indians he had been forced to run for his life and only the lucky chance of his finding the Far West where he did, saved him from death at the hands of the savages. To the men on board the boat he gave the first authentic account of the disaster that had befallen the dashing leader of the Seventh cavalry.

Two days later Taylor left the Far West when it steamed out of the Big Horn into the Yellowstone and set out on his long, lonely ride of 175 miles to Fort Ellis. A hundred miles from his starting place he reached an old stage station on the Yellowstone where lived Horace Countryman, an old scout and Indian fighter. Taylor was so exhausted that he was unable to go on, but the next day, accompanied by Countryman, he set out on a fresh horse and reached Fort Ellis, where he again told his tragic story to a group of horrified listeners.

In the meantime Countryman had continued on to Bozeman, where he expected to be able to spread the tidings of Custer's fate over a government telegraph wire. But on his arrival there he found the government wire down and useless, so he continued on to Helena which he reached about noon on July 4. There he told the news to Andrew J. Fisk, an Associated Press correspondent, and that afternoon Fisk flashed to the world the first news of the disaster on the Little Big Horn—a feat made possible by the daring ride of "Muggins" Taylor.

After the Indian wars were over Taylor became a peace officer in Montana and was killed in the town of Coulson in October, 1882, by a drunken no'er-do-well named Lamp or Lemp who shot Taylor down when the deputy sheriff attempted to arrest him.

Household Diary Has Real Value

Matters Worthy of Record Can Be Chronicled for Reference.

The day of the diarist as a recorder of events in literary style seems to have passed almost completely. But this does not indicate that diaries are not kept. They may be mere jottings of daily events, to show where the writer was and what were the happenings of the calendar days. Some persons keep diaries in order that they may realize the good times they have, and nothing but pleasant occurrences are recorded in the happy day summaries. Often diaries are kept chiefly for business affairs, the transactions of each day being given without comment; and very briefly. The pages can be referred to, to refresh the writer's memory. These diaries often prove of value in establishing facts in years later.

One of the best diaries for the home is an impersonal household diary. For example, in it are set down such data as when furnace fuel was bought, and when a new supply was necessary, and the total cost of each quantity as well as its price per ton, if coal, or the price in similar units of purchase, if of other fuels. When furniture was bought, if new, is set forth, or when upholstered if the covering was worn out on old chairs, etc. Also what the new material cost, what kind it was, and the charge for the work of recovering the pieces.

Such a household record is a fine thing to have, as, by referring to it, it will be discovered what the upkeep of the furniture amounts to, whether the price paid for the new piece was reasonable or not according to the wear it gives. The worth of the particular upholstery material is also tested by its durability, which can be determined from the pages of the diary.

The record of the garden will prove helpful from year to year, telling, as it will, when plants were set out, or when seed was sown, when bulbs were taken up, whether the place in which they were stored was good or not, according to how the plants developed from them next season. When the lawn was fertilized, and the gardens dug and fertilized in the spring, and the costs, should be set down.

It is by such jottings in few words that this sort of diary proves valuable. The personal element is eliminated, or at least, minimized. The volume is not one for the writer's eyes alone. It is a household diary for anyone to consult who cares to be enlightened on the subjects written about.

Little Change in Holy Land Modes of Living

Housekeeping in the Holy land is still much the same as it was some two thousand years ago. The modern woman of Bethlehem and Nazareth, like her sisters in the Bible, has few shopping worries. One day's visit a year to the nearest shopping center sees all her requirements safely packed on the back of a lumbering camel.

Although communal bakehouses have been established in many villages, numerous housewives still prefer to bake their ring-shaped loaves on hot stones in an outdoor oven.

Their bright-eyed babies are still wrapped in interminable swaddling clothes, which have to be unwound three or four times daily.

All that the poor have for a home is a windowless room with a raised dais at one end on which the family sleep and squat for their frugal meals of bread and goat's milk; the lower quarter serves to accommodate the ox, ass, and any hens that may be theirs.

One incongruity is noticeable in both Judea and Galilee today. Petrol cans are used not only as pitchers by many of the women, who draw water from the famous Virgin's well outside Nazareth, but as cooking utensils and food bins.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills put up 60 years ago. They regulate liver and bowels.—Adv.

Life's Real Things

Life is not made up of great sacrifices and duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir Humphrey Davy.

SPINK, SPANK, SPUNK.

Father—Bobby, if you had a little more spunk in you, I think you would stand better in your class. Now do you know what spunk is?

Bobby—Yes, sir. It's the past participle of spank.

Important Oversight

Doctor—All your organs are in perfect condition!

Patient—Good! I am thinking of marrying a second time and—

When the Cat's Away

"How many men work in your shop?"

"With the master, seven."

"Six without the master?"

"No, when the master is not there, none of them work."—Fliegende Blaetter, Munich.

Open to Question

Tony—You should see the graceful lines of her neck and her liquid eyes. Her skin is like velvet and her breath smells like new-mown hay.

Jack—Are you speaking of a girl or a cow?

Correct Answer

"Who is not amused by the complete disregard for expense with which the average married woman chooses her clothes?" asks a writer.

The average married man.—Passing Show.

Easily

Club Bore (finishing hard-luck story)—There now, can you beat it?

Victim—Yes, at once. Good morning!

PUNISHMENT

Little Girl—If I was a teacher I'd make everybody behave.

Aunty—How would you do that, my dear?

Little Girl—Very easy. When girls was bad I'd tell them they don't look pretty. And when little boys was bad I'd make them sit with the girls. And when big boys was bad I wouldn't let them sit with the girls.

Diplomatic Wanderer

Tramp—I thanks yer kindly fer yer generosity, ma'am.

Housewife—But I haven't given you anything.

Tramp—No, but I'm sure yer din't goin' ter let my gratitude go to waste, are yer?

Reassurance

Climber—I say, what if the rope breaks?

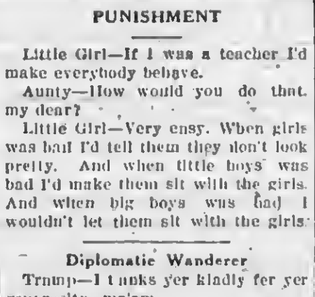
Guide—Now don't you worry about that. I've plenty more at home.—Vancouver Province.

How It Happened

"I don't know why you married me. I assure you I was taken by surprise when you accepted me."

"No, Johnny, you weren't taken by surprise—I took you by mistake."

POOR JONES



"That Mrs. Jones is always very well dressed, while Jones always looks shabby."

"Well, she dresses according to fashion and he according to his means."

He Had Heard

She—They say I have eyes just like my father.

He—Yes, I've heard somebody remark that you were pop-eyed.

HOBBIES DEAR TO HEARTS OF MEN IN HIGH PLACES

President Roosevelt's hobby for collecting marine pictures is a reminder that other Presidents have had hobbies as well.

President Warren G. Harding collected pipes, as many as he could get, of all sizes and varieties from all parts of the world. Many of these he kept on his broad desk. In what was then the private study of the President on the second floor of the White House. Pipes were placed on hook's shelves about the room. President Harding smoked one pipe only in his private study, although he had other pipes in the Executive offices which he liked to smoke occasionally.

Another collector President was Calvin Coolidge, who would go to much trouble to get original editions of law books, or autographed copies of more modern ones. He always wrote in the book the date it came into his possession and where he had obtained it.

Another rare book collector was the sixth President of the United States, John Quincy Adams, who gathered rare books from all over the world and particularly treasured those that had been collected by his father.

The late speaker of the house of representatives, Champ Clark, of Missouri, not only had a collection of gavels but of corn-cob pipes as well. Speaker Clark kept these collections in his desk in the speaker's office. It was a mark of rare favor to be shown them and to be told their origin and history.

Andrew Mellon, former secretary of the treasury and former ambassador to Great Britain, has a notable gallery of paintings, many of rare value.

Admiral George Dewey was a collector of watches and was the recipient of many handsome jeweled ones from countries and organizations eager to honor him in this way.

A trout won't jump over a beaver dam but it doesn't have any trouble in dropping down over the dam. Trout accustomed to living in the backwaters of a beaver dam are generally unfit to eat. Ordinarily a beaver dam for the first two or three years provides the best fishing, only to lose its importance after that time. These are some of the preliminary conclusions made by J. C. Salyer, who is making a study of the relationship between beaver operations and trout, for the Department of Conservation.

Novelty Is the Word for Velvets

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLAIDED, striped, ribbed, lusterful or lusterless, thin and supple as chiffon or stiff with elegance or mayhap with glint of gold and silver running through its weave—how will you have your velvets, ladies? For in this day and age you can get any types of velvet, from most informal to most formal, according to your needs and tastes. Which is why the world of fashion has taken to donning velvet most any hour of the day.

However, it is not about formal velvets that we are going to talk in these few paragraphs for we are so intrigued with the plaided and checked and striped velvets which designers are working up into stunning and practical daytime clothes we would like to tell you about them. These swagger new novelty velvets are simply irresistible. And to prove our statement we are illustrating herewith a group of charming velvet fashions just turned out by leading Paris couturiers.

The bow-trimmed dress of checked velvet, shown at the top to the left in the picture, bears the stamp of the house of Mainbucher. It is the type which style-knowing women are choosing to wear when the urge comes to sound a note of coming spring in their "first" gown of the new year. Special comment should be made in regard to the bow-tie fastenings down the front of the blouse. Not only are self-fabric ties a dressmaking theme for the newer costumes, but jabot [illegible] widely featured.

The coat-and-dress ensemble, to the right in the group, will probably start its career at some fashionable resort this winter, but it will be sure to carry on into the spring when its wearer returns to the north. The dress is black with white and black checked velvet for the coat and the trimming on the bodice—a likable wrap to wear with other frocks, too!

For a blouse with your black or dark brown, green or wine-shade velvet tailored suit you will find a brief little affair of gay-striped velvet wonderfully effective. We have made a wee sketch of a late model of this description just to show you how cleverly they are styled with fancy buttons and cunning scarf effects at the neckline.

It is not only that blouses of plaid or stripe velvet, as the case may be, are glorifying daytime tailleurs, for just as striking are all sorts of necessary items which are made of velvets in gorgeous plaids and stripes as well as in exotic monotones.

In this category belong such interesting items as hat-and-scarf sets usually with gloves to match. If not velvet then at least the wide flaring cuff is of velvet. If you wish to carry the ensemble idea in beyond this a belt and handbag of the same velvet is often added.

SHOES IMPORTANT WARDROBE ITEMS

Here is a little style dissertation we shall go into feet first, shoes being as important as any item in the entire wardrobe.

Raoul makes a sort of sandal pump in brown kid and black patent leather. There is a swirley movement with the patent leather in quarter-finish stripes from the instep of the shoe at the vamp, to the outer side between the instep and the toe. Half moons are cut around the side and through these a narrow strip of leather is laced in and out twice. The rest of the shoe is perfectly plain brown kid for the heels which is in black patent.

Greco has a new cut-out oxford in navy blue kid that has no systematic reasoning for its motif. In the front there are two leaf-like holes fastened together with a metal pin about an eighth of an inch long and a sixteenth wide. From this is extended and finally appliqued to the toe of the shoe an unevenly cut strip of leather in the shape of the letter L.

Loveliest of Footwear Is Fashioned of Gold Kid

Nobody seems to be talking anything but gold these days—and as was to be expected, fashion follows right through with economics. We have gold sequin trimmings for evening gowns, gold lame collars for afternoon dresses, and gold kid mules for wear when there's a spare hour to relax at home. Some of the loveliest footwear in the lounging footwear departments this season is done in gold kid, and it reaches the height of luxury when it is trimmed with silver kid bands and linings. There are also interesting colored kid boudoir slippers to match or contrast with different negligees.

These little metal kid D'Orsays or mules are being shown by the shops this season in the most tailored styles or fashions dressy enough to suit the fluffiest taste.

Old New Colors

"MUDDY" PASTELS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If you are studying up on the color question here is a tip for the future. "Muddy" pastels are being shown in cruise clothes in mid-season collections. It is also predicted that they will be very important for the late spring and coming summer months. With the dress of rather dark yellow crepe here pictured, a large white picture hat, white gloves and effective white kid sandals are worn. Which is good news, for most every one likes sandals and when made of perfectly finished kid they are not only delightfully comfortable but they carry an air about them which stands for refreshment and high style.

SEEKS ALEXANDER'S TOMB

Enthusiastic over his proposed expedition to find the body of Alexander the Great, Howard Carter, discoverer of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen has arrived in Alexandria, Egypt, to raise the necessary $240,000 for the venture. Should Alexander's tomb be discovered, he said, it would be the most important archeological find ever made in Egypt, even more important than the Tut-Ankh-Amen discovery. The contents of Alexander the Great's tomb, he believes, would consist chiefly of metal, whose intrinsic value would not be as great as the Tut-Ankh-Amen relics. There is the possibility, he added, that Alexander's tomb has been covered by the sea. The system he would use in searching for the tomb he described as "sondage," or sinking of pipes.

Tormented for Five Years with Dandruff

Healed by Cuticura

"For nearly five years I was tormented with dandruff. My scalp itched and burned and became very sore and red from scratching. My hair became thin and dry and fell out in handfuls, and the dandruff scaled off and could be seen on my clothing.

"I had lost all hope of ever being healed. A friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I sent for a free sample. The first application stopped the itching so I bought more, and I used only one cake of Cuticura Soap with two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. M. L. OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

First Machinery School Well Attended

The machinery school held at Charlevoix last Wednesday interested an attendance of 49 farmers. From 10 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the folks present were deeply interested in the demonstration. A. J. Bell, specinlist from M. S. C., was present and demonstrnted how to make adjustments, how to properly remove the used and worn out parts and the quickest way to make the replacements necessary.

The grain binder also came in for its share of attention. By the use of illustrated charts, Mr. Bell showed very clearly how the bundles are tied and how that most important part of the grain binder actually works. He said that the most common difficulty in using a grain binder was in this portion of the machine and that it was one that most farmers knew the least about. Later on, bulletins will be sent to those who were present at the demonstration which will help greatly in mnking the necessary adjustments on the grain binder and the repair parts necessary.

It is hoped that another meeting similar to this one can be arranged for later on this year. Certainly with most farmers unable to buy new farm machinery, it is more important than ever to repair the old machinery and make it last longer. Very often a very few dollars spent for repair parts will put them in good condition.

Many Farmers Interested in Corn-Hog Reduction

The corn-hog program being initiated in the county is receiving the attention of a large number of farmers. Already, over twenty have indicated a desire to sign contracts and many have not yet had the opportunity of expressing their interest.

This program is developed to make a decided reduction in the hog population which will mean higher prices for pork. The same is true with corn inasmuch as corn and hogs have a very close relationship to each other in regard to price. The hog population is to be reduced 25% with those farmers who sign the contracts. They are to be paid $5.00 per head on 75% of their yearly average of pigs during the last two years.

The corn acreage is handled in about the same way. The acreage must be decreased 20% and then the farmer will be paid for the acreage taken out of production on the basis of approximately 30 cents per bushel for the average production on his contracted acreage as determined by his production during the last two years.

This program should be attractive to any farmer who can comply with the requirements which are primarily that he must have raised at least 10 acres of corn each of the last two years and that he must have had at least three litters of pigs per year during the last two years.

This week complete instructions will be sent to all farmers who have the proper number of units and who are interested in the new deal.

Clothing Project Leaders Met Last Week

The fourth lesson in the clothing project was conducted last Tuesday at Charlevoix with nine groups present and in Boyne City on Wednesday, with an equal number. This project has become very popular throughout the county and it is highly encouraging to note the keen interest shown by over two hundred ladies.

Miss Irene Taylor, clothing specialist from M. S. C., is in charge of this project and plans to have two more lessons before the achievement day which will come early in the spring. The last two lessons have been on the making of muslin patterns and on sleeve fitting. This incurs a great agreat amount of time and attention on the part of the leaders of each group and in some cases they have held four or five meetings so that most of the members of each group now have their muslin pattern completed.

Some groups in the county have a membership of over twenty which indicates the interest that this program has aroused in the county.

AT THE MOVIES

More than a thousand tars of the U. S. navy witnessed a battle recently that millions of movie fans are going to see and laugh themselves sick over. Uncle Snm's gobs see plenty in the way of fighting but all of them admitted this scrap was unique. In one corner was Jack Herrick, one time Pacific coast heavyweight champion; in the other, ladies and gentlemen, Joe E. Brown, the most lovable of screen comics.

Joe hasn't been in the ring since he did some amateur fighting in his early youth. Nevertheless, he triumphed over Jack, who outweighed him by an easy 75 pounds. It was all a part of the First National comedy, "Son of a Sailor," the nnvy comedy which comes to the Palace theatre on Saturday and Sunday, with Joe E. Brown starring in his very best manner.

RELIEF IN SIGHT

AUTO CLUB
IT IS TIME TO ACT!
PETITION TO LIMIT STATE GAS TAX TO 2 CENTS A GALLON
PETITION TO REDUCE AUTO WEIGHT TAX FROM 55 CENTS TO 35 CENTS PER 100 lbs

Relief from excessive motor taxes is demanded by the Automobile Club of Michigan which will soon begin circulation of petitions throughout the state to bring about a reduction in the weight tax of approximately one-third, and limit the state gasoline tax to two cents a gallon. Pointing out that automobile registrations have decreased annually since 1929, the Motor Club seeks to keep automobile taxes in accord with the times. It is pointed out that the state can operate with one-third less automobile tax monies and still maintain its present road system, build a liberal portion of new roads and make such alterations, widenings, etc., as are necessary.

It is as valuable to the bladder as castor oil to the bowels. Our popular game of cribbage is hailed with great gusto by some of the members of our male set. Enthusiam is at its climax when men with women opponents are winners. Two of our most ardent fans, W. J. Gallagher and Mike Cull, were not the same pair when with Mrs. Mike Cull and Miss Sadie Gallagher as opponents, they clashed here in the Cull home. It is commonly known that when the men are victorious their cheers may he heard for several blocks; but the women naturally take it graciously. The moral, "The men can't take it."

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

The first step toward allowing voters of Michigan to express themselves as to lowering licence plate costs and gasoline taxes, was taken last week when officials of the Automobile Club of Michigan filed forms of two petitions with the Department of State.

The petitions were submitted at this time in order to obtain approval as to their correctness in form.

The first petition would add a new section to the state constitution prohibiting the gasoline tax collected by the state from exceeding two cents a gallon. At the present time the state gas tax is three cents a gallon.

The second petition also adds a new section to the constitution, fixing the amount that can be charged for automobile license plates. Instead of 55 cents per hundred pounds as at present, the petition calls for a maximum rate of 35 cents per hundred or a reduction of approximately 36 per cent.

In order to place the proposals before the voters, 161,000 signatures must be obtnined and filed with the department.

Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald has been advocating substantial reductions in license plate costs for several months. His plan calls for amendments to existing laws by the legislature rather than by mandate of the constitution. The fact that 33,000 fewer license plates had been sold on January 17, 1934, than on the snme date in 1933 is evidence of the necessity for reducing the weight tax. On Jannnry 17, only 60,836 of the 1,300,000 motor vehicles in Michigan had obtained 1934 license plates.

A pamphlet containing all motor vehicle laws enacted by the legislature subsequent to 1931 will be available for distribution by the department of state next week. The pamphlet will be supplemental to the compilation of motor vehicle laws published in 1931.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

If you like orange marmalade why not make it yourself of the fine cheap oranges or equally good grapefruit now in market? A favorite recipe uses one orange, one grapefruit and one lemon. Strawberries are also of good quality and moderately priced.

The vegetable stores are full of unusually fine vegetables, all reasonable or low in price. New cabbage, California Brussels sprouts, broccoli and cauliflower are all choice quality. String beans and spinach are winter standbys whose price fluctuates more or less according to weather conditions but they are always reasonable and often cheap. Green peas and lima beans are more expensive but are still moderately priced. Tomatoes are increasingly plentiful and cheaper week by week. Many salad plants are available including lettuce, endive, watercress, cucumbers, radishes and shallots.

Low Cost Dinner
Smoked Pork Shoulder
Boiled Potatoes Creamed Cabbage
Bread and Butter
Deep Apple Pie
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner
Roast Beef Browned Potatoes
Buttered Onions
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Salad Drassing
Brend nnd Butter
Snow Pudding Soft Custard
Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner
Grapefruit with Honey
Roast Pork with Gravy
Apple Sauce Boiled Rice
Green or Lima Beans
Mixed Green Salad French Dressing
Rolls and Butter
Cheese Crackers
Coffee Milk

OXEN, MULES, HORSES WILL SETTLE DISPUTE

Unique Pulling Contest to Be Held at Michigan State College

A unique pulling contest will be staged as a feature of one of the evening programs during farmers' week at Michigan State college, January 29 to February 2, to settle an ancient and heated argument about various types of farm power units.

An ox team, a span of mules and a balanced pair of lightweight horses will fight it out in this three-corner contest Wednesday evening, January 31, in demonstration hall on the campus.

The oxen, owned by F. B. Martin of Battle Creek, weigh 5,000 pounds. They are red five-year-old shorthorn twins, and are worked regularly on the Martin farm.

An outstanding mule team which weighs slightly more than 3,000 pounds and has competed in pulling contests will be one of the opponents for the oxen. A team of brown Percheron geldings which weigh more than 3,000 pounds will round out the three-way battle for pulling supremacy.

Because the mules and horses entered have had experience competing on a dynamometer, the contest during farmers' week will be held with all three spans hitched to a stone boat, in order to give the ox team a fair chance.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Subject for Sunday, January 28, is "Truth."

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Life" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, January 21.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Proverbs 4:23): "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (page 107): "We apprehend Life in divine Science only as we live above corporeal sense and correct it. Our proportionate admission of the claims of good or of evil determines the harmony of our existence,—our health, our longevity, and our Christianity."

SCHOOL DISTRICT REORGANIZATION VITAL

Is Only Basis Upon Which Tax Burden May Be Equalized

School district reorganization is strongly advocated by Dr. Paul F. Voelker, state superintendent of public instruction, in an open letter to teachers published in the current issue of the Michigan Education Journal.

Equalization of educational opportunity, and equalization of the tax burden, are observed by Dr. Voelker as the basic need for reorganization. He states: "Many of the smaller and poorer districts are not able to raise sufficient money for the support of their schools because of low assessed valuations, while wealthy districts can aid the weaker ones."

The principle of a combination of the strong and weak districts applied on a large scale is feasible, believes Dr. Voelker. "Instead of 5,325 rural units we might have perhaps one for each county. Instead of 15,975 school directors for these rural school units, we might manage on a total of 581 directors for these same districts, or seven in each county, in addition to the city and village directors. This reorganization would save approximately $200,000 annually in the salaries of the rural school directors alone, and give greater administrative efficiency as well."

While the state superintendent's plan for reorganization does not include consolidation involving new building construction, it is thought in some cases that districts would consolidate for the purpose of giving a higher type of instruction to rural children. Dr. Voelker hopes for a permanent state support for schools, which would undoubtedly bring about some kind of county unit system. Such a county system would do away with the necessity for distributing school money through township and county treasurers with a resulting delay.

At the first party eleven tables were in play with prizes awarded Freda McMillan and Mrs. F. F. McMillan.

WELFARE RECEIVED 40% OF STATE TAX SALES

It is interesting to note that 40% out of every dollar collected by the sales tax is used for welfare. Distribution of the welfare funds is made by the Welfare Department of the State and the Federal Emergency Relief. These two organizations, in co-operation with the Public Works, are making it possible for the unfortunate citizens of Michigan to be fed and kept warm this winter.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Don't forget the Legion-Auxiliary card party at the dug-out, Saturday night. This will be for the benefit of the McKinney Memorial.

The battle is on! The war of the captains for 1934 membership, we mean. Five memberships were turned in Tuesday night to the "adje." Captain Martipi stole a march on Captain Hamlin which greatly amused the comrades.—It happened thusly. Captain Hamlin has been maneuvering around a certain prospect's place of business for several days, waiting for a chance to cop off his membership. Captain Martini made a hold sortie and captured this gent as he was alighting from a train. Result—score one for Martini. From now on, the fighting will be fast and furious as the ire of the enemy is fully aroused and no quarter need be expected from either side. When the smoke clears away on February 6th, victors and vanquished and their prisoners of war will sit down like the lion and the lamb to a pot-luck supper served and provided by the losers.

SEVENTEEN MILLION RELEASED SCHOOLS

Three Installments Primary Money Reach a Big Total

Charlevoix county's share of the state primary money, which, through a recent release, has reached a total of $17,398,203.29 for 1933, was $56,509.36.

The distribution is based on the annual school census of children 5 to 19 years, inclusive. The sum of $12.58 was distributed to the school districts for each census child resident of the district May 31, 1932.

Revenues to build up the primary school interest fund come from taxes paid by casualty and guarantee companies, express companies, fire insurance companies, freight, refrigerator and car loaning companies, life insurance companies, railroad companies, river improvement, telegraph and telephone companies. These companies pay a tax rate equal to the average tax rate for the state. In addition, organization fees, and the inheritance tax revenue, is included in the amount distributed to school districts.

The amount distributed to nearby counties in the three installments of the 1933 primary money is as follows:

Antrim	$42,268.80
Charlevoix	56,509.36
Emmet	58,836.66
Grand Traverse	69,693.20

BOYNE DEFEATS POLAR BEARS IN CLOSE GAME

Won 29 to 27 Verdict Last Wednesday—Manistee Quint Here Tonight

Boyne City evened the score with the Polar Bears last Wednesday night on their home court by winning a 29 to 27 verdict in a game that was close all the way. It was the Polar Bears second defeat on a foreign court in two weeks.

The battle was a royal one from start to finish, with the advantage changing practically with every tally. With the score tied 27-all and only a minute to play, Barden, Boyne center, broke away to net the winning goal just ahead of the final whistle.

A game between the Polar Bears and Manistee Iron Works, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed due to the heavy snow-storm, according to information received late Wednesday afternoon. The contest will be played later.

PYTHIAN SISTERS INSTALLED NEW OFFICERS

The Pythian Sisters installed officers for 1934 last Wednesday evening following a pot-luck supper to which husbands of members were the invited guests. The pot-luck supper was served at 7 o'clock, followed by the business session.

Mrs. Grace Geneit acted very capably as installing officer, assisted by Mrs. Alice Heise and Mrs. Lottie Nowland as Grand Senior and Grand Manager. Following are the officers installed:

HEALTH SERVICE OFFERED PUBLIC

CONVENIENCES ARE AVAILABLE AT SLIGHT COST

Application for Sanitary Privies, Septic Tank Installation May Be Made at County Headquarters

The United States Public Health Service, through a grant to Michigan, has made available funds to pay the labor cost on the construction of sanitary outdoor privies at residences, providing the owner assumes the cost of materials used in construction.

The cost of materials on this type of construction runs from $18 to $20, depending upon the amount of material that can be salvaged from old constructions. The labor cost, which the United States Health Department offers to pay, runs to $49 or $50. The new buildings are constructed so they are fly-tight. They are built to minimize the likelihood of water supplies being contaminated in the future and to conform to the best sanitation practices.

There is a distinct possibility that labor will also be provided in this community sanitation project to construct septic closets at resorts and private homes under a similar arrangement, with the private owners paying the material costs. The material cost of such construction is approximately $67, the labor cost approximately $174. Where these installations are made it is very necessary that plenty of water be added to the tanks each day—advisably five or six pails to the tank.

In case water may be had under pressure, it may be possible to install septic tanks. The material cost of these constructions must be figured for each individual installation. The county supervisor will be glad to advise anyone desiring to obtain these tanks at his home or resort. This type of construction is recommended in the case of a resort.

Anyone interested in obtaining the construction of a sanitary outdoor privy under this plan, or any resort or home owner who would like to have septic tanks installed, may make the necessary arrangements by getting in touch with Don McHugh, county supervisor of community sanitation, at the District Health and welfare headquarters.

HIGHWAY CHIEF IS FOR LICENSE CUT

VAN WAGONER PROPOSED 35c PER HUNDRED RATE

Legislative Council Holds Hearing on Proposal and Will Draft Bill for Legislature

A plan for the reduction of automobile weight taxes from 55 to 35 cents per hundredweight without curtailing the amount of money counties now receive from the license fees was given the legislative council last week by Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner.

He estimated that the reduction would amount to approximately $6,000,000 annually but he emphasized the fact that it would be absorbed to avoid losses to counties by refunding Covert and general county and township bond obligations under state credit over a greater period of years. Slashes would also have to be made in the cost of maintenance of county roads, he pointed out.

Van Wagoner frowned on a proposal advanced by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald some time ago that the reductions be placed on a $3, $6 and $9 basis, proportionate to the weight of vehicles. The highway commissioner said this plan would not be as good a guarantee of revenue as the flat 20-cent reduction he offered.

Speaker Martin Bradley announced at the open hearing on highway finances that the legislative council will recommend the auto license plate fee reduction suggested by Highway Commissioner Van Wagoner, rather than the plan suggested by Secretary of State Frank Fitzgerald.

The Van Wagoner plan calls for a reduction of from 55 cents to 35 cents per hundredweight on all cars. The reduction would not be as much as would the Fitzgerald plan which calls for a rate of $3, $6 and $9, depending on the weight of cars.

The Van Wagoner system also declares that the reduction must be borne almost entirely by the counties. The local reduction would be about $6,000,000, with $5,000,000 taken from the counties' share and only $1,000,000 from the state's share.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY HONORED ROOSEVELT

Joined in Nation-Wide Movement With Party Tuesday Night

Charlevoix county joined Tuesday evening in the nation-wide effort to provide a permanent endowment fund for the Warm Springs Foundation, an institution for the relief of children suffering from infantile paralysis.

A President's ball, similar to thousands held throughout the country honoring the birthday anniversary of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was given at Moonlight Gardens. A representative county gathering participated and needless to say they enjoyed the evening's entertainment.

Those at home were privileged to hear at 11:15 President Roosevelt express his appreciation of the efforts in his honor and behalf. It was a typical Roosevelt speech, full of sincere purpose and feeling. The President concluded his talk by saying: "This is the happiest birthday I have ever had."

WHAT ABOUT YOUR DELINQUENT TAX?

FOLLOWING IS A COMPLETE EXPLANATION

New Legislation Allows Installment Payment of Taxes That Are Unpaid Prior to 1932

To inform taxpayers of their rights and benefits under new legislation passed during the past year, the following questions and answers covering points over which the public generally is confused, have been compiled.

Some of these questions are asked every day of the week because they are of general interest. The public should have the correct answers.

Q—I owe 1928-1929-1930-1931, and 1932 taxes, which should I pay first?

A—1932 taxes should be paid first, to stop interest which adds at rate of ½ of 1% each month.

Q—If I pay my 1932 taxes, will my 1931 and prior years be sold for taxes?

A—No. Not until May, 1936.

Q—When must 1930-31 or prior years' taxes be paid to escape interest and penalty?

A—Taxes of 1931 and prior years may be paid any time before September 1, 1935, without interest and penalty, or can be paid in 10 annual payments, first payment being due September 1, 1935.

Q—Can 1932-1933 taxes be paid on 10-year plan?

A—No. 1932-1933 taxes are to be paid under General Tax Law.

Q—Do I have to make application and must I pay my 1932 taxes to come under the 10-year plan.

A—No. Any taxes of 1931 or prior years are automatically brought under its provisions.

Q—When may I pay my first installment of 1931 or previous taxes under this act?

A—Any installment or installments may be paid any time before September 1, 1935, without interest, unless the first payment is paid by that date the taxes go on sale in May, 1936.

Q—What interest do I have to pay under this plan?

A—No interest is collected on any installments paid before September 1, 1935. After that date they bear interest at the rate of 1% per annum.

Q—May I pay all installments in these two years instead of spreading the tax over a 10-year period?

A—You may pay the installments as far in advance as you wish, thus saving yourself interest.

Q—I have an unrecorded warranty deed in which 1930-1931-1932 taxes are unpaid. Does this new law permit this deed to be recorded?

A—Previously, in order to record a warranty deed, it was necessary to obtain a tax certificate which certified that there were no delinquent taxes on property covered by deed. The Moore-Holbert Act, however, states that taxes of 1931 or prior years are not to be considered as delinquent since under this law they will not be due until 1935. Therefore, in the case mentioned in the question above, it would be necessary for the 1932 tax to be paid in order to record the deed, but the 1931 and prior tax need not be paid.

Q—Should I pay my 1933 or current year tax before paying the 1931 and prior years?

A—Yes. To stop interest, as other years can be paid in installments if unable to pay all before September 1, 1935.—Thompsonville News.

A similar program is under consideration for young men and will be worked out as quickly as possible. Everyone interested in this program of supervised activity is privileged to join.

KIPMEN NOSE OUT A CLOSE VICTORY

DEFEAT MANCELONA BY 14 TO 9 COUNT FRIDAY

Boyne City, Only Class C Winner Over Kipmen This Year, Comes Here This Week

Charlevoix high school cagers managed to chalk up another conference victory at the expense of Mancelona here last Friday night, but not until the Antrim county outfit had thrown a real scare into the local camp.

The score, 14 to 9, indicates closeness of the contest. The Kipmen trailed at the close of the first quarter, were held on even terms during the next two and then staged a final period rally to win. Perhaps a bit over-confident, they were not anticipating the type of defense Mancelona displayed and were lucky to snatch a game that was anyone's up to the final minutes.

Coach Kipke started a reserve lineup which was retired before the first period was many minutes old. Richardson snared a goal for Charlevoix which was matched by Alexander's deuce for Mancelona. The regulars went in and the visitor tallied from the foul line to lead 3 and 2 at the quarter. In the second period Potter and Foster found the meshes for the Kipmen. Mancelona counted on a goal and two free throws. The half ended with the score 5-all. Each team added two points in the third quarter resulting in a tie, 8 to 8, and it was not until Mancelona went into the lead on Stradinger's gift shot that the Kipmen opened up with three goals to put the game on ice.

Foster was high for the Kipmen with 6, followed closely by Potter with 4. Acre and Richardson each scored two. Alexander was best for Mancelona with 5.

Score by quarters:

Charlevoix	2	1	2	6	—14
Mancelona	3	3	2	1	— 9

Charlevoix's reserves found the going easy enough to win from the Mancelona seconds by a 27 to 10 count in the preliminary.

Boyne Here Friday

The Kipmen meet their hardest test here Friday night. Boyne City, the only conference team to win over the locals this year, furnish the opposition. The Kipmen lost to Boyne earlier in the season with Pearl out of the line-up and hope with their full strength available to reverse the decision.

STATE BANK COMMITTEE REPORTS

MAKE KNOWN FACTS LEARNED AT LANSING CONFERENCE

Assure Public Institution Will Open As Soon As Routine Requirements Are Completed

Following a conference with banking department officials at Lansing, and Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials at Detroit, F. H. Wilkinson and F. S. Myers, members of the depositors' committee of the Charlevoix State Savings bank, now in process of reorganization, make the following report of interest to depositors:

"At the request of Archie L. Livingston, conservator, the undersigned members of the depositors' committee for the Charlevoix State Savings bank, accompanied Mr. Livingston and R. L. Lewis, the bank's attorney, to Lansing, where matters pertaining to the re-opening of the bank were thoroughly discussed with banking department officials. Later we went to Detroit, where some time was given to going over in detail the bank situation with the officers of the R. F. C.

We obtained these facts:

1. The bank will surely open.
2. The banking department's routine requirements await the action of the R. F. C.
3. That every step is being taken and followed up as fast as possible.
4. That any seeming delay is in the interest of the depositors.
5. In every step being taken, the depositors' interests are the first consideration with both the banking department and the R. F. C.

We publish this statement, that as many as possible may know the situation, as we realize the entire community is interested in the re-opening of this bank."

F. H. Wilkinson, F. S. Myers, depositors' committee of Charlevoix State Savings bank.

SAYS LOCAL BUREAU IS GOOD AS STATE'S BEST

Dr. Winder Finds Little to Recommend Big City C. A. Offices

People who live in the smaller communities seldom compare their towns in any respect with the larger cities, as the feeling is pretty generally established that conditions in all of the activities and institutions of the big city are as much superior to those of the small town that comparisons would be foolish.

However, Dr. C. J. Winder, president of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, now stopping in Ann Arbor, writes in a recent letter that he has visited thirty-seven different commercial association offices in Michigan and finds that our office and information bureau here function as well as the very best—better, in fact, than those of Ann Arbor or Detroit. "You can't get a map in five per cent of them," says the doctor, "nor very much courtesy. Our office is well known."

Dr. Winder also states that people don't seem to know just where Charlevoix is nor what it will cost to visit here in the summer season. He believes that we should have more road signs placed along the principal highways throughout the state. He says that, from what he has learned at Lansing, Charlevoix is getting about as much help as any other town from the CWA and the other relief activities of the government.

The doctor expects to return to Charlevoix on or about the 10th of next month.

CHARLEVOIX VETERAN FISHERMAN, OFFICIAL OBSERVES 80TH YEAR

G. C. Geiken, resident of Charlevoix 50 years, observed his 80th birthday anniversary Sunday.

Geiken, a native of Denmark, was one of the pioneer fishermen of the region and at one time operated three steam tugs. In those days 10-ton lifts were not uncommon. He retired from the fishing industry ten years ago.

He has held virtually every city office and continues active in politics. He was defeated by a narrow margin last year for alderman from the third ward.

He has three sons, Frank of Pellston, Cornelius of Marquette, and Harold of Dayton, Ohio, and a daughter, Miss Carrie Geiken, a teacher at Boyne City.

"Everyone is looking forward with keen anticipation to the social get-together on Friday, February 2nd.

"The Groundhog's Shadow," depicting coming events, is rapidly nearing completion. Here's hoping that the weather will favor us.

The horse sheds on the church grounds have been repaired so the horses will now find a haven of refuge from the wintry blasts.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

Strawberries are so plentiful that they are being sold at little greater cost than in the height of their summer season. Enjoy this winter treat while it lasts.

California navel oranges are at the height of their short season and they are particularly delicious to eat out of hand or in salads or desserts. For breakfast juice, Florida oranges are fine. Grapefruit continue plentiful.

Spinach and green beans are abundant and cheap. Broccoli though fine and inexpensive is not being used so much as it was. Cauliflower and new cabbage are cheap. Peas continue plentiful and good. Beets and carrots are particularly economical.

With Lent in the near future, favorite meat dishes should be enjoyed now though well cooked and seasoned fish is equally good.

Low Cost Dinner

Pan-browned Chopped Beef
Mashed Potatoes
Green Beans
Bread and Butter
Vanilla Junket with Preserves
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Chicken Pie with Biscuit Crust
Baked Sweet Potatoes or Yams
Buttered Broccoli
Hot Biscuits Butter
Strawberry Whip with Crushed Strawberries
Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Baked Smoked Ham or Roast Chicken
Mashed Potatoes Buttered Broccoli
Grape fruit and Orange Salad
Rolls and Butter
Fresh Strawberry Ice Cream
Coffee Milk

IF YOU GET UP NIGHTS
USE BUCHU AND GIN
Make This 25c Test.

It is as valuable to the bladder as castor oil to the bowels. Drives out impurities and excess acids which cause the irritation resulting in getting up nights, burning, frequent desire, leg pain and backache. On account of the alcohol use juniper oil from which gin is made. Ask for Bukets, the bladder laxative also containing buchu leaves, etc. After four days, if not pleased your druggist will return your 25c. You are bound to sleep better after this cleansing. F. J. Fessenden, Druggist, Charlevoix, and J. K. Gerris, Boyne City, say BUKETS is a best seller.

PETOSKEY'S WINTER QUEEN

Ice and snow sports hold the spotlight at Petoskey as plans are nearing completion for the Seventh Annual Sports Carnival which opens Thursday.

Patrick H. O'Brien, attorney general, will be the guest of honor at the luncheon Thursday which inaugurates the carnival. In the evening he will preside at the coronation of Winter Queen Eunice Schaller in the Petoskey winter sports park.

A new hockey rink has been constructed at the park and the sled and toboggan slides improved. Several hockey games are planned for the carnival with the first to take place Thursday afternoon between the Petoskey club team and the Muskegon Reds.

Skating stars from Detroit and other cities will attend the coronation and give exhibitions of their art a part of the program presented by the Petoskey Figure Skating club. The visiting fancy skaters will also appear Friday and Saturday evenings.

Saturday evening an old time party will be held at the rinks in the winter sports park with the coronation of the Winter King as the featured attraction. Queen Eunice will place the crown on the head of the king whose identity will not be announced until the ceremony.

The winter sports ball will be held at the high school gymnasium February 9th with Governor and Mrs. William A. Comstock as the guests of honor. The ball is the greatest social function of the carnival and is expected to attract many out of town visitors.

Events are planned every day of the 11-day carnival. Skiing exhibitions, snowshoe trips, scavenger and treasure hunts, hockey games, speed and fancy skating exhibitions, tobogganing and broom ball games are among the attractions scheduled.

On Saturday evening, February 10, there will be a mardi gras party on the rinks with the skaters in fancy costumes. Prizes will be awarded for original and comic outfits.

On each Sunday afternoon exhibition of ski jumping, fancy and speed skating and hockey will be presented by the Sports club.

The facilities of the Petoskey winter sports park are open to visitors without charge. Toboggans and skis may be obtained at the park.

On Saturday, February 10, there will be regional competition in all classes for speed skaters. The program includes a free for all two mile race.

Twenty-one 4-H Clubs in Operation

The interest and enthusiasm in 4-H club work is unquestioned. With 21 clubs organized and busily engaged in carrying out the requirements of their projects, there can be no doubt that this phase of extension work is very helpful throughout the county.

The number of clubs is not quite as large as it has been some years but in view of the fact that many schools have been vacated because of the CWA activities, it can readily be understood that club work is being carried on under more or less difficulty.

Already plans are being devised for the county wide achievement day which will be held this year in Boyne City on Friday, April 27. By agreement these achievement days are held in the three different cities in this county alternately every year.

It is interesting to note the different communities that are engaged in club work which are as follows:

Community Clubs

Tainter district, Mr. and Mrs. Ray March, leaders; 11 enrolled.

Ranney district, Alma Larson, leader; 9 enrolled.

Handicraft Clubs

Clark district, William Parsons, leader; 10 enrolled.

Bay Shore, Douglas Ross, leader; 7 enrolled.

Advance, Samuel Mulligan, leader; 7 enrolled.

Burgess district, Elgie Dow, leader; 9 enrolled.

Hot Lunch Clubs

Advance, Mary A. Behling, leader; 14 enrolled.

Clothing Clubs

Wildwood district, Cleo Kent, leader; 3 enrolled.

Clark district; Georgia Parsons, leader; 9 enrolled.

German settlement, Helen Behling, leader; 14 enrolled.

Bay Shore, Nita Shearer, leader; 12 enrolled.

East Jordan, Mrs. Rubye Stueck, leader; 9 enrolled.

Advance, Mary A. Behling, leader; 10 enrolled.

The club leaders, club officers and club friends will hold a leader's conference on February 14th with 4-H club representatives from M. S. C. present to discuss the program. I certainly want every club in the county represented at this time.

Charlevoix County 4-H Club Champions Announced

From a careful study of the 4-H club program conducted last summer the various champions in the different projects were selected. Many features are considered such as interest in club work, quality and production of units, premiums won at exhibits, the neatness and completeness of their report and story and many others. These champions are to be considered for state wide recognition.

The following list presents the boys and girls who have been selected as having completed the best program during the year.

Canning Club Champions

First year, Helen Fisher, East Jordan; 2nd year, Eloise Gaunt, East Jordan; 3rd year, Rhea Fisher, East Jordan; 4th year, Mary Ellen Johnson, Bay Shore; 5th year, Georgina Reece, Boyne Falls, Vinlet Russell, tied, Boyne Falls.

Dairy Club Champions

STRICTER EXAMINATION

Michigan department of state records on the handling of drivers' license applications show a sharp but favorable contrast between 1932 and the present year. In the first eleven months of 1932, the department reports, 1,167 applications were rejected and 5,196 licenses were revoked after being issued. In the same period this year 5,620 applicants were refused licenses while only 1,902 were revoked.

The reason for this change is that applicants were required to undergo a more thorough examination this year, the department states. Incompetent persons, in other words, are being discovered and kept off the roads before they have a chance to drive rather than after. And this is as it should be. It is locking the barn door, figuratively, before the horse is stolen—not after.—Grand Rapids Press

WOMAN'S STATUS INVOLVED

Contrasting views as to the proper status of women were taken in proposals brought up in Germany and in Montevideo (Uruguay) Pan-American conference. Abolishment of women suffrage is among plans discussed by Nazis for the constitutional reorganization of Germany in the next year. Views on this subject in a brochure by Dr. Helmuth Nicolai are taken as significant because of his having been newly installed in the reich ministry of the interior. He takes the ground that the franchise is the privilege of German "Aryan" men able to bear arms. The exclusion of women is taken also as "an independent and self-evident consequence of the German legal conception of the natural order of things."

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Pioneer Photographer

EVERY summer for the last few years a gray-haired New Yorker has been setting out on a romantic journey. He is William H. Jackson, past four score years in age, who has been back-tracking on the path of his youth, the historic Oregon trail.

Among the thousands who passed over that trail, Jackson is unique. For he was the pioneer photographer of that "highway of a westward-faring nation," the first man to traverse it with the crude photographic materials of 65 years ago, to make a pictorial record of the country through which it ran in its primitive state and to make hundreds of photographs of Indians, among them chiefs and warriors who became famous by their deeds on the warpath and in the council lodge.

Born in New York in 1843 Jackson became an itinerant artist, a ump-maker in the Union army during the Civil war, a village photographer afterwards, then a fortune-seeker in the trans-Mississippi West. In 1866-67 he was a "bullwhacker", for a freighters' outfit hauling supplies from Nebraska City on the Missouri to the valley of the Great Salt Lake in Utah.

Next he and his brother set up as photographers in the booming frontier town of Omaha, but when the Union Pacific began building west, Jackson left his brother to run the studio, and started out to record what was happening in what was then the real "Wild West." To get pictures he took the chance of losing his scalp, but he got the pictures!

So successful was he that Dr. C. V. Hayden, head of the United States geological survey, offered him a job as photographer for the expedition which started out in 1870 to survey the old Oregon Mormon trail and the old Overland Stage route. For the next ten years he accompanied other surveying expeditions and it was on these expeditions that he took the pictures of scenes in the West, Indians, frontier posts, etc., which have become such a priceless heritage to posterity.

In 1871 he made the first photographs of the marvels of the Yellowstone country and his pictures, as well as the discoveries of and the specimens collected by the Hayden expedition, of which he was a member, played an important part in the creation of the Yellowstone National park in 1872. In recent years Mr. Jackson has been research secretary of the Oregon Trail Memorial association, in which role he is completing the work started when he was not only a frontiersman himself but the pictorial historian of the frontier.

The First Forty-Niner

ONE spring day in the year 1848 a horseman came galloping through the streets of San Francisco, sprang from his weary horse and rushed through the plaza, hatless and travel-stained, waving aloft a little bottle filled with some shining particles and shouting "Gold! Gold! Gold from the American river!"

Thus it was that Sam Brannan, frontiersman and adventurer, won the title of "the first Forty-Niner." For he was the first to bring to San Francisco authentic news of the discovery of gold by James W. Marshall near Sutter's Fort.

But this was not the only historic "first" in the career of Sam Brannan. Back in the late thirties and early forties he had been a journeyman printer, a free lance writer, an editor and "a natural born promoter." Also he was a full-fledged elder in the Church of the Latter Day Saints until the Mormon leaders a little later had occasion, and very good reason, to expel him.

In July, 1846, he brought to California a colony of some 300 Mormons, the first American colonists to reach Yerba Buena, the little Spanish settlement on San Francisco bay. Immediately he began on the series of his historic "firsts"—he preached the first English sermon ever heard there, he solemnized the first American marriage on California soil, he set up the first printing mill and gave the settlement its first newspaper, the California Star.

After he was expelled from the Mormon church, he became the first California promoter by getting out a special edition of his Star and sending 2,000 copies of the paper overland to the Mississippi valley and the eastern states, extolling the virtues of the country to prospective settlers.

Then came the discovery of gold and Brannan's role as "the first Forty-Niner." His sensational announcement of the gold discovery depopulated San Francisco within a few days and resulted in Sutter's little kingdom of "New Helvetia" being overrun by a swarm of goldseekers.

In the wild era that followed, Brannan prospered. He was gambler and banker, merchant and hotel owner, importer and exporter, gold digger and real estate speculator, shipowner and smuggler. As San Francisco grew he boomed larger and larger on its horizon, and at last was ruling it like a Chinese mandarin. Then misfortune overtook him. His later career was one of "ups and downs" but he never remained entirely down, and when he died in 1889 at the age of seventy, he was fairly prosperous, in contrast to the poverty which had overtaken those other two early Forty-Niners, Johann August Sutter, the former "king of New Helvetia" and James W. Marshall.

Aviation Now Matter of the Commonplace

Aviation in the south Atlantic area has left the domain of stunt flying and entered that of business. The Graf Zeppelin now runs between Friedrichshafen and Rio on a regular schedule, and her comings and goings attract little more attention than those of ships from Europe or the States. French and German interests, represented by the Aeropostale and Lufthansa-Condor lines, compete for the heavy mail and passenger revenues between the European countries and those of South America. The Germans count on four days between Berlin and Rio, which they expect eventually to cut almost in two. This time, that a short while ago would have seemed fabulous, includes the brief spell the seabirds will spend resting on the limb, in the form of an anchored ship, held out for them in mid-Atlantic.

CAREY BURTON knew when he received that invitation to have dinner with his sister and her husband that something was in the wind.

"And when Sis promises my favorite fried chicken and mushrooms—well, little brother knows his leg is going to be pulled in some way."

Little brother was quite right. It was just following his second helping, a large, fat drumstick, that Betty said sweetly:

"You know, Carey, Sam and I are going off again to France and—"

"Oh, that's it, and I am to have that infernal bother of renting the apartment for you." The scramble last time was like an Irish meeting, and I spent three whole days dashing from the office to the apartment with an assortment of apartment seekers."

"You're the first edition of the apartment hunter's guide," laughed Sam. "I guess we'd better ask $150 a month and there won't be such a riot."

Carey found himself in for it, so he became resigned, put the advertisement in the daily papers and his own office address and telephone; made the inventory, saw Sam and Betty off and awaited the rush.

There were two inquiries before he reached the office, and along they came until Carey was quite fed up telling people about the apartment. It was the voice of John Wilson over the phone, however, that prompted Carey to sense the right tenant.

"If that apartment's the right thing," said Wilson, "I'll send my check today. Mrs. Wilson is coming in all the way from Easthampton, hoping we can secure it, and said she'd be there about twelve."

So it happened that Carey waited the arrival of Mrs. Wilson.

Of course, he had not thought she would be such a charming woman. But she certainly seemed charming when she stood poised in the doorway with an inquiring look in her big soft eyes.

This was the moment for which Carey blessed his sister for asking his assistance in renting the apartment.

"What a lovely apartment," she exclaimed, "and a good view of the Hudson. Oh, dear, I do hope Mr. Wilson told you how very much we want it?"

She turned imploring eyes on Carey and he felt bewildered by their brilliance.

Carey sighed and remembered telling her that Mr. Wilson had all but settled it for her.

"Since you and your husband seem destined to have drawn the prize from the multitude, why not take the keys for good?"

"But won't your wife want to—well—look us over, too?"

"My sister," corrected Carey, "is on the high seas."

"Oh," commented the lady. Having got the information, she seemed more animated. "Is there any way we could get in touch with you this evening—should any questions come up which we might want to ask you about?" Carey gave her his card and telephone number.

After a moment or two longer he had to watch her vanish into the subway.

The rest of the afternoon seemed both short and long. Always through Carey's brain kept running, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife," but that didn't prevent his heart losing a beat at the very remembrance of her loveliness each time the telephone rang.

He hoped against hope that some information would be in demand about the apartment but it was not until after five that Wilson rang him up.

"I say, old chap," said Wilson, "my wife is tremendously taken with the apartment and wants to celebrate. We wonder if you'd waive convention and join us at dinner and a show. My sister is along and it will just make a foursome."

Thus it was that Carey, armed with two of the daintiest, tiny nosegays he could secure, met Mr. Wilson, his wife and sister and started off.

Carey was about to tuck the sister, as he supposed, under his protective wing, when Wilson stopped him with a laugh.

"Mrs. Wilson and I have been married five years, but I still prefer to take charge of her—rather than let the other fellow do it."

"Oh, I say," laughed Carey with a flush that was more joyous than apologetic. "I supposed," he looked interminatingly at that wonder woman who was not his neighbor's wife, "in fact, I was led to believe—"

"It was your own mistake," said Miss Wilson demurely, "I only speak of my brother as Mr. Wilson, which is quite correct—when addressing a perfect stranger."

"I am glad you think me perfect," confided Carey, "because the feeling is mutual and we can soon forget the stranger part—can't we?"

The other two had gone ahead and the girl tucked her arm into Carey's. "Oh, perhaps it can be done in time," she agreed flippantly.

YEARS ADDED TO EXPECTANCY OF LIFE ON EARTH

According to records available to the United States public health service, preventive medicine has made encouraging progress in lengthening life in the United States.

In 1850 the average life span in the United States was about 35 years. The Biblican threescore years and ten were accorded to only a few individuals. By the beginning of the Twentieth century the average life span had jumped to 48½ years. Today Americans live on the average 58 years. In New Zealand the record for average longevity has been achieved, with an average life span of 68 years.

Much of this progress has been attained by the assaults of modern medicine on bacterial diseases. In 1900 the six leading causes of death in the order of their destructiveness were tuberculosis, pneumonia, diarrhea and enteritis, heart trouble, Bright's disease, apoplexy and cancer. By 1932 the six greatest allies of death had changed considerably in rank. Heart trouble had become the chief foe of life. Cancer had advanced to second place, closely followed by apoplexy. Bright's disease had moved up to fourth place, pneumonia had dropped from second to fifth rank, and tuberculosis had become the tail-ender.

While at the beginning of the Twentieth century bacterial diseases were the greatest obstacles in the way of living to a reasonable old age, the principal task of medicine today is to discover some way of preventing the organs from wearing out.

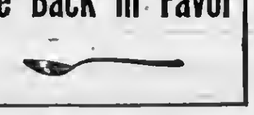
It's More Comfortable

The average sportsman thinks more of his old, patched fishing suit than he does of his finest broadcloth dress suit his tailor can make.—Florida Times-Union.

CAMERA CARICATURE

Caricature can now be done with the still or motion picture camera, according to Science Service. An official photographer to the Scott expedition to the South pole has devised an auxiliary lens that allows the making of distorted photographs: "the variable controllable distortograph" fitted on the front of an ordinary camera lens. The device allows the making of motion pictures from a still photograph.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor



The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is the best laxative for everybody. Senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It has the average person's bowels as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

TOO MANY COWS PUT PROFITS TO FLIGHT

Rising Tides of Milk Brings Flood of Red Ink Into Michigan Dairies

Ability of the cow to add to the farm income has finally resulted in so many farmers becoming dairymen that the original purpose of keeping cows has become a boomerang as the dairy population has become so great and the prices of dairy products so low that profits are at the vanishing point, according to the dairy department at Michigan State college.

Two things can be done to relieve this situation. The number of cows can be reduced by discarding the poorer producers in the herd and thus lowering the total production. This is being done in Michigan as is proved by herd improvement association records.

The second way to improve the present condition is to persuade people to drink more milk and to eat more cheese, butter, and other milk products. All high grade dairy products are excellent foods high in nutrients and containing elements and vitamins necessary for health. Nearly all European countries have a higher per capita consumption of butter and cheese than the United States does.

ENUMERATION OF OLD AGE PENSION COMPLETE

Final Returns Sent to Lansing Monday—Few Payments Made

Completion of enumeration work for the old age pension tax has been reported by County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow, whose office has had charge of this task.

The work was finished with returns from South Arm, Chandler, Melrose and Evangeline township, the last precincts to file. The complete list of citizens of Charlevoix county over the age of 21 years will be sent Monday to Miss Evelyn Mershon, Lansing, state administrator of the old age pension.

Few payments of the tax which is due on or before March 1, have been received, according to Miss Lillis Flanders, county treasurer.

BAND CONCERT WAS HIGHLY APPRECIATED

Blizzard Cut Down Attendance But Not Quality of Music

Sunday night's evening blizzard cut down the attendance, but not the quality of a concert program given by the Charlevoix city band at the high school gymnasium.

Those present were lavish in their praise of the excellent program offered. Especial mention was made of the selection, "Carnival di Venice," a cornet solo given by Robert Magor, director, with accompaniment by Alta Lynn Magor, also the descriptive fantasia, "In the Clock Store," by the entire band.

The entire program, which included many new numbers as well as old favorites, was one of the best ever given in Charlevoix. It sent the audience home with a much finer appreciation of our city band.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

Reduction of the automobile weight tax and amendment of the state sales tax were called for in resolutions adopted by the State Association of Supervisors at the final session of the meeting in Lansing last week.

Officers of the association for the coming year include Charles P. Ismon of Jackson, president; Hon. John D. Karel of Grand Rapids, first vice president; Melville B. McPherson of Lowell, member of the state tax commission, second vice president; Jacob E. Scheper of East Lansing, secretary; and Miss Lucy Little of Kalamazoo, treasurer.

Seven important resolutions were adopted. The first asked the legislature to provide property tax relief while the second asked for an amendment of the sales tax law to provide exemption of farm implements and stock feeds from the provisions of that law. The third resolution asked the legislature to return weight tax receipts to county treasurers directly from the department of state branch offices while the sixth called for reduction of license plate costs without in any manner hindering the retirement of Covert road law bonds. The other resolutions asked laws permitting local governmental agencies to raise funds to match federal money for relief purposes; an amendment to liberalize the present constitutional provision limiting property taxes for all purposes to 15 mills; and asked that all local assessing officers be furnished with sets of the 1929 Compiled Laws.

The decision of Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald to publish the Public Acts of the special session of 1933 at the same time the Public Acts of the coming 1934 special session are printed and in the same volume will effect a saving of $10,000.

This saving will be accomplished almost entirely in costs of binding. In order that officials may have access to the new laws passed at the 1933 special session, these acts are to be published in pamphlet form with a paper cover under the title of "immediate effect acts of 1933 (special session)." The state law prescribes definitely the manner in which official public acts shall be bound.

GIVE SEEDING BOOST BY USING FERTILIZER

Plant Food Supplied Alfalfa or Clover in Oats or Barley Helps

Seedings of alfalfa or clover made in oats or barley as nurse crops should be assisted with application of fertilizer, according to the soils department at Michigan State college.

Fertilizer often is used when wheat is the nurse crop for seedings but farmers have neglected to apply fertilizer when oats or barley were sown because the grains had a lower market price and the assistance to the following hay crops was forgotten.

A test made in Tuscola county showed that an application of 250 pounds of 4-16-4 fertilizer on an alfalfa seeding in oats increased the harvest of alfalfa 1,917 pounds per acre. The seeding was made in 1930 and the increase in hay was cut in 1931.

A trial with alfalfa in barley was made in the same county in 1932. The fertilizer application was the same as was made on the oats the previous year. The alfalfa in barley improved in yield 1,320 pounds on that portion of the field which was fertilized.

NEW REAPPORTIONMENT PLANS ARE PERFECTED

Would Give Wayne County Slight Increase in the House

Proposal for a constitutional amendment which would reapportion the legislative house of representatives giving Wayne county a slight increase in membership will be submitted at the coming special session of the legislature, Rep. Vernon J. Brown of Mason, republican, announced recently.

The proposed amendment will not touch the senatorial districts and will limit any one county, particularly Wayne, to one-fourth of the 100 members. It also will provide that no two adjoining counties shall have more than one-third of the membership.

Aside from these restrictions representation would be based upon population.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Subject for Sunday, February 4, is "Love."

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Truth" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, January 28.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Matt. 13: 16,17): "But blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear. For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p.117): "Our Master taught spirituality by similitudes and parables. As a divine student he unfolded God to man, illustrating and demonstrating Life and Truth in himself and by his power over the sick and sinning."

PETOSKEY ACTORS COME HERE SUNDAY

Present 2-Act Play, "The Color Line," at Methodist Church

"The Color Line," an interesting two-act play recently presented in Petoskey by a group of home talent players, will be repeated at the First Methodist church here next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The play was enthusiastically received, both personally and by the press at Petoskey. It is well written and acted, working out a strong fundamental principle and is a propaganda play of the better sort.

The usual young people's service will be omitted because of the stage preparation, and by special request, the fine program of music arranged for the morning service will be repeated by the full choir of the church and the special quartette. There will be no charge for admission but the usual Sunday evening offering.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Charlevoix and Ironton

We are going to attempt something different. It is our intention to have published in our column an illustration of religious value.

A venerable minister once preached a sermon on the last judgment. On the next day some thoughtless men agreed that one of their number should go to him, and, if possible, draw him into a discussion. He went accordingly, and began the conversation, saying, "I believe there is a small dispute between you and me, and I thought that I would call this morning and try and settle it." "Ah!" said the good man, "what is it?" "Why," he replied, "you say that the woe of the finally impenitent will be eternal, and I do not think it will." "Oh, if that is all," he answered, "there is no dispute between you and me. If you turn to Matthew XXV 46, you will find that the dispute is between you and the Lord Jesus Christ, and I would advise you to go immediately and settle it with Him."—Sir. Wm. Robertson Nicoll.

PLAN LINCOLN CLUB FOR TEN COUNTIES

Grand Traverse G. O. P. Lays Plans to Revive Banquet

Preliminary plans for the organization of a Northwestern Michigan Lincoln club, made up of republicans from this and nearby counties, and revival of that old republican round-up, the Lincoln club banquet, came out of an enthusiastic meeting of Grand Traverse republicans Friday night.

It was a new experience for the county republican leaders to meet and be on the outside looking in but this in no way dampened the spirit of the meeting as prospects for the fall election were discussed. It was evident thaat the defeat of 1932 will result in a wider spread, yet closer knit G. O. P. organization than has functioned here since the first decade of the present century.

Counties to be included in the tentative organization are Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim, Kalkaska, Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Benzie, Manistee, Wexford and Missaukee. The executive committee will immediately contact republicans in these counties and discuss organization plans with them.

It is expected that Mrs. Hurd will bring the message the following Sunday.

The play, "The Color Line," presented by Petoskey cast at 7:30. The choir has been requested to repeat the music of the morning. See notice elsewhere. In addition a quartette from Petoskey will render the cappela, "Criterion," and other numbers.

Important meeting of the board next Monday evening. The club meets this Thursday with Mrs. Meggison, for Mrs. McGhan, and next week with Mrs. Milton Block. The Missionary society is next Wednesday with Mrs. Hooker, and the Aid society with Mrs. Meggison if weather and roads permit, otherwise pot-luck in the church.

On Wednesday evening of next week Dr. Templin from northwest India speaks in the church—as one of five churches on the district he can visit.

The pastor appreciates the fine attendance in the services, especially the numbers out to hear the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, and the guests of the Club. The guest speaker was much pleased with the interest shown.

There is much favorable comment concerning the fine music furnished by the choir this winter, not only in quality, but also the quantity, the volume, from the larger numbers. Great credit is due to the faithfulness and the ability of the director. A full supply of new music has just been ordered.

"Will you marry me, Edna?"

"No, Jim. My ideal man is very different from you. He must be as strong as Hercules, must bear the burden of the day without complaining, must never be cross with me, must never listen to anything that may be said about me . . ."

"I quite understand, Edna. What you want is a deaf-and-dumb railway porter."—Der Lustige Sachse.

A struggling young poet called on the editor of a provincial newspaper. He was met by the office boy.

"I want to see the editor," said the poet.

"Sorry, the editor is in Africa shooting lions," said the boy.

The poet gasped.

"Impossible!" he said. "I saw him through the window as I came along."

"Yes, but he saw you first," the other blandly replied.—London Answers.

Ford Has Option on McGuffey Home

Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Blayney, the latter a second cousin of William Holmes McGuffey, author of the McGuffey Readers of public school fame, disclosed a recent visit of Henry Ford to the old Holmes homestead, the birthplace of McGuffey, in West Finley township, Pennsylvania, during which Ford placed an option on the place. The Blayneys own and live on the farm. This photograph shows the house in which the author was born and which is now crumbling in ruins. Most of its timbers remain intact, and observers say it could be easily reconstructed in its original form.

Train Child in Honesty by Precept and Example

Little children are born neither honest nor scrupulous about anybody's rights but their own. They have to be taught.

I wish there were another word for "scrupulous." But it has a definite shade of meaning that is not conveyed by "honest." It associates itself with actions and principles rather than things.

It is not difficult to teach a child honesty. By precept and example in the home and the general feel of honesty in the air, he can easily be taught never to touch or keep the smallest article belonging to another.

He can also be taught never to lie, although this is a more complicated matter. It is not so difficult, however, to understand the fairy tale fibs of children under five who are in the midst of imaginative development and often mistake their own conjurings for truth. However, this stage passes, and if care is taken not to frighten a child out of telling the truth, it is fairly easy to establish.

But daily in a child's life come up questions of "honor"—those subtle things not actually classed under honesty or truth. Unfortunately, his mother is not with him usually to guide him here, for it is after he starts to school and begins his real social contacts that temptation waits around the corner.

A boy peeps at another's paper and copies his work. Tommy sees the boy. He likes the boy and what he does is all right, surely, thinks Tom. He begins to exercise his own eyes and from that time on never loses a chance to crib when he can.

Another form of honor that I consider important is for children to cultivate the habit of never disparaging another child in his talk. A frank opinion is all right. But the deeper thrill of gossip, the desire to do another person damage is a bad trait.

Or to bootlick, to fawn over some one who can be of use, with utter sincerity. Opportunists are seldom scrupulous in the finer sense.

There we have it. Stealing other people's work, other people's good names, favors that don't belong to us. Three out of a thousand ways to be unscrupulous.—Olive Roberts Barton, in the New York World-Telegram.

YOUR INCOME TAX

How to Avoid Common Errors

The period for the filing of income tax returns, covering the calendar year 1933 begins January 1 and ends at midnight of March 15. Within this period are filed annually millions of individual income tax returns, a large proportion of which report income subject to the tax. The latter contain a considerable percentage of errors, which if uncorrected by the audit would result to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. Many are errors of computation easily discovered on the face of the return, which us-

To avoid these and other errors, the Bureau of Internal Revenue urges careful reading of the instructions on the forms for filing the returns. Additional information, if needed, may be obtained at the office of a collector of internal revenue, deputy collector, or an internal revenue agent in charge. Also, as a further aid in the preparation of a correct income tax return for the year 1933, the bureau has prepared a series of short newspaper articles, of which this is the first; advising the salaried man, wage earner, professional and business man in fact, every class of individual taxpayer—of his requirements and privileges and interpreted under the latest regulations, rulings, and decisions relating to the income tax law.

IRONTON YOUNG MAN MAKES GOOD

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE HIS CHOSEN PROFESSION

Doan Reber Ogden Given High Praise for Accomplishments and Work in Carolinas

The following article, a clipping from The Asheville Citizen-Times, tells of the accomplishments of Doan Reber Ogden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Ogden of Ironton:

An interesting addition to the artistic and cultural life of Western North Carolina is Doan Reber Ogden, consulting landscape architect to the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., now resident landscape architect at the Ashville Farm school, near Swannanoa. As a boy working with flowers and shrubs on a big estate in Charlevoix Mich., Mr. Ogden first learned that there was a profession in which a man could spend his life in this fascinating occupation—and then and there determined to study landscape architecture.

Graduating from Michigan State college with special training in this highly technical field, Mr. Ogden worked for two years in Detroit as landscape designer for the Pontiac Nursery company, laying out large estates and schools in that region of big business and beautiful developments. In September, 1931, he was called to head the department of landscape architecture at Asheville Farm school.

Campus Is Beautiful

This institution had recently finished a building program, and was just turning to the development of a beautiful campus, at that time but a dream of the future. In these two years five acres of North Carolina red soil have been carpeted with greensward, a dozen school buildings have been given an appropriate setting, and the trees have been transplanted, to make as beautiful a mountain campus as is to be found in the country.

Best of all, a master plan has been created so that every new department expected within the next 25 years is provided for. This master plan hangs in the office of Dr. H. S. Randolph, superintendent of the Farm school, and is of great value to board members as well as of interest to casual visitors.

Offers Inviting Field

Having completed the technical part of this problem, students trained under him are now carrying out current improvements. This leaves Mr. Ogden free to develop his prisulting landscape architect to many places within a radius of a hundred miles of Asheville.

For instance, he has become associated with Tusculum college, in Greeneville, Tenn., and has developed a complete plan of operations to be carried out within the next few years. Part of his service consists in training self-sustaining students to carry on the actual grading and planting, in the intervals between his visits of inspection. The fact that much of the planting material necessary is native growth, in which mountainous Carolina is so rich, makes such development come within the financial means of institutions that could not otherwise do such work at this time.

Is Interested In Flora

Camp Montlamin, near Tuxedo, is another one of Mr. Ogden's clients. Frank Bell, its director, is particularly interested in the flora of the mountains; and the interesting project is being worked out of developing a summer camp along naturalistic lines.

The Black Mountain Baptist church put on a self-sustaining program of beautification in the midst of the depression. All labor, materials, and hauling were donated by members; and Mr. Ogden gave his services freely to the project. Several other institutions are already considering similar improvements of their plants along these economical lines, as suggested by President H. T. Hunter, of Western Carolina Teachers' college, at Cullowhee.

Last summer Mr. Ogden developed a rather personal landscape problem in "Honeymoon Cottage," a little lodge in the forest land adjoining the Farm School campus. He completed this project last June, when Miss Rosemary Rennie Mason, assistant librarian at the Otten hospital, became Mrs. Doan Reber Ogden.

Mrs. Ogden, in addition to her work at the hospital library, is assisting with a dramatic club at the school. She is also interested in the Farm School library, which is a modern building built like a mountain cabin, and set in the heart of a lovely naturalistic rock garden, developed by Mr. Ogden to reclaim a campus eye-sore, the old dumping ground of the school.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ogden are closely identified with the cultural development of Western North Carolina, of which they consider themselves permanent settlers.

Eyebrows Will Wiggle Despite His Efforts, So Haley Is Starred

Because of a habit of raising his eyebrows, Jack Haley, who has one of the leading roles in Paramount's "Sitting Pretty," which will open its engagement on Saturday and Sunday at the Palace theatre, is one of the leading stage and screen comedians.

This arching of brows brought him into motion pictures and, according to film executives, promises to make him one of the screen's leading laugh-grabbers.

In this new screen comedy, "Sitting Pretty," directed by Harry Joe Brown, Haley is featured as Pete Pendleton, goofy half of the song-writing team Parker and Pendleton. Jack Oakie is his partner. Just a couple of likeable muggs from Broadway's Tin-Pan Alley who can write great tunes, they have a tough time proving it, especially when they get to Hollywood.

Girls are their downfall. Of course, there is one beautiful maiden (Ginger Rogers) with whom they both fall in love. Interspersed with laughs and fun, though, there is a happy ending with the boys once more "sitting pretty."

BARNARD

There was no church or Sunday school Sunday on account of bad weather.

Mrs. Will Ager entertained about twenty-five people in honor of the birthday of her mother, Mrs. Charles Vosburg. The evening was spent in playing progressive pedro. Mrs. Geo. Willis and Charles Vosburg won high honors. Mrs. L. O'Brien and Clarence Murray won consolation prizes.

The Happy Hour club was organized on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mary Smith. Officers were elected. The next meeting will be with Elizabeth Dhaseleer on February 8th.

HOME, FARM LOANS SET HIGH RECORD

SHOW BIG INCREASE DURING MONTH OF JANUARY

Report Shows Charlevoix County Leads Others of District in Home Loans Completed

The month of January set a new record for completion of federal home and farm loans in Charlevoix county, according to Frank F. Bird, register of deeds.

A report compiled Tuesday revealed farm loans up to that time aggregated $99,200.00, an increase of $37,700.00 for the month. During the same period, home loans jumped from $45,543.83 to $93,693.38, an increase of $48,149.55 for the month of January. Up to the present time a total of $192,893.38 in federal loans have been granted in Charlevoix county.

January's recording in the register of deeds' office set an all-time record and loans are still coming in at a rapid pace. On Monday of this week the first appraisals were made on Beaver Island by Norman Rist, home loan appraiser. A report from St. Ignace, northern Michigan headquarters for the home loan, reveals nearly three thousand applications for loans.

Charlevoix County Leads

A report submitted Monday by Leon W. Miller of Petoskey, attorney for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, listing the loans for each county of upper northern Michigan and the upper peninsula as of January 3, 1934, shows Charlevoix county to be far in the lead in the amount of loans granted up to that date. Mr. Miller's report, listing the loans as well as amount of taxes paid in each county, follows:

County	Taxes	Amount
Alcona	$ 1,484.22	$ 5,087.47
Alger	315.66	1,787.05
Alpena	418.74	5,613.49
Antrim	9.02	1,228.22
Charlevoix	3,192.37	$9,467.58
Cheboygan	1,408.27	11,604.21
Chippewa	631.34	15,824.83
Delta	1,048.03	12,999.86
Dickinson	4,893.68	35,130.47
Emmet	1,293.66	11,950 16
Gogebic	1,024.43	18,510.21
Houghton	1,681.40	30,170.98
Luce	71.95	726.45
Marquette	525.81	21,388.58
Menominee	192.47	2,635.47
Missaukee	213.86	1,066.25
Ontonagon	590.49	6,186.80
Otsego	1,085.40	9,522.24
Presque Isle	1,897.63	30,159.57
Schoolcraft	5,093.54	29,398.31
Total	$29,269.90	$341,038.12

The reasons why Charlevoix county leads in the number of loans completed are several. A major item is the promptness with which the abstract work of applicants is handled. Another contributing factor is the activity of local banking officials in urging and aiding in the procurement of loans.

TRI-CITY SERVICE ON GOOD FRIDAY PLANNED AGAIN

The tri-city Good Friday services which have been held in Charlevoix county for the last two years will again be observed in the Charlevoix Baptist, Boyne City Methodist Episcopal and East Jordan Presbyterian churches the afternoon of March 30.

This idea originated in Charlevoix county and, as far as is known, is not observed elsewhere in the state.

Eight denominations and 11 pastors co-operate in the service, which is held simultaneously in the three cities. Appreciative audiences have filled the churches to capacity each year.

Five pastors will speak at each meeting, two of them speaking in both Charlevoix and East Jordan.

Provision is made for those who cannot attend the entire service, which lasts one and one-half hours, to enter or leave during the music sung between the 15-minute addresses.

COUNCIL EXTENDS TAX PENALTY LIMIT AGAIN

February 28th Final Deadline for Taxpayers to Avoid Costs

Meeting in special session last Wednesday night, the city council again extended the time for payment of taxes without penalty. The former limit, January 31st, was extended to February 28th, the final deadline.

City Engineer Robert E. Sloan was instructed to furnish plans, specifications and estimates of construction for an airport hangar at the city airport. Accompanied by Alderman F. J. Fessenden, Mr. Sloan inspected the airport at St. Ignace last Monday and the same night reported to the council. Present plans call for a hangar 60x100 feet with 14-foot ceiling. Plans will be ready for the next council meeting. The project will be submitted to the CWA for approval.

The council also voted to hire O. W. Lyngklip of Detroit, to make an audit of the city books for the fiscal year, March 1933 to March 1934.

The next regular council meeting will be held Tuesday evening, February 12.

LEAVES FIELD OPEN TO BERGEON AND SEE

Angus Fochtman, Rep., and Frank Novotny, Dem., Withdraw From First Ward Contests

Charlevoix voters will have the choice of two mayoralty candidates on the Republican ticket at the spring primary election in March instead of three as indicated by the filing of nomination petitions last Tuesday.

The field was reduced to two last Friday by the withdrawal of S. M. Rose, former mayor, leaving the Republican field to L. S. See, the incumbent, and Arthur Bergeon, who held the office the record term of 11 consecutive years prior to his defeat last spring. This line-up is the same as a year ago and will undoubtedly result in a spirited campaign.

Two withdrawals were made by candidates seeking nomination for ward offices, including one republican and one democrat and both in the first ward. They were Angus Fochtman, who filed for supervisor, and Frank Novotny, democratic candidate for alderman. Their action leaves the field for these two offices open to the republican incumbents, Harry A. Craig and Arthur Ranger, respectively.

Other than the changes mentioned above the field remains the same as announced a week ago. Aside from the mayoralty race, contests are confined to the offices of alderman in the second and third wards and supervisor in the third.

Under the present election laws, only the names of those candidates with opposition on a party ticket will appear on the primary ballot. Thus the voters will not be required to vote a democratic ballot until the general election in April, nor will the names of republican candidates unopposed appear on the republican primary ballot in March.

MANY ANGLERS STILL WITHOUT NEW LICENSE

Department Allowing Leniency But Will Enforce Law.

Large numbers of ice fishermen, according to conservation officers, are still without their 1934 fishing licenses, on the assumption that one is not necessary until the reopening of the general fishing season next spring.

While the department of conservation has announced that it is permitting some leniency in such instances, due to probably ignorance of the law, it requires that every person over 18 years of age must be provided with a 50c general rod license when fishing in any manner for any species of fish. The licenses are good for the calendar year.

The 1934 general rod licenses are now in the hands of about 1,800 license dealers in practically every city and village in Michigan. The licenses are accompanied by 1934-35 digests of Michigan fishing regulations.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLAN IS DELAYED

CITY MUST GET LEGAL AUTHORITY FOR BONDS

Will Take Question to Supreme Court to Satisfy Demands of Public Works Administration

With their plans for a sewage disposal plant blocked at least temporarily by the questionable validity of Act 94, Public Acts of Michigan for 1933, the Charlevoix city council Monday night voted to go into court with a test case to settle the question.

With this purpose in view, the council authorized City Attorney Rollie L. Lewis to take necessary legal steps to carry the case to the Michigan Supreme Court. A friendly suit asking that the city of Charlevoix be enjoined from entering contract with the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for purchase of revenue bonds totaling $87,200.00, voted at a special election last December to finance construction of the sewage disposal system, will be heard in circuit court here Friday by Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City. Judge Gilbert has promised a quick decision and the case will then be carried to the higher court for earliest possible action.

While the Public Works Administration has approved Charlevoix's application for $87,200.00, approval is subject to the condition this city either obtain a favorable adjudication of the validity of Act 94, Immediate Effect Acts of Michigan of 1933, by the Michigan Supreme Court after a consideration of the constitutional objections raised thereto, or secure valid legislative authority for the issuance of the bonds.

Act 94, passed by the state legislature as an emergency measure, permits municipalities to issue revenue bonds to finance utilities. It was designed expressly for the purpose of allowing municipalities to take advantage of federal assistance thru the Public Works Administration.

Inasmuch as Charlevoix voters have already approved the bond issue, it is believed this city's case will receive favorable consideration by the supreme court. The case is one of statewide interest, inasmuch as at least twenty municipalities allowed PWA grants are held up for the same reason as Charlevoix.

SCHOOL UNIT MERGER WILL BE VOTED UPON

Legislative Council Sponsoring Consolidation of Districts

Legislation proposing consolidation of school districts to effect economies in Michigan's primary educational system will be submitted to the next special session, members of the legislative council revealed Friday.

The plan calls for creation of county school systems and provides for the election of members of county boards of education with the boards naming a superintendent or commissioner. Township and city school boards would work in cooperation with the county groups.

The county boards would be authorized to order consolidation of districts. Paul F. Voelker, superintendent of public instruction, believes that the revision would result in vast savings annually.

KIPMEN REMAIN IN CONFERENCE LEAD

TROUNCED BOYNE BY 19 TO 14 COUNT FRIDAY

Victory Atoned for Only Conference Defeat—Play at East Jordan Friday Night

Charlevoix high school cagers maintained their position of leadership in the Tip of Michigan class C basketball conference by trouncing Boyne City in a close contest here Friday night. The Kipmen's victory, by a 19 to 14 count, atoned an earlier defeat by Boyne, their only loss this season in conference competition.

With their attack and defense clicking nicely, Charlevoix piled up a 11 and 2 margin in the first quarter—a gap Boyne was unable to overcome despite two periods in which they out-played the Kipmen. The advantage was a handy one, for in the second quarter the visitors did all the scoring, adding 5 points. The half ended with Charlevoix leading 11 to 7.

The last two periods were close fought. Charlevoix scored 8 points, just one more than the visitors, to protect their margin at the half.

Charlevoix won because their team play was better than Boyne's and their defense as good. They managed to hold in check Fitzpatrick, lanky center, and Kajawski, forward, who caused them plenty of trouble in the earlier game, but in turn Boyne completely stopped Pearl, Charlevoix high point man in several previous contests. Ance was a match for Fitzpatrick at center and Potter's work stood out.

The score by quarters:

Charlevoix	11	0	4	4—19
Boyne City	2	5	2	5—14

The line-up:

Charlevoix—	FG	FT	F
Potter, forward	3	1	3
Pearl, forward	0	0	1
Ance, center	2	1	1
Foster, guard	2	1	1
Carey, guard	1	0	1
	8	3	7
Boyne City—	FG	FT	F
Green, forward	1	0	1
Kajawski, forward	2	0	1
Fitzpatrick, center	1	2	1
Barden, guard	1	0	0
	6	2	4

Referee, Tabraham of Cadillac.

Boyne reserves came from behind in the second half to defeat Charlevoix reserves in the preliminary 11 to 10.

Charlevoix plays away from home this week, taking on a tough assignment at East Jordan. Although twice beaten by Harbor, who shares the conference lead with Charlevoix, Jordan has a strong team—one the Kipmen must beat if they come out on top of the conference heap. After this next tilt on a foreign court, the teams meet Harbor and East Jordan at home in their last two pre-tournament games.

PETOSKEY MAN HELD FOR COTTAGE THEFT

Evidence Obtained on Robbery Over Year Old—Waived Examination

Tom Hulbert, 45, married, of Petoskey, waived examination and was bound over to the March term of circuit court Monday on a charge of breaking and entering.

Hulbert's arrest by Sheriff Floyd Ikens last Friday followed discovery at his home of contraband stolen October 3, 1932, from the C. M. Lotspeid cottage at Walloon Lake. State police and Herman Kayes, Petoskey detective, obtained the evidence against Hulbert after working on the case over a year.

POLAR BEARS HAND JORDAN TRIMMING

RUN UP 44 TO 22 SCORE ON VISITING TEAM

Meet Fast Manistee Iron Works Aggregation Thursday Night In Second Home Game of Week

The East Jordan Canners, winners over the Polar Bears in a previous contest at East Jordan, were thoroughly trounced here Tuesday night by a 44 to 22 count.

Rated one of the fastest independent outfits in this region, the Canners put up a stiff battle in the first two periods but then went to pieces to take a bad drubbing.

Sommerville dribbled in for the first goal and the remainder of the initial period was close, ending with the Polar Bears leading 8 and 6. The locals added 5 more points to Jordan's single free throw in the second stanza for an 13 to 7 advantage at the half.

With Brown in the local line-up starting the second half the massacre began. The Polar Bears scored no for a total of 32 points while holding the Canners to 15, allowed more through loose guarding than any other reason. It was a complete route.

Supernaw, Joe Smith and Ikens carried the heavy part of Charlevoix's scoring with 12, 11 and 10 points, respectively. Vic Smith contributed 5, Davenport 1 and Kipke 1. For the Canners, Sommerville was high with 6.

The Polar Cubs were nosed out by a small margin in the preliminary contest.

Play Manistee Thursday

The Polar Bears take on another tough opponent Thursday night in their second home game of the week when they meet the fast Manistee Iron Works aggregation. This contest, postponed from an earlier date, promises to be one of the best exhibitions staged here this year. Manistee has always had a fast team and the rivalry between the two teams never fail to produce a real contest.

MASONS SETTING PACE IN CRIBBAGE CONTEST

Defeated Odd Fellows Again Monday Night to Lead by 750 Points

Continuing their domination of the winter cribbage series, the Masons defeated the Odd Fellows again Monday night in the fifth contest of the series of eight.

Scoring 17,944 points to 17,644 for their opponents, the Masons emerged with a margin of 296. An error in last week's compilation of scores gave them 122, and this, added to Monday night's margin and their previous advantage of 312 puts them out in front by a total of 750 points.

Lance Neff with 968 points, a perfect score, led the Masons, while Edward Goddstick paced the Odd Fellows for the third time in the series with 926. Ten tables of players participated.

The next and sixth contest of the series will be held Monday evening, February 12, at the Masonic temple.

COUNTY GROWERS POTATO CHAMPS

TAKE HONORS AT FARMERS' WEEK CONTESTS

First in County Exhibit, 4-H Club and Smith-Hughes Displays — Emmet County Second

(By B. C. Mellencamp.)

At the recent state seed show held in connection with farmers' week, Charlevoix county again won statewide recognition. This year many of the leading honors were awarded Charlevoix county potato growers.

One of the most coveted awards was that of placing first in the county exhibit consisting of eight individual pecks shown by as many Charlevoix county farmers. Within the county exhibit, Harry Behling, Boyne City, placed 3rd with his individual peck of Russet Rurals, Albert Omland, East Jordan, won 6th place, G. C. Ferris, East Jordan, 7th, Clinton Blanchard, Charlevoix, 9th, and Elmer Hott, East Jordan, 13th. In addition to these five, Theodore LaCroix, East Jordan, Lee Sneathen, Charlevoix, and August Knop, Boyne City, showed individual pecks in the county exhibit.

The East Jordan 4-H Crops club duplicated the county exhibit by placing first. In this exhibit were five individual pecks shown by Gwendon Hott, East Jordan, who won first place followed by Howard McDonald, East Jordan winning 3rd, Ralph Shepard, East Jordan, winning 4th and Francis Lilak, East Jordan, winning 5th place with Wilbur McDonald furnishing the fifth peck to make the club exhibit.

Not to be outdone, the Smith-Hughes exhibit from the Boyne Falls consolidated school, placed first in Smith-Hughes. In this collection of five peck samples, Albert Lange won first, Lloyd Martin 2nd, George Gallop 3rd, Fred Korthase 4th, with Joe Organic completing the group of five exhibits with his peck.

Harry Behling, Boyne City, placed 3rd with a bushel of certified Russet Rural potatoes and Lawrence Straw, Charlevoix, placed 3rd in any other variety with Irish Cobblers. Lawrence Straw, Charlevoix, won first on a peck of Irish Cobblers, Harry Behling won 4th on a peck of White Rurals, and Henry Korthase, Boyne City, won 2nd on a peck of Russet class.

It is highly gratifying to note the consistent high awards being won by Charlevoix county farmers during the last five or six years. All of the above exhibits were shown at the East Jordan potato show and speak highly of the wonderful county show held last November. It would seem that another county show should be held in 1934 to carry on the exceptionally good potato program in this county.

Fred Willis, manager of the Orchard Bay farm north of Charlevoix, was chosen champion flock master in the Wolverine lamb production contest.

NO WELFARE MONEY FOR AUTO PLATES, TRAVERSE

Purchase of a 1934 automobile license by anyone on the welfare list automatically throws them off this list, emergency welfare relief officials at Traverse City stated Saturday morning. The state and nation, they said, cannot afford to buy automobile licenses when many families are being held down to a minimum on the necessities of life.

There can be exceptions, they stated, where special permission will be given for the purchase of license plates where car owners can show absolute necessity for using their cars.

ISLAND WOMAN ILL, IS BROUGHT HERE SUNDAY BY AIRPLANE

H. C. Harder, Charlevoix-Beaver Island airmail pilot, pressed his plane into ambulance service Sunday to transfer to the mainland Mrs. Peter McCauley, who was taken Monday afternoon by train to Ann Arbor for an operation.

Another plane owned and operated by "Bud" Hammond of St. Ignace, former Charlevoix-Beaver Island mail pilot, came over Sunday afternoon with a large consignment of fish which had been accumulating at the island. Bad weather of the past week prevented Harder from making sufficient trips to take care of the fish, thus the extra plane was called into service.

Something to keep the young people employed in a good cause nowadays is a great problem and a good band is one of the many things one can have to keep the youth employed.

It is as valuable to the bladder as castor oil to the bowels. Drives out impurities and excess acids which cause the irritation resulting in getting up nights, burning, frequent desire, leg pains and backache. Ask for Bukets, the bladder laxative also containing buchu leaves, etc. After four days, if not pleased your druggist will return your 25c. You are bound to sleep better after this cleansing. F. J. Fessenden, Druggist, Charlevoix, and J. K. Gerris, Boyne City, say BUKETS is a best seller."

SOUTH BARNARD

"Where there's a will there's a way"—this thought courses its way through the minds of the faithful christians who regularly attend services in the Reformed church at South Barnard. A happy, merry group came via sleighs—the fact the roads were somewhat slippery and the air a little snappy was no obstacle. Others wended their way afoot through the deep snow—a few miles of such walking they considered good exercise. Such a spirit encourages a minister.

The pastor has started a series of pre-Easter sermons. Everyone is welcome to attend the services in the Reformed church at South Barnard, Sunday afternoons at 1:30 o'clock.

All seemed to enjoy the night of festivity last Friday evening. "The Groundhog's Shadow" a chronicle of current and future events humorously written, was prepared by Mrs. Joan L. Jersey Breeders and County Agents to Meet in Boyne City

Interest of all Jersey breeders in northern Michigan will be centered at Boyne City on Tuesday, February 13, when a district meeting will be held. Speakers at the district meeting will be H. E. Denison, Jersey field man, George Cooper, noted Jersey breeder, and others. At the same time, county agents of northern Michigan will hold their February district meeting with C. V. Ballard, state county agent leader in charge.

A smelt dinner at noon is being prepared with possibly entertainment to follow. This gives evidence of being a most instructive meeting. Both meetings begin at 10:00 promptly. All Jersey breeders in Charlevoix county are most cordially urged to attend.

Ruling Permits All-Hog Producers to Sign Corn-Hog Reduction Contract

Under date of February 2 we have been advised by Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the corn-hog section, that some very important rulings have been made regarding the corn-hog program and the processing tax.

Regardless of the size of their past hog production average, all hog producers now may qualify for hog reduction payments by reducing their hog litter average and production of hogs for market not less than 25%. In cases where the litter average is less than 4, this will mean that the contracting producer will reduce by one litter even though this will constitute more than a 25% reduction from the litter base. In cases where the contracting producer's corn acreage average is less than the minimum requirement of 10 acres, he will reduce hog production only and will receive hog reduction payments but must agree not to increase his corn acreage over his average and he is not eligible to receive corn reduction payments. This change was made in consideration of an unexpected interest in the program among farmers producing an average of less than three litters of pigs per year and to give these farmers an opportunity to share in the proceeds of the processing tax which is to be collected on the slaughtering of all hogs for market regardless of by whom sold.

Processing Tax

A portion of the same letter also makes the announcement that Dr. Black has issued a new regulation exempting farmers from payment of the processing tax on hogs to the extent to which they sell or exchange (per marketing year) 300 pounds of hog products derived from hogs of their own raising which they have butchered providing that the total volume of hog products so sold or exchanged does not exceed 1,000 pounds per marketing year. When the volume of hog products so sold or exchanged exceeds 1,000 pounds the producer loses his exemption. For instance, if a farmer sold 990 pounds of pork he does not have to pay a processing tax on 300 pounds which is his exemption, but would have to pay on the 960 pounds. If he sold more than 1,000 pounds per year he has no exemption.

These new regulations will do much toward satisfying hog producers in that the smaller hog producer can enter the program the same as the larger and therefore it would appear that the program is more fair and just to all concerned.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

If the coming special session of the legislature does not reduce substantially license plate costs, the two-payment plan will be put into effect March 1, Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald has announced.

Under the two-payment plan, motorists pay one-half of the annual weight tax and receive a windshield sticker permit for use in conjunction with the 1933 plates. The permits are legal until August 1. Upon payment of the second installment of the weight tax on August 1, 1934 license plates will be issued for the remainder of the year.

Automobiles owned by those convicted of drunk driving are practically barred from Michigan highways for three years, records of the department of state show. There never has been a time in Michigan's history when the penalty for this offense has been so great.

Since the financial responsibility law became effective October 17, 1933, a total of 471 persons have either pleaded guilty or been found guilty of drunk driving. In each instance the driver and the vehicle he was using and others he may own come under the provisions of the new law. Of this number, only 32 have been able to provide proof of ability to meet future accident claims.

Under the operators' license law, the drunk drivers lose the right to drive for one year, unless the license is ordered restored by order of circuit court. But unless the drunk driver is able to show financial responsibility, the license plates and the certificate of title of the automobile used are held by the department of state for three years. The records show that drunk drivers are finding it almost impossible to furnish this proof.

The colors of the 1935 license plates were announced last week by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald. They will have yellow block numerals on a dark blue background.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Subject for Sunday, February 11, is "Spirit."

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 2 to 5 p. m.

"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 4.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Dan. 6:22): "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p. 243): "The divine Love, which made harmless the poisonous viper, which delivered men from the boiling oil, from the fiery furnace, from the jaws of the lion, can heal the sick in every age, and triumph over sin and death. It crowned the demonstrations of Jesus with unsurpassed power and love."

POINTS OF VIEW CALL FOR CODE OF GOLDEN RULE

"It occurs to me," said George B. Caulfous, at the weekly meeting of the Rownnis club, "that we need some sort of a national code or agreement fixing more definite regulations for individual points of view. There is an old expression that circumstances alter cases. It might have been broadened to include the observation that circumstances alter points of view, and that what a man thinks and feels one moment may be wholly foreign to his mental reactions the next.

"Take, for example, the man who drives his car downtown. All the way down, and while he is going through the business district, he is motor minded. He toots his horn for pedestrians to get out of the way and fumes if the sign changes sooner than he expected. But the moment he parks his car and begins to walk his point of view changes, and he becomes pedestrian minded. He is severely critical of motorists who do exactly what he did a few minutes before. Now then, it seem to me that there ought to be a middle ground somewhere. Such persons—and that means all of us—should be more tolerant of pedestrians when they are driving, and inclined to be broader minded when they are walking.

"I know a citizen who becomes furious when he finds that a lawn sprinkler is throwing water where he has to pass. But when he reaches his own home he is likely, in season, to start the sprinkler going, and the spray causes pedestrians to go into the street to avoid a wetting. I know men who permit their shrubbery to cover most of the sidewalk, and who declare that the shrubbery of other like-minded citizens should be torn out by the roots. Every day we see men and women do things they do not want others to do. It is proper for them, it seems, to take up enough room in a street car for two persons. If they see somebody else do it they declare that something should be done about it. Maybe the Golden Rule would be code enough for all of us, but we seem to be off the golden standard, and I have mentioned the matter here today in the hope that some of you gentlemen might suggest a way out of our difficulties."—Indianapolis News.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

A Brave Man's Bluff

THE early fur traders were almost without exception a class of brave men, equaled in their daring only by their resourcefulness. Such a man certainly was Louis Chappleu, a French Canadian voyager who shortly after the American Revolution had risen to the responsible position of agent for the British-American Fur company in charge of a trading post on the Menominee river where now stands the city of Marinette, Wis.

So long as he was dealing with the Menominee Indians who came to the mouth of the river by the hundreds at certain seasons every year to trade their fine, beaver, otter, bear and marten pelts for the white man's gewgaws, Chappleu had little to worry about, for they were unfailingly friendly.

But there came a day when a party of Chippewas who ranged between the Menominee river and Lake Superior, arrived at the fort, and this day Chappleu happened to be alone. Before he was aware of their identity the Chippewas were inside the stockade and had filed into the warehouse where he was busily engaged at the time. From the black looks which they gave him, he knew the Chippewas were in an ugly mood.

Soon the Indians became abusive and crowded around him with cocked rifles and tomahawks and knives drawn ready for use. The trader realized that they were planning to kill him and loot the post, so he tried to placate them as best he could. But the more he talked, the more abusive they became and he knew that the first move he made as though to resist them would be a signal for them to attack.

Hopelessly outnumbered and with no help near, Chappleu's situation seemed desperate. But he was of the breed of men who do not despair easily. Suddenly his eye, roaming about the room, lighted on an open barrel of gunpowder in the center of the room. Quick as a flash he had drawn a pistol, but instead of firing at one of the Indians he stepped over and pointed the pistol down into the barrel of powder. Then he faced the Chippewas and told them that he would give them just two minutes to get outside the stockade. If they did not, he would fire and they would all die together when he pulled the trigger of the pistol.

For a moment the Indians hesitated. Then to their ears came the ominous click of the pistol being cocked. One look at Chappleu's determined face told them what to expect. They departed—hastily. The trader's bluff had worked!

Old Bill Williams, Ex-Preacher and Lone Trapper

A TOWN in Arizona bears his name and thousands of tourists know it as the place where they leave the main line of the railroad for the branch line which goes up to the Grand Canyon.

Near by is Bill Williams mountain, a 9,000 foot peak. It also perpetuates the fame of one of the most picturesque figures in Old West history.

"Old Bill" Williams was an eccentric character who is said to have been a circuit-riding preacher "back in the states" before he took to the plains and mountains of the West as a lone trapper. This is the pen picture of him that one historian has left us: "A tall, stooped man of Missouri fever-and-ague type; his thin, leathery face; his nut-cracker jaws; his punch chin and nose; his small, sharp, twinkling eyes; his querulous voice; slovenly habits; elk-hide suit, black with campfire smoke and slick with grease; his pinhaid, humpnosed Indian pony; were familiar to trappers, traders and Indians from the Three Forks to the Gila and from the states to California."

Not an impressive figure, to be sure, but there wasn't a frontiersman of his period more cunning in outwitting and eluding hostile Indians or more redoubtable in fighting them when cornered, nor a scout and guide more familiar with remote parts of the Rocky mountain region than he. For the latter reason it seems all the more unbelievable that he should have made such a failure as guide for Fremont's expedition around the head of the San Luis valley of Colorado in 1848, a failure which almost resulted fatally for the whole party.

The only possible explanation for "Old Bill's" apparent unfamiliarity with one of his old stamping grounds is that he was old, infirm and half-blind from his many hardships of nearly 40 years on blazing deserts and in snow-filled mountains. After the rescue of the party, the old scout, feeling keenly the disgrace of his failure, fled once more to the solitudes of the mountains.

And soon afterwards the Indians "got" him—not in honest, open warfare but by treachery. In the spring of 1849 his body was found sitting against a tree in a secret recess of his favorite haunt, the Middle Park country of Colorado. There was a wound in his breast from a bullet fired by Indians he had considered his friends, the Utes. Their excuse was that he had betrayed their camp to hostile Arapahoes and the council decreed that he must die. They had exchanged rifles with him and as he sat in camp, unconscious of danger, one of the Utes had shot him.

Many Uses for Honey in Household Cooking

Honey was the first sweet known to man and was once the only sweet used in the household. After sugar was invented it gradually replaced this product.

Honey can be used the same way as sugar, however, provided the housewife learns the rules for substituting. It may be used on fruits, cereals, in dressing for salads, sweetening for beverages and in baking hams. It also may be substituted for sugar in bread, cakes and cookies.

In using honey instead of sugar in baked products a honey recipe is advised, when one is available. Honey contains about one-fifth moisture, so the liquid in an ordinary recipe must be reduced one-fifth. For example: A cake recipe calls for one cup of sugar and a half cup of liquid. Measure one cup of honey and half a cup of liquid, then remove one-fifth of a cup from the half cup of liquid.

Oven temperatures are important in baking with honey, as the caramelization point is low. Therefore the mixture should be baked slowly and evenly. Honey cakes will brown very rapidly. All baked products where honey is used should stand two or three days before using, as this improves the flavor.

Precious Manuscript

The first mention we have of the Vatican manuscript is in a catalogue of the Vatican library toward the close of the Fifteenth century, but at that time no one seems to have realized its great importance. Early in the Nineteenth century it mysteriously turned up in Paris, but it was later returned to the Vatican, where it still is.

It is now regarded as one of the most trustworthy witnesses to the original text of the New Testament, and apparently dates from about the middle of the Fourth century—being thus a contemporary of the Sinaitic manuscript.

The Vatican manuscript is referred to by the letter "B." Originally it contained the whole Bible in Greek, but the leaves containing Timothy, Titus, Revelation, and part of Hebrews, are now lost.—Exchange.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or [illegible] laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it! And the habitual use of irritating salts, or of powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills and tablets may prove injurious.

A week with a properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will tell you a lot. A few weeks' time, and your bowels can be "as regular as clockwork." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. Man From the North

By TESS FULTON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service

POLLY read the letter and tossed it carelessly to her roommate.

"Darling, here's a chance for one of your infernal practical jokes," she suggested, her cold eyes hiding in their darkness a faint twinkle. "That's from Allan Dyer. I met him last summer up North. He was good looking enough but a bit rusty in appearance—said he was camping on the lake and he looked it; and besides, he was poor. The man who interests me is the boy who can pay the waiter's check without looking as if he wondered how much it left him."

Carol smiled as she picked up the letter. "Your bright idea, Ivy one, is for me to carry on your correspondence with him; is that it?"

"He writes an interesting letter, and you can string him along; and when I go up there next year, I can have him to play around with."

"Polly, you're heartless!"

"Mebbe so, little one, but this is a heartless age."

Carol mused over the letter. It was chatty and interesting, and suddenly she decided to answer it. Polly informed her, immediately, that Allen had never seen her handwriting, so the hoax would work.

Carol wrote the reply, employing some of Polly's characteristic phrases, amused and pleased herself at the way her letter shaped itself.

A week later, Allan's reply came, and Carol learned something of his life. It seemed he was working in a lumber camp, and the letter told of his life there.

The letters began to interest her keenly, although she took care to keep the discovery from Polly who found the letters only mildly interesting and soon stopped reading them.

Slowly a personal note crept into the letters. Before she realized it, the same mood was upon her.

"Here's a nice situation!" Carol told herself one evening. "Writing Polly's letter to a chap who evidently is thinking of her tenderly, while I'm beginning to think of him the same way! I'll drop him!"

But she found it much easier to say it than to do it.

Polly left for a two weeks' trip for her firm, and with her bright, somewhat cynical presence absent from the room, Carol found it easier to dream and muse over the man to whom she was writing.

Polly had been gone only a few days when Carol went to the door to learn from the maid that "A man from the North" would like to see her.

Carol was stunned. "But she isn't here, Kate!"

Kate grinned. "He said if Polly wasn't here, he liked to see any friend of hers."

Carol thought a moment. "Send him up, Kate," she said with decision, but her mind was fluttering.

Carol went to the window. A long, raw-cold-looking roadster was at the curb. "It can't be Allan," she told herself.

The door opened into their living room, and a man, brown of face, and almost filling the doorway, faced her.

"I'm sorry to learn that Polly is away, but glad that you are here." His grey, fine eyes were friendly. "You see, I'm right from the woods, hungry for a good time, and I hope you will run around with me a little—some plays, dances, etc."

Carol laughed inwardly as she thought of the joke on Polly.

They did play around—a gay, gorgeous week. He seemed to have plenty of money that he spent freely but wisely, and he certainly was good company.

"Oh, this is awful!" Carol moaned one night, as she tossed her evening dress aside. "I'm in love with him and he's in love with Polly! And when Polly gets here—Gosh! what a mix-up!"

She saw no solution, but one came the next evening. They were at a corner table in one of the delightful places he knew. He had been musing a bit.

"Carol, I was lonely up North at the camp. You see, my father owns the business, and I was up there winning back after a bad dose of pneumonia. The letters that came, so cheery, amusing, pulled me out of dark hours; I made up my mind that the girl who wrote them should play with me and be with me all the rest of my life. Now are you willing?"

Carol ceased to breathe. "But—my dear—I—how did you know I wrote the letters? I—really—"

A strong, steadying hand lay upon her trembling one. "Through a friend I learned that Polly had gone on a business trip, but the letters came from your address just the same; and besides, the last of the letters sounded to me—well—as I know you now," he said gently.

"But Polly—" she began.

"The point of it is—do you care a bit for me?" he said quietly.

The somewhat dizzy world around her cleared. She was looking into the strong but tender face of the man she loved. She let her hand turn and clasp his.

"Of course I do, Allan. I have since your first letter arrived."

SOCIAL GRACES MEAN MUCH AS BUSINESS ASSET

On the coat of arms of one of England's schools, founded in the late Fourteenth century by William of Wykeham, it is written that "Manners Maketh Man." The cultivation of courtesy and the outward evidences of good breeding, therefore, may be considered one of the earliest purposes of education. But a teacher of today has discovered by questioning 4,114 boys and girls in high schools throughout this country that courtesy in word and deed is sadly lacking among members of the younger generation, who know neither the need for good manners nor the proper way to practice them.

This is their own loss, though not altogether their own fault. "Good manners," says Dr. Ruth Strang, assistant professor of education at Teachers' college, Columbia university, "which appear somewhat superficial and trivial, may be an important factor in adolescent adjustment and as aid to good mental hygiene." The shyness of youth is very often due to ignorance of etiquette, and sometimes bad manners conceal a keen sense of embarrassment which could be cured by proper training in the social graces.

Stylists say that this is the time for a "return to elegance." But though it has been said that clothes make the man, and possibly the woman, there is more truth in the ancient adage which gives the credit to manners.

Doctor Strang's researches indicate a direct effect of home environment on the manners of boys and girls. The school cannot hope to offset this influence altogether, and it may not be its business to try to do so. But youngsters can be taught the value of good manners as an asset for success in business and civilized society, and will then find it easy and pleasant to learn the customs, conventions and courtesies of which good manners are made.

"DEBT CERTIFICATES" GROW

A question which will shortly arise in this country is this: In spending public money for relief and recovery activities, where does the point of diminishing return occur?

In other words, it is possible to reach a point where the best intentioned activities, simply because of their cost to businesses and individuals, defeat the ends they are designed to further.

The public debt will be the greatest in history by June 30, next, and climb steadily to June 30, 1935, according to present program, when a halt is contemplated. The estimated total federal debt will then be about $31,000,000,000.

States and municipalities are similarly burdened. Their position is worse because their credit is obviously much less solid than is that of the federal government. They have spent, collectively, untold billions—with slight idea of how the money will be repaid. They have frightened investors, property owners, prospective builders of homes and factories and stores. They will suffer for it accordingly—as will workers, taxpayers and the entire public.

When Mr. Roosevelt said that, unless something extraordinary occurred, he meant to begin reducing indebtedness within a year, as all expenditures necessary to his policies would have been made, overwhelming public approval greeted him. That shows which way the wind blows. All branches of government, down to the smallest hamlet in the land, should take decisive steps to reduce public debt and eliminate the fear of taxation which is rapidly becoming confiscation.

PEOPLE WILL DECIDE

From now on it looks like open warfare between the two major parties in this country. It promises to be a warfare in which no quarter will be asked or given. The truce which has existed since the Roosevelt administration came into power has been abandoned by both sides and we can expect to find the boys digging themselves into the trenches [illegible] votes next fall.

In Washington the republicans were first to hurl down the defi, while in Michigan we find Governor Comstock leading a militant democracy ready to battle with its enemies. That does not mean that much necessary legislation for recovery, both state and national, will not be enacted. Party lines may be tightly drawn on the surface, but with members of both parties compelled to take their records before the people within the next few months we can expect to see many remedial measures being made into law.

While the tide of battle ebbs and flows it might be well for both sides to remember that wholly outside these party differences a great majority of the people are patiently waiting to see exactly what happens. In these days of quick communication the action of state and national lawmaking bodies today becomes the news of tomorrow. It will be an informed electorate that they will have to face back home, where after all is said and done, political controversies receive their final analysis. It will be the people who will decide. Keeping this fact constantly in mind is the best possibly strategy. And that will be good for the nation as a whole.

PACKING PLANTS

The declaration of Speaker Rainey, of the house of representatives that packing plants ought to be taken over and operated by the government, leads the Omaha Journal-Stockman to offer this comment:

"The Journal-Stockman holds no brief for the meat packers but the idea of the government taking over and operating the country's packing plants as the railroads were operated in war time calls to mind our disastrous experience with the roads. The railroads have not yet recovered from the demoralization in service, in equipment, and in earnings and the nation is still paying heavily for that experiment.

"If the nation is going into government ownership of industries and utilities, perhaps the sooner we start the better. The point to remember, however, is that the control of the mechanics of any industry is no guarantee of higher prices to producers or lower prices to consumers. These are inexorably regulated by older and higher laws."

SET A GOOD EXAMPLE

Among other weeks set apart for special consideration is "National Thrift Week" from January 17 to 23, and the memory of Benjamin Franklin, who was noted for his frugality as well as his wisdom, is given prominence as an influential force. Franklin became one of the foremost of the Colonial leaders because it was through his sage advice on matters of economy that the struggling colonists were able to survive the financial storms of that period. Today, one hundred and fifty years later, his advice is just as applicable as it was in the opening days of the Republic. Never was there greater need for public and private thrift in this country. Benjamin Franklin set a good example for his fellow countrymen to follow. With nations and individuals inclined towards reckless spending we can find in the story of his life many ideas of thrift worthy of emulation. During "National Thrift Week" is a good time to renew our historical acquaintance with this outstanding American.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Charlevoix and Ironton

Our weekly illustration from "One Thousand Tales Worth Telling," Pickering.

Stephen Girard, the infidel millionaire of Philadelphia, one Saturday bade his clerks come next day and unload a vessel which had just arrived. One young man stepped up to the desk and said, as he turned pale, "Mr. Girard, I cannot work tomorrow." "Well, sir, if you cannot do as I wish, we can separate." "I know that, sir," said the young man; "I also know that I have a widowed mother to care for, but I cannot work on Sunday." "Very well, sir," said the proprietor, "go to the cashier's desk and he will settle with you." For three weeks the young man tramped the streets of Philadelphia looking for work. One day a bank president asked Mr. Girard to name a suitable person for cashier of a new bank about to be started. After reflection Mr. Girard named this young man. "But I thought you discharged him?" "I did," was the answer, "because he would not work on Sunday; and the man who will lose his situation from principle is the man to whom you can entrust your money."

"The Lord saith . . . for them that honour me I will honour." I Sam. 2:30.)

Next Sunday will be "Polar Bear Sunday" at our church. The Polar Bears will make their third annual pilgrimage, in a body, to worship with us. For the day we will rest upon our oars, with reference to our series of sermons on "Grace," and deliver an address in keeping with the birthday of Abraham Lincoln.

Services for the season of Lent will be announced next Sunday.

Evening services as usual at 7:00.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

The great war is over and the armistice was signed last Tuesday night at the dug-out when Captains Hamlin and Martini and their respective staffs shook hands over the weinies and sauer kraut and pledged a truce in steaming java. Victory hung in the balance at five p. m. Saturday, but Captain Martini and his forces made a final sortie and hosed out his opponent in the membership contest by a margin of three—his last acquisition being turned over to the "adjc" at a fraction before 6:00 p. m.—the deadline. If Captain Hamlin's supper hour hadn't arrived, the result might have been different but—you know how it was with Napoleon at Waterloo—the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak.

Officers of the Legion are highly pleased at the result of the membership drive which, in eighteen days time, produced 45 paid members for the post, several of whom had never previously belonged to the Legion anywhere. Together with the membership it had to start with when the drive commenced, the post now has 70 paid members—a feat which it is believed has not been equaled by any other post in the Lower 11th district this year. At the celebration meeting Tuesday night, fifty members were present and greatly enjoyed the affair. Comrade Anthony Novotny was "there" in every sense of the word with accordion and the old A. E. F. songs, roared out to its accompaniment, sounded pretty good to the bunch. Comrades Fred Floyd and Charles Hamlin also displayed some pretty nifty footwork to the strains of "Turkey-In-the-Straw."

Luxuries often indulged become necessities.

WILL SEEK STATE REVISION OF TAX

WOULD MAKE COUNTY TREASURER THE KEY MAN

Proposal Would Eliminate Any Property Tax Levy for State Purposes—Cut Auto Fees

Revamping of the state tax laws effective this year will be proposed in the special session of the legislature, Speaker Martin R. Bradley announced Tuesday.

Representative Vernon Brown, Republican of Mason, has prepared the bill, which will be discussed Thursday by the legislative council.

Brown's measure proposed to centralize tax collections with county treasurers. It would prohibit collection of any property tax for state purposes.

The county treasurer would have the master assessment rolls, eliminating the hundreds of errors that annually creep into the assessment and collection of taxes.

Ten Installments

Property owners would pay city, county, school and township taxes in 10 monthly payments. No collections would be required in November and December.

If taxes are one year delinquent the county treasurer would take a judgment or lien on the property. The owner, if occupying the property, could not be ejected for nonpayment of taxes until they should total 75 per cent of the assessed valuation.

Could Garnishee

If revenue property, the treasurer could garnishee the rentor to prevent "milking" of the property. If a property owner fails to meet his obligations the treasurer could levy on the owner's bank account or any other property he might find.

Passage of Brown's bill would force the legislature to seek some other form of revenue to finance the University of Michigan and Michigan State college.

Urges Auto Relief

Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, said Tuesday he will urge adoption of his "three-six-nine" plan of reducing the automobile weight tax if Gov. Comstock includes relief to automobile owners among the subjects to be presented to the forthcoming special session of the legislature.

Fitzgerald's tax plan would mean three sets of license fees for passenger automobiles depending on their weight. The fee for the lighter car would be $3, that for the medium weight vehicles $6, while a fee of $9 would be levied for heavier cars.

Another proposal for the special legislative session would provide for drastic revision of county and township governments so that re-allocation of functions of various offices could be accomplished by local referenda subject to approval of the legislature. The change would permit the elimination of certain elective offices in counties and townships but would not disturb the membership of the boards of supervisors. Instead of electing sheriffs, drain commissioners, county road commissioners, clerks and others, a governing body might be delegated to make appointments to these offices. The plan would result in huge economies in local government, it is believed. The proposal would be accomplished in the form of a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters next November.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS BEGIN SECOND SEMESTER

High School Classes Still In Temporary Quarters After Exams.

Charlevoix public schools started on the second semester of work Monday morning. Mid-year examinations occupied the last three days of the previous week and now the work of the last semester is under way.

High school classes are still occupying temporary class rooms in the grade and junior high buildings while improvements are being completed under the CWA program in the high school building.

The public library is also being improved under the same project as the school buildings.

Do it now, delays are dangerous. We pass this way but once.

It doesn't take big causes to make big quarrels and big wars.

A BAD SETBACK

He had kissed her under the mistletoe, and he was now telling her how much he loved her.

"Honestly, Brenda," he said moonily, "you're the very first girl I've wanted for my own. The first I've ever really and truly loved."

"My hat, old thing," she said calmly. "Fancy trying to work that old stuff on me. Me!"

"Well, dash it all," said the youth, a little taken aback, "you're the first girl who ever doubted it."

Couldn't Keep Up

Two colored boys were having an argument about ghosts. One of them claimed to have seen a ghost as he passed the cemetery the night before.

"What was dis here ghos' doin' when you las' seen him?" asked the doubtful one.

"Jes fallin' behin', mistah; fallin' behin' rapidly."

Sweden Provides Bird Houses

Bird houses by the thousands, have been set out by the Swedish government forestry service to get the birds' aid in fight against insects. It has been found that when dead trees are systematically cleaned out there are not enough hollow trunks left for the birds to use as nests, and destructive insects have consequently been gaining in force. So far about 7,000 government bird houses have been put up and the private owners of forestry land are asked to follow the example.

More or Less Joyous School Days Recalled

Did you ever glance through an old school book, particularly a reader, and note the peccadillos of more or less happy school days? On the fly leaves will be found such sentimental doggerel as "roses are red, violets are blue, sugar is sweet and so are you"; "sure as the vine grows 'round the stump, you're my little sugar lump," and others. But speaking of sentiment, do you remember the enmeshing of names—yours and that of a childhood sweetheart? You will recall the letters appearing in both names were stricken out. Those remaining were named in rotation, "love, hate, friendship, marriage," and repeated. The last letter was supposed to forecast the windup of that particular love affair. Some of the pupils spent idle moments blacking all the o's in the printed page. Others, myself included, specialized in adding fierce mustaches to Daniel Webster and other smooth-faced men of fame whose pictures appeared. Another very popular stunt was to write in the front of the book: "If my name you want to see, look on Page 203." Turning to the indicated page, however, you were told to look elsewhere and then began a chase that probably ended with a saucy remark instead of the promised name. Oh, the good old days! Oh, to read again of the princess who was black and blue from three peas under fourteen mattresses. Or of the third and last wish that had to be wasted in getting rid of those sausages that clung to the old man's nose "and what was more, they could not be pulled off!"—"Pioneer," in the Indianapolis News.

Adam Liked It, Too

The preacher was reading the Scripture when an old lady broke in: "What kind of a Bible are you using, parson?"

"I'm reading from the revised version," he answered.

"Him!" she said. "The King James version was good enough for St. Paul and it's good enough for me."—Montreal Star.

No permits to carry hunting arms in game areas will be granted by the department of conservation unless the applicant has a 1933-34 small game hunting license the department has announced. Permits are issued both by local conservation officers and at the Lansing office of the department. The 1933-34 small game licenses do not expire until September 1, 1934.

If smelt runs develop in any new streams during the coming spring, residents of the vicinity won't be required to wait for another year before they are permitted to use dip nets to take these fish, the conservation department has announced. In past years it was necessary for the conservation commission to take action opening a stream to dip-netting for smelt. The conservation commission has now authorized Director George E. Hogarth to declare any stream open to dip-netting for smelt when spring runs develop.

If 15,000 people take a quarter of a million fish in one day how many fish will 500,000 anglers take in a year? This is the simple arithmetical problem the conservation department is using to determine in a general way what drain there is annually on Michigan's fish resources. Dr. Carl L. Hubbs, director of the Institute for Fisheries Research of the department has submitted a detailed report of findings drawn from more than 50,000 creel census cards submitted by fishermen in all parts of the state for the last five years. The cards showed that the 52,016 anglers in one day took 287,305 legal sized fish from the lakes and streams of the state. If these figures are any indication of what happens throughout the state generally, it would mean an enormous total for the season's catch, it was said.

OLD AGE HEAD TAX IS DUE MARCH 1ST

Receipt to Constitute Registration for Those Missed

If any resident of Charlevoix county has not yet been registered for payment of the old age pension tax their receipt for payment of the tax will be accepted as their registration, according to word received from the state welfare department by County Treasurer Lillis Flanders.

This old age tax is due and payable before March 1, according to the law, and non-payment constitutes a misdemeanor. It is probable, that some residents have been missed in the old age census which has been taken under direction of County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow but in these cases the state has ruled that payment of the tax constitutes registration as well.

DRAMA CLUB PRESENTS ANNUAL INFORMAL SHOW

Program to Be Given Thursday Evening, February 15th, 8-o'Clock

On Thursday evening, February 15, at 8 o'clock the High School Drama club will present its annual informal program.

Instead of the usual one-act play a delightful three-act comedy has been chosen. Lewis Greenman, who was the hilarious adolescent of "Skidding," portrays the very dignified young Austin Bevans who falls heir to a girls' boarding seminary which he turns into a "Charm School." Since he takes four of his good friends with him as instructors (Robert Emery, Edward Vratinina, Dale McCrum and Robert Ashdon), great complications follow.

Jeirine Smith, who will be remembered for her excellent comedy characterization in "A Prince There Was," plays "Elise," the star pupil at the boarding school. The other girls are Jean Zeitler, Annabelle Rinehart, Mnrein Oldham, Barbara Evers, Mendy Scott, Frances Chvntil and Inn Newmnn.

Marguerite Chew is guaranteed to keep the audience in gales of laughter by her portrayal of the part of the secretary. Throughout the piece the old romance of Margaret McHugh and Herman Meyers casts its influence.

This play will not be elaborately staged, but the club members extend a cordial invitation to enjoy with them an evening of fun and entertainment.

WILD LIFE MAY MAKE PROFIT FOR FARMERS

Sale of Hunting Rights Provides Means for Increasing Receipts

Crops grown chiefly for feeding animals of which there is no surplus and which voluntary helpers are anxious to harvest may offer possibilities of profit to Michigan farmers, but there are also possibilities of losses if the subject is not studied before an investment of money or capital is made, according to Dr. Miles Pirnie, director of the Kellogg Wild Life Sanctuary.

The most common source of income from wild life, at present in Michigan, is the sale of hunting rights on land. This type of sale involves no investment and requires only that the owner have game on the land to make it attractive territory for hunting and that non-paying guests be prevented from reaping the harvest.

Hunting rights may be sold for the season, by the day, or by the size of the bag of game obtained by the hunter. Sales of day or season rights are most common. Duck, pheasant, or deer hunting rights are most commonly leased in this state.

Animals may also be reared in confinement for sale as meat, fur, or for release by hunting clubs. This phase of the wild life business requires capital, labor, and understanding of the work before any profit can be made. Muskrat farming is an example of this line of work which was popular at one time but which has proved, in many instances, to be unprofitable.

Land owners who wish to obtain a revenue from leasing hunting rights should study methods of land management which makes their cover attractive to game animals and birds. Winter feeding, presence of good cover, prevention of fires, and saving stock for breeding the next year are essential.

Anyone interested in game farming should write to Dr. Miles D. Pirnie, a member of Michigan State college staff, route 1, Augusta, Mich. Dr. Pirnie is in charge of the W. K. Kellogg Sanctuary on Wintergreen lake. Species of native and exotic land and water birds make this one of the show places of Michigan and visitors are always welcomed.

"Cradle Song" Brings New Star to Pictures in Her First U. S. Film

"Cradle Song," which introduces Dorothea Wieck, Paramount's newest continental star to American audiences, will open Saturday night at the Palace theatre.

The picture is from the stage play of the same name by the noted Spanish author, G. M. Martinez Sierra, and the screen adaptation was made by Marc Connelly, American playwright known for the sensation stage success, "The Green Pastures."

The play, "Cradle Song," has been produced in every civilized country of the world and is a stand-by of dramatic stock companies. Paramount bought it in 1921 but held back production until they could find an actress capable of carrying the principal role, that of Joanna. The performance of Dorothea Wieck in "Maedchen in Uniform" clearly stamped her as the one person for the role, and she was signed by Paramount.

The story is a moving tale of frustrated mother love behind convent walls. Dorothea Wieck, as Joanna, enters the convent at the age of eighteen, leaving behind several small brothers and sisters whom she has raised. Her need for motherhood is almost miraculously granted when a baby is left on the convent doorstep. She is permitted to raise the child, and the mother love she would have lavished on her own children, she expends on the foundling.

SCHOOL TAXES MAY BE PAID SEPARATE

Supreme Court Rules Past Due Taxes May Be Paid in This Manner

In one of the first of its interpretations of the 1933 emergency ten-year installment tax payment law, directing that the first installment of taxes due for 1931 and prior years must be paid before September 1, 1935, the state supreme court has ordered John K. Stack, auditor general, to accept separate installment payments of school taxes. Installments on other kinds of taxes payable at the same time do not have to accompany the school tax payment.

A test case was brought before the high court by H. L. Fahrney and others, property owners of Oakland county, who had attempted to make their first installment tax payment apply on the school tax only. John K. Stack, auditor general, had refused to accept such payment, saying that such procedure was not contemplated by the provisions of the emergency act. He also claimed that the amount of accounting required under such an arrangement would make the plan unfeasible.

The supreme court ruled that the act gave the taxpayer the right to pay the whole or any part of his taxes at any time. It also held that the legislature alone had the sole power to change such a law. Thus, taxpayers may pay certain items of their taxes and defer payments on the others. In the contested case, the taxpayers desired to pay their school tax so as to relieve the financial distress of their school district.

The auditor general was directed by the court to accept the school taxes as tendered, or immediately return the rolls to the county treasurer, at which point taxes may be paid.

HOG RAISERS CAN ALL GET FEDERAL BENEFIT

Production Reduction of 25% Is New Requirement

All hog raisers—regardless of the size of their past production average—may qualify for government benefit payments by reducing their little average and production for market by at least 25 per cent through a new ruling by the AAA.

Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the AAA corn-hog section, amended a contract for the inter-related commodities to permit smaller producers to benefit.

It was specified previously that if the 1932-33 litter average was less than three, the contracting party was not required to reduce hog production this year, but would be ineligible to receive any hog control payments.

SUN SHOWN FRIDAY, 6 MORE WEEKS WINTER?

Traverse Ground Hog Sleeps Thruout the Day, However

Even a ground-hog with astigmatism in both eyes could have seen his shadow Friday morning as the sky was absolutely clear of clouds most of the morning.

This means, of course, that winter will continue for another six weeks but, inasmuch as it always has, no one was much surprised.

It was interesting to know that the ground-hog at the municipal zoo slumbered peacefully throughout the day, too lazy or too smart to step outside and look for shadows.—Traverse City Record-Eagle.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 39. NUMBER 7. EIGHT PAGES THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1934 PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

COUNCIL VOTES LIQUOR GLASS SALES

ADOPTED RESOLUTION AT SESSION MONDAY NIGHT

Controlling Ordinance Limits Sales to Summer Months and Zoning Excludes All But Big Hotels

The sale of liquor by the glass in Charlevoix was made legal by action of the common council Monday night, but under restrictions aimed to meet with public approval.

The council followed adoption of a resolution authorizing sale by approval of a controlling ordinance which permits sales only during the months of June, July, August and September, and a zoning provision which excludes practically the entire city with the exception of The Inn, Beach Hotel, Hallett Hotel and Belvedere Hotel. To provide for this arrangement, the ordinance prohibits sale within an 800-foot radius of churches and a 1500-foot radius of schools. The ordinance does not effect the proposed liquor store nor sale by drug stores.

Under provisions of the liquor laws Charlevoix may have three places licensed for sale by the glass, on the basis of one for each 700 population. Adoption of the resolution and ordinance was by a 4 to 2 vote with Aldermen Webster and Kibbe opposed.

The council deemed it necessary to take some action toward a solution of the liquor problem for Charlevoix, for the reason that Traverse City to our south, and Petoskey to the north, is to permit the sale of spirits by the glass. Under the law it was necessary for the council to take action on or before the 15th of this month. The ordinance controls the situation, is permissable under the charter of the city, and is subject to amendment or repeal by the council at any time.

Contention between the council and the city park commission flared up again Monday night and resulted in a council vote to place the future existence of the commission up to the city electors. Consequently voters will be asked to decide at the general election of April 2nd, on a proposal to repeal Sections 4, 5 and 6 of Chapter 20 of the city charter, providing for creation of a park commission. Back a number of years ago the same proposition was rejected. At the present time the city charter provides for a park commission of three members and not to exceed $300 yearly for park purpose expenditures by the commission. Additional finances must be voted by the council. The matter has been a bone of contention for many years and was brought to a head recently by conflicts over decisions on park projects provided by the CWA. The charter amendment must first be approved by Governor Comstock before submission to electors.

The council Monday night confirmed by resolution former oral promises to aid financially the county proposal for a new court house under the CWA by voting $5,000 as the city's contribution. The action follows the mandate of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, which has gone on record to support the council fully in any move they might take, financially or otherwise, to aid the court house proposal. Harry A. Craig and County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow, representing the supervisors' court house committee before the council, outlined the advantages this city would derive from labor, etc., and stressed the fact the board of supervisors would expect Charlevoix support if they were to place their stamp of approval on the project.

MERCURY 36 BELOW; OLD TIMERS SCRATCH HEAD TO FIND EQUAL

All previous records for cold weather were eclipsed here Thursday night when the temperature tobogganed to 36 degrees below zero.

One old-timer remarked that once back 35 years ago the thermometer stood 42 degrees below at the Pere Marquette depot, but it is only in the memory of old residents that such an incident existed.

No small amount of damage was caused by frozen and broken water pipes around town and the number of stalled motor cars was far greater than the night before when the mercury dipped to 22 degrees below zero.

TELEPHONE COMPANY REPORTS LOSES DROP

Net Loss Is Much Smaller During 1933 Than Previous Year

Net loss of 46,476 telephones during 1933, compared with a net loss of 105,495 during 1932, is indicated in the report of operations of the Michigan Bell Telephone company for the past year, which was presented by Butler Foraker, president, at the annual meeting of stockholders held in Detroit Thursday, February 8.

Telephone installations during the year totalled 125,301, and disconnections were 171,777. Substantially all of the loss in 1933 occurred during the first eight months, the report shows. At the end of the year the company had 481,353 telephones in service.

Ratio of net earnings to the cost of plant and other assets declined during the year to 2.47%, from 2.60% in 1932, and 3.62% in 1931. Dividends of 1½% were paid on the capital stock.

WINTER CARNIVAL PROGRAM PLANNED

LEGION NOW OUTLINING ACTIVITIES FOR EVENT

Extensive List of Sports on February 24th to Culminate "Trade in Charlevoix" Campaign

(By F. V. Tyler.)

Plans for the program sponsored by the Association of Commerce and the Legion on carnival day, Saturday, February 24th, are rapidly taking form.

W. E. Goss is chairman of the dance committee and will pick his own assistants. Charles A. Hamlin and Albert P. Taylor will have charge of the races and streets sports. The tentative program now calls for dog sled races in the morning and skating races and skiing events in the afternoon, with the dance at night in the gymnasium. Contrary to original plans, it has been thought best to charge a reasonable admission for the dance and for the spectators who will occupy the galery. Various members of Leslie T. Shapton post No. 226 have been told off to various specific duties on the carnival night.

Local skiing enthusiasts, who have formed themselves in a club, are working hard out at the mountain and have built up a six foot jump on the side of the mountain that should prove a thriller. In addition to the local experts, skiiers of considerable reputation from Petoskey and from the C. C. camp will take part.

The ticket plan, which is a part of the carnival scheme and which has been in operation for the past few weeks, has exceeded the expectations of its backers. Several of the larger concerns have run out of tickets and are calling for more. Additional supplies have been ordered and will be placed with the merchants immediately on their receipt. Most of the local merchants participating have expressed their satisfaction with the plan, which seems to be producing quite a bit of additional business, as well as encouraging the payment of past-due accounts.

HEALTH GRANT PROVIDING NURSING SERVICE

Miss Myrtle O'Neil Added to County Staff for Two Months

Health work in Charlevoix county is given impetus by the addition of Miss Myrtle O'Neil, registered nurse, on a temporary assignment of two months, working under the supervision of the new Children's Fund nurse, Miss A. Winnifred Golley.

The employment of Miss O'Neil is made possible by a grant made by the United States Public Health Service to the Michigan department of health. Miss O'Neil is one of a hundred nurses assigned to Michigan to relieve unemployment and her assignment to this county means that additional work can be done in immunization and communicable disease control and in infant and preschool hygiene. On request from any of the public the nurse will go into the home to give one demonstration in the care of the sick.

Emmet and Antrim counties have both received additional nursing services from the same grant.

KIPMEN WIN EASILY FROM EAST JORDAN

SCORED 18 TO 5 VICTORY FRIDAY NIGHT

Meet Harbor Springs Here This Week in Contest Deciding Class C Conference Championship

Charlevoix high school cagers narrowed the distance separating them from another Tip of Michigan conference title when they defeated East Jordan by a one-sided 18 to 5 score on Jordan's court Friday night.

The victory was the fourth in conference competition and the seventh of nine games played so far this season by the Kipmen. Return games with Harbor Springs and East Jordan remain on Charlevoix's pre-tournament schedule—both at home.

The Kipmen were vastly superior to East Jordan in every department of the game Friday night. After allowing 3 points in the first period, they tightened up and held Jordan scoreless for the next two quarters. The losers had few unguarded shots. In the final quarter, with three reserves in the line-up, they still managed to out-score their rivals. The Kipmen led 6 to 3 at the first intermission, 10 to 3 at the second and 15 to 3 at the third.

Bob Pearl resumed the scoring lead Friday night after a lapse of several games when he marked up 7 points. Potter and Ance accounted for 4 each and Foster 2. Sommerville and Cihak counted 2 each for Jordan and Swoboda 1.

The score by quarters:

Charlevoix	6	4	5	3	18
East Jordan	3	0	0	2	5

Harbor Here Friday

The Kipmen clash with Harbor Springs here Friday night in a game likely to decide the conference championship. Despite an earlier victory over the Emmet county team, Charlevoix will have its hands full to win. Harbor has been going places since they lost to the Kipmen, bowling over all opposition in successive games. As far as can be learned, Harbor now shared the conference lead with but one loss, the same as Charlevoix. They were defeated earlier in the season by Rogers City, another conference member, but Rogers City has not played sufficient standing in the title race and for this reason it is doubtful if Harbor's setback will count against them. This matter, however, remains for conference officials to decide.

ORGANIZE PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSN.

$25,000 MADE AVAILABLE TO NORTHERN GROUP

Territory Comprising Eight Counties to Benefit from New Federal Proposition

Capital of $25,000 was placed at the disposal of the Gaylord Production Credit Association, on January 19th by the Production Credit Corporation of St. Paul, to enable the local Association covering the counties of Otsego, Montmorency, Alpena, Presque Isle, Cheboygan, Emmet, Charlevoix, and Ranges 5, 6 and 7 west of Antrim, to begin operations.

This is only a portion of the capital that has been subscribed by the corporation. The balance of stock subscribed will be paid for as needed in the course of business. The capital that has been subscribed has been chiefly invested in government securities which will be placed with the Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Paul, as additional security to the notes and mortgages which the Intermediate Credit bank will discount for local borrowers through the Gaylord association.

A portion of the capital has been provided as an operating fund for paying current expenses of the association.

The Gaylord Production Credit association is a local cooperative organization of farmers who have united to form the association to procure short term loans for general farming purposes, similar to 88 other associations that have been organized in North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. Each has been capitalized for an amount deemed sufficient to provide all the capital needed in its territory after a survey of conditions by the Production Credit Corporation of St. Paul. It will provide funds for feeding or fattening of livestock; for production of poultry and dairy products, fruits and other farm crops.

The farmer-borrowers will each subscribe for stock at the rate of $5 for each $100 they borrow, and this will also be invested in securities. The difference between the stock subscribed by borrowers and by the corporation is that the borrowers' stock has the exclusive voting power, and the corporation's stock has preference as to dividends. Directors of the local association, Both share equally in any dividends that may be earned.

A. J. Townsend, who has been named secretary-treasurer of the local association will take applications from farmers for short term loans secured by chattel mortgages.

Farmers may make application through their county agents.

CONGRESS PLANNING TO ERASE CHECK TAX

Tax Revision Bill Includes Provision To This Effect

The house ways and means committee virtually completed action on the tax revision bill Thursday and wrote into the measure a provision repealing the two cent bank check tax, one of the "nuisance" levies of the 1932 tax act.

Under the provision the bank check tax, which brought in $39,000,000 in 1933, will be repealed January 1, 1935.

POLAR BEARS WINNERS OVER MANISTEE QUINT

Scored 28 to 21 Victory After Close Contest Thursday Night

The Charlevoix Polar Bears had the best of their annual argument with the crack Manistee Iron Works cage team here last Thursday evening, winning by a 28 to 21 score after a close game.

The Polar Bears held the visitors scoreless in the first period while counting two goals to lead 4 to 0, but in the second stanza Manistee closed the gap and the two teams were deadlocked 10-all at the half.

The last two quarters were close fought with the advantage always in doubt until the final moments when the Polar Bears forged ahead to win.

Ikens led the Polar Bear attack with 12 points. Supernaw was next with 6, Joe Smith 4, Davenport and Brown 2 each. Smith's work at guard was outstanding. Block and Wicinski were high for the visitors with 8 and 6 points, respectively.

TEST CASE AWAITS COURT'S DECISION

TAKEN UNDER CONSIDERATION BY JUDGE GILBERT

Arguments Completed Wednesday and Decision Will Be Given Late This Week or Early Next

With completion Wednesday of an agreed statement of facts by attorneys for plaintiff and defendant in Charlevoix's friendly suit testing the validity of Act 94, Judge Parm C. Gilbert took the case under consideration and will return here late this week or early next week to give a decision.

The suit, in which Martin Block, local taxpayer, seeks to restrain the city from borrowing from the PWA, under provisions of Act 94, funds for construction of a sewage disposal plant, is an effort to obtain, upon request of the PWA, favorable adjudication by the Michigan Supreme Court of the so-called emergency act and thus remove the stumbling block confronting many Michigan municipalities in obtaining grants.

The suit opened last Friday and was continued Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. A. L. Fitch, attorney for pluintiff, has requested the restraining order on the contention eleven points in the argument.

Rollie L. Lewis, city attorney, appearing for the city, entered a general denial to plaintiff's claims that act 94 is unconstitutional, and in addition set forth that taxpayers of the city of Charlevoix had voted favorably upon the proposition December 20, 1933.

He also contended the city of Charlevoix had a similar case decided in its favor by the supreme court in 1909, when erection of a public wharf was held as not being prohibited under the state constitution of 1908. It was claimed at that time that erection of the wharf was an internal improvement and as such prohibited.

In view of the fact many municipalities are facing the same obstacles as Charlevoix in their efforts to obtain PWA grants, the test case here is of state-wide interest.

FORMER CHARLEVOIX ROAD OFFICIAL DEAD

Joseph M. Courier Succumbed Friday at East Jordan

Joseph M. Courier, 70, former Charlevoix county road commissioner, died at his home in East Jordan Friday morning.

Mr. Courier was born in New York state October 20, 1863, and came to this region when a lad of 15. December 25, 1890, he was married to Miss Emma Gregor.

SCHOOL CWA PROJECT PROGRESSES

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM OF IMPROVEMENTS UNDER WAY

All Three Floors High School Building Included in Sweeping List of Betterments

While several weeks will be required for completion of the project, very definite advancement may be observed on CWA improvements being made in the high school building.

Redecoration of the assembly and class rooms has been carried out in color providing improvement in the lighting. Lighter shades of color than formerly used are being employed with a decided beneficial effect. This motive is being carried out even to seats and furniture.

The former unstable railing type stairway leading to the second floor is being replaced with a reinforced, plastered stairway of greater strength. This change further adds greatly to the appearance of the hallways. Strengthening of stairway supports is being done where needed. New electric light fixtures will be installed in the halls and a more convenient system of switches and wiring in many of the rooms. Other electrical improvements include installation of a fire alarm system with alarm boxes on all three floors and extension of the master clock system now employed in the new grade building to the high school.

New bookcases and cupboards are being built for every room in the building, and in many rooms the old type recitation benches are being replaced with movable, individual arm-type chairs. The CWA does not provide new furniture, however, only in cases where CWA labor may be employed in the building.

Several decided improvements are being made in the basement. A kitchen, with hot and cold running water and electric ranges for cooking equipment is being built. Tables and other necessities will be provided with the view of utilizing this added feature for student lunches, meetings of any other public purpose for which it might be desired.

Unsightly basement supporting beams and unfinished partitions are being plastered. Painted glass in the toilet windows is being replaced with dispur[illegible] and the ventilators now located in the windows installed in the walls thus providing an additional window to improve lighting.

While it may appear the project is dragging out over too long a period of time, this feature should be overlooked in view of the thoroughness in which the improvements are being carried out. The building will be in most excellent condition when the work is completed.

MAYOR SEE INJURED IN ACCIDENT SUNDAY

Nose Broken, Badly Cut and Injured in Fall From Step-Ladder

Mayor L. S. See was severely and painfully injured shortly after noon Sunday in an unfortunate mishap.

While stuffing a ventilator in the back part of the vacant store space adjoining the furniture store, the ladder upon which he was standing slipped, causing him to fall to the floor with terrific force.

Mr. See suffered a broken nose, lacerations about his mouth, a dislocated wrist and other injuries. He was taken to Charlevoix hospital for treatment and his condition at the present time is as well as could be expected.

BELVEDERE BIDS FOR 1934 STATE GOLF TOURNAMENT

Prospects that the Belvedere Golf club will be awarded the 1934 Michigan Amateur Golf championship tournament appear bright according to down-state press reports.

At a recent meeting of the Detroit District Golf association an announcement was made by James D. Standish, Jr., an officer of the Michigan State League, that an invitation to return the state championship tournament to Charlevoix had been received from the Belvedere Club. It was indicated the bid was receiving favorable consideration.

The state tournament was held at the Belvedere Club in 1930 and 1931, but for economic reasons was awarded to Grand Rapids in 1932 and to Jackson the following year.

Why so many schools in Charlevoix county were given help that could have been consolidated, he could not explain.

SOUTH BARNARD

The abatement in cold weather had its effect in an increased attendance at the Sunday services in the Reformed church. The pastor preached an evangelistic sermon based on the words of Jesus: "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." The three divisions of his discourse were: first, a prompt recognition; second, a divine companion; third, a peaceful place. These things the penitent thief received in the eleventh hour of his life when he accepted Christ. This episode gives a ray of hope to those who have lived a wicked life and to those who have come to the last days of their life without Christ—there is an opportunity still to accept Jesus Christ as one's personal Saviour, for "Whosoever believeth may in Him have eternal life." But there is also a warning in this incident for the other criminal on a cross found it too late—his attitude was that of sarcasm and ridicule. May no one who reads this delay so long that he is hardened in his sin and cannot find the grace to repent and accept the King of kings.

Beginning Monday of this week the pastor of the Reformed church expects to give a course in Christian belief. For the time being it will be given to sectional groups. Monday afternoon at 2:30, this week, a group will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Boss; Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock another group will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith. One of the first topics to be discussed is, "Can We Prove [illegible]

We all rejoice that Mrs. John Boss has returned to her home from the hospital and that her health is much improved. Her little daughter, Reta Mae, is a happy addition to this radiant home.

The bride wore an exquisite dress of rose lace with train, a matching hat and muff, and a white fur jacket. A peach and green was the color scheme in the outfit worn by the maid of honor, the bride's sister, and gold and blue were effectively worn by the bridesmaid. Andrew and Dan Green attended the groom and the ceremony was indeed impressive. The Andrew E. Gallagher home was the scene of the wedding breakfast and reception. Thirty guests were present, including relatives of both the bride and groom. A dance was held in the community hall in the evening in honor of the newlyweds.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Three Meetings On Corn-Hog Program Announced

All farmers in the county disregarding the number of pigs raised, are urged to attend their nearest meeting to get the latest information on the corn-hog program being carried on in Charlevoix county.

The following three meetings have been arranged:

Thursday, February 15, Charlevoix court house at 1:30 o'clock.

Saturday, February 17, Boyne City postoffice at 1:30 o'clock.

—Day by day, new interpretations are being received as well as new regulations so that it is very difficult to keep posted on this program. It will facilitate matters greatly if all farmers will attend who are interested as there is considerable work to be done with signing contracts and other documents necessary. However, it will be necessary for each farmer who desires to sign to secure proof of the number of litters of pigs and the pigs sold, so as to secure the reduction base.

—Additional information will be given in regard to the processing tax which is vitally important to everyone. At the same time a brief review will be given of the past reduction programs and what the future program will be.

Please attend your nearest meeting.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Spirit" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 11.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Num. 6: 24-26): "The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and [illegible] up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

Correlative passages read from the Christinn Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p.264): "Spiritual living and blessedness are the only evidences by which we can recognize true existence and feel the unspeakable peace which comes from an all-absorbing spiritual love. When we learn the way in Christian Science and recognize man's spiritual being, we shall behold and understand God's creation,—all the glories of earth and heaven and mnn."

Light on Family Tree of King Tut-Ankh-Amen

A scarab or lucky symbol which King Tut-Ankh-Amen's grandfather gave to friends attending his wedding about 1400 B. C. is announced as the most important archeological find of the season for the Haverford college expedition to Palestine.

The scarab is carved from Egyptian limestone in the shape of a beetle and measures 3¼ inches long and 2¼ inches in width. Inscriptions on the scarab trace of the geneology of Tut-Ankh-Amen's grandmother, Queen Tnly. Scientists with the expedition believe she was a "foreigner" from Phoenicia.

Dr. Elihu Grant, director of the Haverford expedition, states: "In all probability, the scarab had been placed as a magical object, having been a treasured antique for centuries in Palestine. Several marriage scarabs have been found in Egypt, but it is full of significance to find one in Palestine." The discovery points to Egyptian control of this area which, says Doctor Grant, continues to provide many suggestions of the life in the first and second Millenola B. C.—New York Times.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"Original Leather Stocking"

"THE author has often been asked if he had any original in his mind for the character of Leather-Stocking. In a physical sense, different individuals known to the writer in early life certainly presented themselves as models through his recollections; but in a moral sense this man of the forest is purely a creation."

Thus wrote J. Fenimore Cooper in the preface to his immortal "Leather-Stocking Tales," and that statement should pretty well dispose of various historical characters whose claims to being "the original Leather-Stocking" have been advanced from time to time. One of them is Tim Murphy, the famous Morgan Rifleman and Scout of the Schoharie.

But if you would look upon a faithful likeness of the man who probably was most in Cooper's mind as he created the character "Leather-Stocking" in "The Pioneers" (the first published of the Leather-Stocking Tales) or "Deerslayer" in the book of that name, go to the town of Curoga, N. Y., and gaze upon the heroic bronze statue of Nicholas Stoner which stands looking out over Canada lake.

The son of old Henry Stoner, a pioneer settler of Broadalbin, N. Y., young Nick became a crack shot with the long rifle almost as soon as he was big enough to carry one. At the age of fifteen he enlisted in the Continental army with his father and brother and fought at Saratoga, Oriskany, in the Rhode Island campaign, was at Valley Forge and shared in the triumph at Yorktown.

Toward the close of the Revolution old Henry Stoner returned home only to be killed and scalped by the Indians and leave to his sons a heritage of hatred for the red men. After the war Nick Stoner became the most celebrated hunter and trapper in New York and his fame was spread by Simms in his book, "The Trappers of New York."

At the outbreak of the War of 1812 he married away to battle again, serving for three years, most of the time as chief of scouts for General Dodge of the New York militia. When the war was over he went back to his hunting and trapping, and his friendship with Cooper during this period adds plausibility to the theory that he was the principal "original" of Cooper's famous frontier character. Although he served in many county offices until his death in 1853, the statue which stands at Caroga is the best symbol of his place in history—as a hunter, a trapper, an Indian fighter and as nearly the personification as any man ever was of the typical frontiersman created by a great American novelist—"Leather-Stocking."

Leader of the Lost Trappers

ONE of the most romantic stories of the Old West is that of Capt. Ezekiel Williams and his "Lost Trappers." The story had its beginnings in the Lewis and Clark expedition when those two famous explorers, upon their return to St. Louis, brought with them a Mandan Indian chief, named Big White. The chief was royally entertained in St. Louis but in a short time he asked to be sent home.

An escort of 20 men was enlisted for this duty and they were placed in command of Capt. Ezekiel Williams. On April 7, 1807, they set out from St. Louis and proceeded up the Missouri until Big White was once more among the Mandans.—This duty done they could have returned to St. Louis. But Williams and his men had another idea and that was to "explore the country on the waters of the Missouri, to trap for beaver and even to penetrate and cross the Rocky mountains."

So on up into the Yellowstone country they went. There they were set upon by hostile Blackfeet and lost five of their number. Retreating southward, they fell in with the Crows, who killed five more of their number and took all of their horses.

The party, now reduced to ten men, hastened on foot toward the headwaters of the South Platte where they hoped to find a better pass through the mountains than Lewis and Clark had found. That winter and the next spring the remnant of the expedition spent near the sources of the Arkansas river and here they fell in with hostile Comanches who picked off their men, one by one, until at last only three of the original 20 were left. These three were Captain Williams, James Workman and Samuel Spencer.

By this time they had no idea of which direction to take to reach a settlement. Captain Williams was sure they were on the Red river but the other two were equally certain that they were not far from Santa Fe. So they decided to separate. Williams continued down the river and eventually reached Fort Cooper on the Missouri.

Workman and Spencer headed toward the Wind river mountains and in a short time were hopelessly lost in the wilderness. After many weeks of wandering they finally struck the Colorado river and fell in with a Mexican caravan which took them to Upper California. The following spring they went to Santa Fe, where they remained as traders for the next 15 years. History has forgotten them now but they should be remembered—as the first Americans to float upon the waters of the Rio Colorado and the first to cross the Rocky mountains south of Lewis and Clark's pass.

HUMAN "REPAIR SHOPS"

The modern hospital is a human repair shop; it is not a mere lodging for sick people. The modern hospital is a laboratory for the doctor, for here he has the use of facilities and equipment which he could never afford to own. Dr. J. H. J. Upham refers in an article in a recent issue of Hygeia, the health magazine, chiefly to these facilities for recognizing disease rather than to the well equipped operating rooms, the comfortable bedrooms and wards, and other special features of the modern hospital because he wishes to emphasize the fact that the first aim of the modern physician should be to ascertain what exactly is the matter with his patient, how much the organs are damaged and how much he can depend on the natural vital forces remaining.

Florence's Triumph

By IDA MELLON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

FLORENCE had expected to have a wonderful time when she went to visit her aunt and cousins in New York. But somehow when she arrived things were not just what she had expected them to be.

Her cousins, Dolly and Joan, had changed, for one thing. They seemed to be so anxious all the time about their various social engagements. They were anxious, too, about Florence.

"You mustn't be too nice to Dick Thomas," they told her, the night after Dick had entertained them all at dinner and the theater. "He's nice enough, of course, but he hasn't any money, and it's useless to have a man like that hanging around all the time; it keeps other men away."

"But—he must have spent a good deal," ventured their cousin from the country.

"Probably you're right, Florence," Joan answered. "But it must have taken nearly every cent he earned last week to do it. Let's see—we'll have to have him here for dinner some time soon, to pay him back for last night; let's ask him the night Peggy Frances comes, and get rid of both of them at once!"

Florence didn't like that way of doing things.

At her home in a sleepy little southern town you were friendly with people whether they had money or not.

Florence knew without being told that her cousins wanted to get married—and with them, getting married meant marrying a man who had money.

To Florence it seemed hideous, but Joan and Dolly and their mother seemed to think it was the only thing for a girl to do.

"You just have to have money," Joan told her once. "Without it life's just impossible."

One of the young men to whom Dolly was especially nice discovered that Florence was the daughter of the famous Samuel Darwin, and devoted himself to her after that. Her aunt told Florence that she ought to be delighted, that the young man was a great catch. Florence said nothing.

He gave a dinner for Florence a month after she arrived in New York, at a very smart new restaurant. It happened to be an evening when she was feeling especially homesick, when it seemed that she must pack her trunk in the morning and go straight back home. She was trying hard to pretend to enjoy herself, when, glancing up, she saw the face of the young man who was picking up the soiled dishes.

"Why—why—" she turned, in her chair, but he had gone off to the kitchen, and the next course was being served. Florence was very quiet until it was over, and the young man appeared again. Then, as he removed her plate, she laid her hand on his arm.

"You're Billy James, aren't you?" she said, in her soft, southern drawl.

"Yes—I am," he said, and his voice had that same soft drawl in it.

"Florence!" exclaimed her aunt, [illegible] "That's the bus boy!"

"I don't care," Florence answered defiantly. "I used to know him down home—and—"

He just come back for more dishes, reluctantly. She motioned him to her side.

"Billy, what are you doing here? Won't you come to see me?" she asked. "I'd really like to see you. Please?"

"Why, Florence, I—I—"

"Florence!" her aunt exclaimed again, and the young man disappeared once more. He didn't come back again.

"I haven't seen him for ages; he ran away from home," she said. "And now maybe I won't see him again. Oh—"

And suddenly the other diners in the smart restaurant were amazed to see a pretty young girl in a white and silver frock rise from her chair and hurry across the dining room, to the door of the kitchen—and rush straight through it, with the head waiter following.

"Billy!" she cried, as she caught up with him. "Why are you running away from me?"

"Because I'm a flat failure," he told her. "I said I'd come up here and make good, because I was sure I could sell that play I wrote down home. Well, I haven't sold it, and I had to earn a living somehow—you shouldn't have spoken to me!"

"Don't be silly!" Florence told him, catching hold of his arm with both hands. "I don't care what you're doing—I love you, and I always will!"

Florence's aunt scolded frantically, and tried to prevent the wedding which, nevertheless, took place the next morning. She stopped scolding only when Billy's play was accepted, a week later. Then she told her friends, as Florence had told everyone from the start, "Of course I knew that dear Billy would succeed!"

And she took credit to herself for the very pretty romance that grew out of Florence's speaking to the bus boy.

Mound Builders a Puzzle

The Smithsonian institution says that up to the present the Mound Builders have remained a mysterious people. They were unquestionably Indians, but it has been impossible to establish any relationship between them and any tribe encountered in North America by the earliest white explorers. It has been impossible to establish what became of them.

Expert Analyzes Causes of Life's Many Failures

While every normal man and woman strives to learn the secrets of success in life, how many pause to consider the causes of failure? Dr. Bernard Hollander, the psychologist, says the London Daily Mail, analyzed the reasons for failure while speaking at the London meeting of the South Place Ethical society. They ranged from sheer laziness and overweening ambition in the handicap of a bad marriage—the wife who is a millstone round her husband's neck.

"A man fails," said Doctor Hollander, "if his ideas are larger than his purse; if he trusts unworthy people; if he puts pleasure before duty and has too many or too expensive amusements; if he does not do today what he can possibly put off until tomorrow; and if he risks all his eggs in one basket when he is not in a position to watch or control it.

"Some men fail because they are given to dawdling, indecision, worrying or fretting, or have oversanguine expectations.

"A man is bound to fail if he has no sense of humor, lacks cordiality, does not know how to approach men, cannot take a rebuff good-naturedly, does not carry confidence or conviction, and when he is too long-winded in his conversation so that people tire before he gets to the point."

A good many failures in life, said Doctor Hollander, were due to overactive impulse, but the man whose animal nature was weak had no right to pose as virtuous, because temptation did not exist for him.

Success or failure in life depended also to a great extent upon the kind of partner in marriage.

"There is the nagging wife, the clinging wife, the domineering wife and the dull-witted wife who is something of a millstone round her husband's neck," he said.

"There is bound to be failure when an aggressive, masculine woman marries an effeminate youth; when an independent and courageous man marries a helpless, stupid woman; and an athletic, vigorous woman marries a dried-up bookworm.

"I have known girls to marry a man for such trivial reasons as that he dances divinely.'

"Neither society, the state, nor humanity can continue to exist without the old-fashioned wedded couple bound together by a bond of love and affection."

Determination of Sex

About thirty years ago it was discovered that sex is determined by the male cells and this because the cells are of two different sizes. One size gives rise to female and the other to male offspring. New political and social possibilities were envisioned. Biologists began to discuss ways of separating the two sorts and thus settling beforehand whether children should be boys or girls.

Soviet science, which is particularly active and daring in biological experimentation, has announced that the two kinds of male cells have at last been separated. In animals at least, it is now possible to determine exactly what the sex of progeny will be. So said Prof. Julian Huxley recently in an address that he delivered in London. But, cautious biologist that he is, he wants confirmation before he believes it.—New York Times.

Make this lip test

LOOK at them . . . and your cheeks, too, without make-up. Do they possess the natural glow of health, which comes from a sufficiency of rich, red blood? If they do, make-up is simple . . . If they don't read on . . . you may find one of the reasons why your skin is not clear and rosy.

You cannot have red lips, rosy cheeks, energy and cheerfulness if your blood is in a run-down condition. Lack of hemo-glo-bin, the red coloring of the blood, may also indicate a weakened condition of the body . . . loss of strength . . . poor appetite.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in restoring a low hemo-glo-bin content. If your condition suggests a blood tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite . . . your color and skin should improve with increased strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes . . . the larger is more economical.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

The cost of maintaining the department of state branch offices for the issuance of license plates dropped $114,000 in the last two years, a compilation of department records shows. Salaries which are paid under legislative appropriation amounted to $180,300 for the 1921 fiscal year. For the year ending June 30, 1933, the amount had dropped to $112,801, or a reduction of $67,699.

Total disbursements of the department for the last fiscal year were $156,898 less than for the year ending June 30, 1932.

Twenty-five Michigan building and loan associations have become member of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis. They have subscribed for $737,100 worth of stock in that institution and have paid in on that stock $669,500. They have a maximum line of credit with the bank of $8,507,900. The bank has advanced to the associations $3,001,525 upon which the associations have repaid $157,265 leaving a balance of $2,844,260. There are 66 building and loan associations in Michigan doing business under the supervision of the department of state.

Archives of the department of state last week yielded an 89-year copy of the Michigan Telegraph of Kalamazoo. It is printed on a half-sheet of paper and the editor explains that he has been compelled to borrow the paper because subscribers failed to pay their subscriptions. H. R. Miller was publisher and editor.

The newspaper is dated October 3, 1845, and most of the front page is devoted to the acceptance by Stephen Vickery, of Kalamazoo of the Whig nomination for governor. The back page is devoted to the publication of the Kalamazoo county tax roll list. One of the planks in Vickery's platform was:

"I am in favor of reducing the salaries and pay of public officers, to a scale bearing some reasonable proportion to the pitiful reward of labor."

In the skating events the Livingston boys, outstanding local skaters, won several places. Archie Livingston was awarded third in the midget boys' class. In the junior boys' event Robert Livingston was the winner and he placed third in the silver trophy half mile race.

In Saturday's program of dog sled races, Robert Miles drove his dog to first place and Lyle Ross took second honors.

The many from this city attending the Petoskey carnival proclaimed this year's event the best and most successful ever held by our neighboring city.

PERE MARQUETTE TO ADD NEW EQUIPMENT

Orders Much Old Rolling Stock Dismantled in New Program

Included in the indications of returning prosperity is an order received by Pere Marquette officials to dismantle a lot of their old and antiquated rolling stock, an order which means work for many people.

The order calls for the scrapping of 950 old freight cars, 100 passenger coaches, 70 locomotives, one steamship and many cabooses.

This order is a part of an elaborate rehabilitation plan for railroads of the nation in an effort to create work, not only directly but indirectly. A major portion of the scrapped rolling stock on the Pere Marquette will be replaced with new equipment, thus creating jobs in the manufacture of the equipment and adding to the safety of operation.

BAPTIST CHURCH
W. H. Rauch, Pastor

An old writer has said, "There is nothing new under the sun." How much truth there is in the saying you may judge; nevertheless, in the realm of religion, as in every other sphere of life, there are many people ever ready for something new or different no matter how false it may be. The words of Mr. Barnum apply to religious cults as well as to circuses, when he says, "The American people like to be hum-bugged. The greater the hum-bug the larger the following."

"As a church of the LORD Jesus Christ we are not so interested in that which is new, as we are in that which is true. We love the truth of God's word; "That which was, and is, and is to come." The same yesterday, today and forevermore." "Not one jot or title shall pass away until all shall be fulfilled."

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Due to the highly gratifying success of the recent drive for 1934 membership in the American Legion staged by the local post, another drive under the leadership of Comrades Albert Taylor and Paul Kullander will start at once.

The number of eligible ex-servicemen and ex-Legionnaires yet to be secured as members is about forty and there is not a particle of reason why the local post should not reach and even exceed the high-water-mark of 100 members. The post already leads the lower 11th district in membership, with 70 members.

At the regular meeting, Tuesday evening, the post members approved a plan to furnish a light lunch with coffee on regular meeting nights for the balance of the winter. Together with certain contemplated changes in the dug-out, future meetings should offer a maximum of comfort and enjoyment to the attending members.

Entering the new year with a strong membership, as an incorporated post under the laws of the state of Michigan and with a five-year lease on their quarters, practically out of debt and with a solidarity of feeling among the members unparalleled in the history of the organization, Leslie T. Shapton post faces the future with a justified confidence.

Years ago when Saginaw was the headquarters of the lumbering industry of Michigan, the center of the big pines was in the Pine River, only four miles away. It was along this river that the mammoth pine grew, and if you ask a woodsman where he was going the answer would be "The Bend of the Cass," where Bridgeport is now located. One of the largest white pine trees ever cut in Michigan stood on the banks of the Cass river near Saginaw. When it was felled in the winter of 1856, six huge logs without a flaw were cut from the trunk. Four logs were 12 feet long, one 14 and the other 16 feet. The top diameter of the top log was 45 inches and the base of the but log 60 inches. This was not much taper for a 78 foot trunk and gives some idea of size and symmetry of the old Michigan Cork pine.—Cheboygan Tribune.

SUPERVISORS MEET HERE NEXT TUESDAY

Special Session Called to Consider Court House, Other Matters

The Charlevoix county board of supervisors will be called into special session at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, February 20, County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow announced Wednesday.

The matters of depository and treasurer's bonds will be brought up for disposal, but primarily the meeting is called for the purpose of obtaining final action of the supervisors on the proposal to submit a new court house project to the CWA for approval.

A committee appointed by the board two months ago to obtain plans, estimates, etc., for the project, has completed its work, and is now prepared to make a final report. William Kuhni of Detroit, retained as architect, has completed plans. The county road commission voted Monday to group road projects with the court house project in order to increase the ratio of labor and material; and the Charlevoix city council Mondoy night voted $5,000 as the city's contribution.

Approval of the board of supervisors is necessary before the project can be submitted to the CWA.

Following an expressed desire of William M. Sanderson, chairman of the board, Tuesday's meeting will be open to the public, thus affording all interested an opportunity to express their views concerning the desirability or otherwise of the project.

Tragedy of Long Ago Revealed by Accident

Geologists in a newly found cave in a limestone quarry at Bishop Middleham, Durham, England, have pieced together the astonishing story of a family which perished there 400 years before Christ. There were eight people in the family, and they all used the cave as their home. The men stood well over 6 feet high. The family's milk probably came from cattle and goats, the remains of which were found near the cave. There were badgers and wolves in profusion for the men to hunt with fine bone spears. The "kitchen" was at the back of the cave. Marks of smoke on the stone show where the fire had been. The family lived happily, but they died together in the cave which had been their home. The roof collapsed without warning, and for 2,300 years their bones lay under the stone. The cave was hidden until a modern quarryman fired a shot, which revealed the entrance to it.

FORMER LOCAL MAIL CARRIER IS RETIRED

Fred A. Butler Concludes 30 Years Service at Clearwater, Florida

A communication comes from Clearwater, Fla., telling of the retirement from the U. S. postal service of Fred A. Butler, formerly carrier on old route 4 in Charlevoix and for the past 13 years in Florida. An article from a Clearwater newspaper heralding the event, is reproduced as follows:

"F. A. Butler, who retired yesterday (January 31st) after 30 years of service as a rural mail carrier, was honored last night at a dinner party given by the Clearwater postoffice staff at the Phoenix hotel.

"Mr. Butler has served for the last 13 years as carrier on route 2, Clearwater. He started in the postal service back in 1904, as a rural carrier at Charlevoix, Mich.

"'I have carried the mail about 297,000 miles, or a distance of twelve times around the earth,' he estimated. 'When I started in the service it was in the days before good roads. I used a horse and buggy, drove 12 to 16 hours to cover my route, and was paid a salary of $600 a year. I think that now I will enjoy being a "tin can tourist" for a while.'

Mr. and Mrs. Butler plan to leave their home in the early summer for a trip through the New England states and to visit relatives in the middle west. Mr. Butler, who for several years has held the office of secretary of the Florida Association of Rural Letter Carriers, plans to attend the meeting of the national association at Denver next August. He and Mrs. Butler expect to spend next winter in southern California and return to Clearwater the following year.

L. R. Smith, superintendent of mails, (formerly assistant postmaster here) acted as toastmaster at the dinner. A varied program was given. The dinner was concluded with the presentation of a portable radio set to Mr. Butler by the postal force.

PLANS MADE FOR 1934 MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Each Woman Asked to Secure One New Member in Drive

At the monthly meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held last Friday with Mrs. G. R. Parker, plans were made for the 1934 membership campaign, carrying out suggestions outlined by the leader, Mrs. A. J. Usher. The campaign will close May 13th, Mother's day.

Each woman is asked to secure a new member the same age she was when she joined the Union. Every woman who secures six new members will receive special recognition at the district state and national conventions. The responsibility of the local campaign is to devolve on the leaders of the four groups.

The president, Mrs. Wm. Palmer, has already secured her "six" by helping to organize a new union of sixteen members at Petoskey. Women everywhere are realizing the need of teaching the principles of total abstinence to the young and there is a prospect of many new unions.

The W. C. T. U. is acknowledged to be the only dry organization carrying on temperance education in local communities and it should have the support of the women of every church.

Group 3 announced a "guest tea" on Friday, March 2, with Mrs. Geo. Brown. Everyone is invited to bring a friend who is not a member.

Mrs. Hamilton, director of citizenship, gave some information about the primaries and listed the candidates seeking nomination March 6th.

STRAITS WINTER TRAFFIC SHOWS INCREASE

Railroad Ferry Reports Greater Number Vehicles Carried

Vehicular traffic across the Straits of Mackinac continues at an upward trend this season, as indicated by the report that 117 more cars crossed during January, 1934, than during the similar period last year.

For January, 1934, there was a total of 1,599 cars transported across the Straits on the Chief Wawatam, railway ferry, according to figures from the state ferry dock office at St. Ignace. Of this number 89 were trucks, 19 were trailers and 10 were buses.

Last year the total for the month of January was 1,482, with 63 trucks, nine trailers and no buses.

This affair, following closely the successful previous parties, is under auspices of the Hospital Auxiliary, with Mrs. James Krulik as chairman. All proceeds are given to the hospital.

The last party drew a large attendance of local and out-of-town people and the sponsors anticipate similar support Monday night for this very worthy cause.

STATE RANKS HIGH ON ALFALFA ACRES

Increase in Michigan Puts Feed in Barns and Fertility in Fields

Michigan is now in the big time as far as alfalfa is concerned; the latest figures on the crop show this state stands in second place in acreage in the United States, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State college.

This is an instance of the swift changes in farming practices which sometimes occur. Michigan grew less than 100,000 acres of alfalfa in 1919 and increased the amount to 874,000 acres in 1933. Most of the increase was planted on land which otherwise would have been sown to ordinary clover or to timothy.

The great increase in the amount of hay grown has not resulted in a corresponding increase in the amount of livestock in the state. However, the livestock is much better and is more economically fed than it could be with the other types of hay.

COUNTY CLERK AGAIN GETS HEAD TAX RULE

All Over 21 Must Pay $2 Before March 1st Deadline

Persons in Charlevoix county as in the rest of the state, above the age of 21 and not residents of state and municipal institutions must pay the $2 head tax for the old age pension fund by March 1.

Failing they run the chance of being fined $100 or sent to the county jail for 90 days.

Notice to that effect again was received last week by County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow from Ed. L. Williams, chief of the old age pension bureau at Lansing.

County Treasurer Lillis Flanders reports that to date she has collected $52 in her office and that two townships have reported collections of $18, or a total of $70.

AT THE MOVIES

"White Woman" Stirring Story of Wild Malay

One woman among slinking, treacherous Malay natives and ruthless, woman-starved white men.

That's the spot in which Carole Lombard, motion picture actress, finds herself in "White Woman," the new Paramount picture, coming on Saturday and Sunday to the Palace theatre.

Shunned by society, the victim of malicious gossip, Carole seeks a livelihood as entertainer in a questionable Malay dive. Coveted by Laughton, coarse overlord of the natives, she accompanies him to the old houseboat, far in the jungle, which is his home and trading post.

Thrown into this "last stop from hell" the only white woman in a rendezvous of broken renegades, chained to the brutal rules, nevertheless, fights with all her womanly instinct to redeem Kent Taylor, young, handsome member of Laughton's band.

And the strange romance between this lone, white woman and the man who has lost his soul in this legion of the damned, furnishes the substance of the story.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 39. NUMBER 8. EIGHT PAGES THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1934 PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

CWA CURTAILMENT STARTS FEB. 23RD

MEN TO BE PICKED FROM RURAL AREAS

Prevailing Local Wage Scale to Be Followed With Minimum Set at Thirty Cents An Hour

Charlevoix county's quota of men employed on CWA projects was cut from 635 to 565 Tuesday, on orders from Fred R. Johnson, state CWA administrator, as a part of the national demobilization of the CWA army.

The order, effective Friday, February 23rd, further stated the men to be dropped first would be those needing work the least as in cases where another member of the family is working or where the worker has other resources. Hours of work remain the same as at present.

Effective on March 2, wages paid employes will be the prevailing scale for the kind of work in the community, but in no case less than 30 cents per hour. Needy women will receive equal consideration with needy men.

Work on all county CWA projects was suspended temporarily Wednesday night until reorganization under the new regulations is completed. It is expected work will be resumed in a few days.

Industrial cities will escape effects of the civil works demobilization program at least until the end of March, according to Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

Hopkins said 400,000 persons employed on civil works projects in rural areas would be discharged as of February 23, in preparation to bring the CWA to a close by May 1.

"It is our intention," Hopkins said, "to begin our demobilization in rural areas starting next Friday with about 400,000 persons. The rate of decrease later will be adjusted to weather and climatic conditions and will be accelerated with the beginning of spring and completed by the week ending May 1."

The administrator emphasized that the civic works program has been established on an emergency basis to aid destitute unemployed through the winter months.

"I believe we have accomplished this purpose," said Hopkins. He indicated that the administration was cognizant of future privation and would do its utmost to relieve it.

"It is our intention to maintain CWA at its present strength in all industrial cities through this winter, Hopkins said.

A "fair assumption," he observed, is that the end of the winter may be interpreted as the end of March.

The administration intends, Hopkins said, to develop on a substantial scale certain projects which can be completed by May 1.

"These projects," he announced, "is the rebuilding, the extension and the construction of new consolidated rural schools in states that have no consolidated school system.

About "10 or 12 states" will benefit under the school construction program, it was said.

The hours of work for the present, it was revealed, will remain at 24 per week in cities and 15 in rural areas.

Hopkins said that serious thought was being given to "long time planning" benefiting needy unemployed. He observed that after May 1, "we'll take on everyone on relief who is in need."

Hopkins estimated that to continue CWA to May 1, between $350,000,000 and $450,000,000 will be required. The money was made available by President Roosevelt signing the CWA bill.

State CWA administrators will be provided with schedules showing exactly how much money may be spent on materials.

POPULAR CHARLEVOIX GIRL MARRIED MONDAY

Miss Marian Smith Married at Ann Arbor to Getchel Campfield

Coming as surprise to her many local friends is the announcement of the marriage on Monday, February 19, at Ann Arbor, of Miss Marian F. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Smith, to Getchel Campfield of Detroit.

The bride, a member of the Charlevoix high school graduating class of 1932, is a popular member of the younger social set. She has been a student at Ypsilanti normal college.

The young couple, who will reside in Detroit, will have the best wishes of a host of local friends.

GRAYLING TEAM FAIL TO KEEP ENGAGEMENT

Meet Traverse Elks in Final Home Game Next Tuesday

A large crowd of local basketball fans were refunded their admission and sent home disappointed Tuesday night when the Grayling Lumber Jacks failed to appear for their engagement with the Polar Bears.

The situation was an embarrassing one for the Polar Bear management, inasmuch as the Grayling outfit did not even as much as send notification of their intention to cancel the engagement.

The Polar Bears will complete their home schedule next Tuesday evening, February 27th, when they meet the Traverse City Elks at the high school gymnasium. This contest should be the best home game of the season. The Traverse City team, claimants to the Northern Michigan independent title, have a long record of victories to support their contention. The Polar Bears have yet to be defeated by a regional team on their own floor and for this reason the contest should be a real one.

The Polar Bears have two other games away from home. They play at Manistee on Thursday evening of this week and at Traverse City on March 6th.

KIPMEN NOW LEAD CONFERENCE RACE

DEFEATED HARBOR HERE FRIDAY 20 TO 12

Meet East Jordan Here This Week in Contest Concluding Pre-Tournament Schedule

Charlevoix trounced Harbor Springs for the second time here Friday night to earn a clear leadership in the Tip of Michigan class C basketball conference. The victory, by a 20 to 12 margin, was their fifth in class C competition and eighth in ten games.

The Kipmen, displaying a smooth functioning offense and almost air-tight defense piled up an 8 and 2 margin in the first period. Although closely pressed in the second quarter they weathered the period with a 10 to 7 lead at the half and from then on gradually increased their advantage to win handily. The potency of Charlevoix's defense was clearly indicated in the last two quarters when Harbor was limited to a pair of long range goals and a single free toss.

The contest was a fine exhibition between two good teams. Charlevoix's superiority came through a greater alertness to take advantage of "breaks," a quick breaking offense which gave them repeated close-in shots and a defense that stopped the visitors flat-footed.

Potter, forward, was the key man in Charlevoix's attack. He accounted for 10 of his team's points, Lane was best for Harbor with 4.

Moran of Traverse City, refereed the game.

The score by quarters:

Charlevoix	8	2	6	4—20
Harbor	2	5	1	4—12

The line-up:

Charlevoix—	FG	FT	PF
Potter, f	4	2	1
Pearl, f	1	0	1
Ance, c	1	2	3
Foster, g	1	2	1
	7	6	6

Harbor—	FG	FT	PF
McIntosh, f	1	0	1
Lane, f	2	0	1
Smith, g	0	0	0
Vivant, g	1	1	1
	4	4	6

Charlevoix's reserves started the victory march when they defeated the Harbor seconds 11 to 8 in the preliminary.

Close Schedule Friday

Charlevoix closes their pre-tournament schedule Friday night against East Jordan on the local court. They must win this contest to keep their conference leadership and, in view of their 18 to 5 victory over Jordan two weeks ago, should do this handily.

LEGISLATURE IN SPECIAL SESSION

GOVERNOR ASKS ENACTMENT OF HUGE PROGRAM

Cut In Weight Tax, Constitutional Convention in 1936, Election Reforms Are Included

Governor Comstock opened the door for the consideration of more than a score of subjects, many of them highly controversial, as the Michigan legislature convened Monday for its second extraordinary session.

Meanwhile Rep. Phil Puck, (R), Ann Arbor, and Rep. Elmer McDonald, (R), Port Hope, circulated a petition among legislators in which signers agreed they would refuse to remain in session after March 16. Puck and McDonald said they had a number of signatures, and that members of both houses were "irked" at the prospect of another long stay in Lansing.

Speaker Martin Bradley, chairman of the legislative council, ordered all committees to start work early Tuesday and to report progress daily. About 25 bills will be introduced in the house and senate covering most of the subjects touched on in the governor's message, he said.

In a message delivered to a joint meeting of the house and senate, urged the following measures among others:

Reconsideration of the $30,000,000 insurrection bond bill.

A law to let municipalities issue revenue bonds for public works without a vote of the people.

Utility Plants Bill

An act to let local governing bodies issue bonds to acquire or build municipal utility plants.

Reduce the automobile weight tax on passenger cars from 55 to 35 cents a hundredweight.

Permit the payment of 1932 as well as prior year delinquent taxes in ten annual installments starting in 1935.

A constitutional convention in 1936.

A constitutional amendment to abolish the uniform tax rate and pave the way for a possible graduated tax or other new sources of revenue.

Election Reforms

Election reforms to compel weekly reports of campaign expenditures and pre-primary conventions.

An appropriation of $100,000 to advertise Michigan as a tourist and resort state.

FURNACE EXPLOSION CAUSES BIG DAMAGE

Fred Christainsen Hurt Saturday at Dr. George King Residence

Fred Christainsen, janitor at the home of Dr. George King, was slightly injured Saturday afternoon when a hot air furnace in the home exploded from some unknown cause.

The furnace was blown into hundreds of pieces causing considerable damage. Christainsen, who was removing ashes from the furnace when the explosion occurred, fortunately was not seriously hurt.

Local plumbers called for an investigation were unable to ascertain the cause of the explosion.

FARMERS GIVEN TAX EXEMPTION

SEVERAL ITEMS ARE REMOVED FROM SALES LEVY

Feed Bought for Poultry and Livestock Included in Items Now Ruled Not Taxable

Michigan farmers have succeeded in winning one-half of their prolonged battle for exemptions from the state's three per cent sales tax.

The state board of tax administration last Thursday announced it had agreed to exempt feeds to be fed to livestock and poultry to be resold for marketing purposes. If the produce purchased by farmers is to be fed for productive purposes it is not exempted, however.

The board's action in excluding farmers in this respect met with the approval of the Michigan State Grange. James E. Mogan, managing director of the tax group, said. C. H. Bramble, master of the Grange, characterized the exemptions as "satisfactory as far as they go."

The Grange and other agricultural organizations have been leading a fight since the sales tax act went into effect to have farmers exempted from the levy on seeds, feeds and implements. Manufacturers have also been active to secure exemptions on raw materials purchased which are a component part of the finished product.

In another new ruling, the board said that sales of eggs to hatcheries are not taxable when the hatchery sells all of the fowls hatched therefrom. If the fowls are retained by the hatchery, however, the eggs are subject to the tax. But when the hatchery sells the male birds and culls the females, the tax applies to 50 per cent of the eggs sold to the hatcher.

If baby chicks are sold for the purpose of resale, the tax does not apply. The tax does apply, however, to the sale of pullets which are to be kept by the buyer for laying purposes. If the purchaser in buying chicks from a hatchery signifies his intention of culling the male fowls for resale then he is compelled to pay tax on only one-half of the purchase price.

The board ruled that the sale of electrotypes, sterotype, photo engravings, wood engravings and matrices to any person who does not resell them but uses them in the process of producing printed matter are

SPECIAL SUPERVISOR MEETING CALLED OFF

Little Hope Held for Court House Project Approval by CWA

Due to the uncertainty of continuance of the CWA program, a special meeting of the Charlevoix county board of supervisors, called for Tuesday, has been indefinitely postponed.

County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow announced the change in plans last Thursday following receipt of advice from Lansing. While the supervisors would have taken up other matters during the session, the meeting was primarily called for approval of the county court house project.

In view of disapproval by the state CWA of the Oceana court house plan for the reason the project could not be completed within the contemplated life of the CWA, little hope is held for approval of the local project.

If Washington Returned Today

POLL TAX DEADLINE NEAR, ONLY FEW PAY

Collection of $499 Out of Possible $14,120 Is Reported

Close approach of March 1st, the dead line for payment of the old age pension poll tax, is bringing increased conjecture as to the ultimate outcome of the legislation.

Charlevoix county, which according to the 1930 census had 6,737 persons subject to the poll tax, has registrations up to the present time of 7,560 or 112%, which is above the state average and indicative of an increase in population in the last four years. However, with the dead line for payment only eight days distant, only $499 out of a possible $14,120 has been collected.

Up to Wednesday of this week $106 has been collected by the county treasurer, $20 by the city treasurer, $28 turned in by two townships. Boyne City reports collections of $225 and East Jordan $120. Other townships have not reported to the county treasurer.

At the present rate it is doubtful if even half of those subject to the tax will pay. Those who fail run the chance of being fined $100 or sent to the county jail for 90 days. What the county will do with several thousand prisoners is something to figure out.

CWA BENEFITS RURAL SCHOOLS

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Thirty-Eight of Forty-Two Schools Have Approved Projects—Seven Have Been Completed

Perhaps the most extensive project undertaken in Charlevoix county under the CWA has been the county rural school and sanitation program.

This work, administered by Dr. A. R. Renwick, district supervisor of four northern Michigan counties, and D. T. McHugh, county supervisor, has provided Charlevoix county rural schools a program of improvements beyond the financial means of the average school district. Dr. Carleton Dean, district health officer, has rendered invaluable service in an advisory capacity.

Thirty-eight of the forty-two rural schools of Charlevoix county have approved projects. Seven of this number, Murray school in Hayes township; Clarion, Hectric, Walloon and Curfew schools in Melrose township; Deer Lake and Slaughter schools in Wilson township, have been completed and may have supplementary work now that the original projects are finished. The others are under way and projects have been applied for on the four schools not included in the original set-up.

The type of improvements included are new foundations, new roofs, changing lighting system to conform with standard schools, heating and ventilating, plastering, interior and exterior painting and all other necessary repairs. Other improvements directly under sanitation include outdoor privies, septic systems and sewage disposal, new wells and repairs. The above items indicate the extensiveness of the program of improvements.

While these projects have been under way the various schools have taken up quarters in grange and town halls, churches, etc., in order that the educational program would not be interrupted. Many of the projects not completed are nearly finished and others will be finished in a reasonable time.

The sanitation program for private homes, directed by those in charge of the school program, has been delayed for the present time due to a new ruling which provides that no federal projects be undertaken that are not on public property. Local officials hope this program will be continued, however.

WINTER CARNIVAL PROGRAM SATURDAY

CULMINATES 'TRADE AT HOME' CAMPAIGN

Dog Sled and Skating Races, Ski and Skating Exhibitions Included in Day's Activities

(By F. V. Tyler.)

Weather permitting, Charlevoix's one-day winter sports carnival, which will take place next Saturday, should recall memories of our first entrance into this activity some years ago. If any of the former participants still possess intact their Joseph's-coats-of-many-colors that they displayed on that occasion, now is the time to take them out of the moth ball and dust them off.

Handbills announcing the event are already off the press and will be given the proper distribution in Petoskey, Boyne City and East Jordan. According to the final program, the dog races will be held from 10 to 12 a. m. This should prove an especially interesting feature, owing to the quickly developed animosities between the canine contestants. These race will be held on Bridge street.

From 1:00 to 3:00 p. m., the attention of the crowd will be called to the municipal rink on Mason and Clinton streets where the skating contests will be held. One thing it might be well to mention here, as it is not stated on the handbills—fancy skaters from Petoskey will do their stunts on the rink at 7:00 p. m., one hour before the program at the gymnasium commences.

At 3:30 p. m. occur the skiing contests at Mount McSauba. They will be held promptly at the time designated and will include exhibition jumping by ski riders from Charlevoix, Petoskey and other nearby towns. Fred Hardy of Charlevoix, and Louis Kleinhenz of Petoskey, who have tied each other for the last two years for the district championship, and Paul Hufford, Petoskey runner-up, who finished third in the last contests are expected to be the headliners. These contests will be judged by the National Ski Association rules, under the auspices of the Charlevoix Ski club, and the final event will be the far jump. There should be action, spills and thrills and everyone should try and get out there by 3:30 p. m., so as not to miss anything.

At night, the center of interest will be transfered to the municipal rink and to the gymnasium, where the fancy skating at 7:00 p. m. will precede the distribution of merchants prizes and the grand prize at 8:00 p. m. sharp, followed by the dancing which should commence at about 9:00 p. m. The Charlevoix city band will be on hand at the gym at 7:30 p. m. to entertain the crowd.

Just a word here with respect to the merchants' prizes. The giving out of carnival coupons by the merchants will stop promptly at noon on Saturday, February 24th, the day of the carnival, in order to give the committee in charge a chance to check up the unused portions of the merchants' ticket rolls and determine the last numbered coupon given out by each.

Each person in possession of coupons given out by the merchants should list those tickets in numerical order on a piece of paper before coming to the gymnasium to avoid confusion for themselves and insure accuracy in the distribution of the prizes. Hold on to these coupons at all times. One does not have to turn them in. But be sure you know what all your numbers are. Remember, you do not have to be at the gym in person in order to win a prize.

CHERRY CROP INJURED BY LOW TEMPERATURES

Chief Damage to Trees Set Back by Drouth Last Summer

A definite injury to the cherry orchards of the region followed the recent record cold wave, cherry growers state after having time to check up on buds.

They are reluctant to state how great the injury is but are unanimous in saying this year's crop will be curtailed by the cold weather.

The peach crop, what is left of it in the Grand Traverse region, was undoubtedly wiped out by the freeze. Chief damage is believed to have occurred in trees which were set back by dry weather last summer. These trees lost considerable fruit bearing wood through the drouth.

SOUTH BARNARD

These Sunday blizzards certainly are a testing time for the farmers who wend their way to the services in the Reformed church of South Barnard. Ahout forty persons refused to let the wintry elements—much snow and a biting wind—interfere with their attending divine services. The weather seemed to "pep" them up, for how they did enter into the singing of hymns during the service. While the wind was howling outside there was a warm, genial spirit present within. The interest shown this winter gives promise of a packed church in the warmer months.

Instead of meeting in sections for the study of Christian doctrines, all will meet at the home of Mr and Mrs. Edward Boss on Wednesday evening of this week at 7:30 o'clock. The pastor is teaching the class. All interested in such a course of study are cordially invited to attend.

The boys say that the weather was lovely during their whole visit and that their relatives entertained them royally. They also tell us that even Ford cars refuse to run without gas and especially while going up the hills near Cadillac. Hereafter, they inform us, they will keep the tank well supplied with motive power.

Sees Great Reduction in Infant Mortality

Half of the babies born in the future will live to be at least seventy-five years old, Dr. Louis I. Dublin, life insurance statistician, recently predicted. This means adding ten full years to the present life expectation. Part of this will be accomplished by further reduction of infant mortality.

"But more important is the real possibility of reducing the unnecessarily high mortality of persons in the middle ranges of life," Doctor Dublin said. "The present mortality of persons between fifty and sixty-five years of age can be reduced by at least 30 per cent through the application of known principles to personal hygiene. There is every reason to believe that this will be accomplished in the course of the next generation during which time emphasis will be placed more and more on what the individual can do for himself in leading a hygienic life."

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A Modern Knight Errant

WHEN the city of Prescott, Ariz., decided to erect a memorial to the Rough Rider who went from Arizona to Cuba in the Spanish-American war, there was more than one reason why that monument should be an equestrian statue of Bucky O'Neill. For in the words of one historian "O'Neill was the most many-sided man Arizona has ever produced. A knight-errant of the Nineteenth century, he was always ready to couch a lance for the weak and the distressed. A child's appeal, a woman's tears, disarmed him at once. Yet when the occasion came he could be hard and cold as chilled steel."

O'Neill's was a fighting heritage, for his father was a captain in the celebrated "Irish Brigade" from Pennsylvania during the Civil war. After graduation from college in 1879 Bucky went to Phoenix, Ariz., and started in newspaper work. Then he practiced law, got into politics and eventually became sheriff of Yavapai county and in that office repeatedly proved the "cold, chilled steel" quality of his courage in dealing with the various types of bad men who infested the territory.

That territory wanted to become a state. So when the Spanish-American war broke out Bucky was one of those who thought that Arizona might win statehood if her men proved themselves worthy in battle. "Who wouldn't gamble for a star?" he said, as he signed up to fight, and he meant another star in the flag, that of Arizona. He was one of the first, if not the first, volunteer mustered into service. Later he became a captain in the Arizona troop of Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

At Las Guasimas O'Neill stood looking down at the body of a dead Rough Rider that had been found by the vultures before his comrades could get to him. "Colonel, isn't it Whitman who says of the vultures that 'they pluck the eyes of princes and tear the flesh of kings'?" he asked Roosevelt, who writes of the incident: "I answered that I could not place the quotation. Just a week afterward we were shielding his own body from these birds."

That came on the banks of the San Juan river during the advance against Santiago. Bucky was strolling up and down in front of his men, coolly smoking a cigarette and apparently oblivious of the Spanish bullets singing around him. A sergeant begged him to lie down lest he be hit. With a laugh, O'Neill replied "Sergeant, the Spanish bullet isn't made that will kill me!" The next moment a bullet did strike him and, in the words of Roosevelt, "even before he fell his wild and gallant soul had gone out into the darkness."

The Five Fighting Zanes

WHEN it came time for old William Zane to die, he could take pride in the fact that he had given [illegible] history five stalwart sons who would make the name of Zane forever famous there. They were:

Col. Ebenezer Zane, founder in 1770 of the settlement which was to become the present Wheeling, W. Va.; a soldier in Lord Dunmore's war of 1774; builder and commander of Fort Henry, the scene of two famous Indian sieges—in 1777 and 1782; an early settler in Ohio on the present site of Zanesville; blazer in 1796 of "Zane's Trace," which followed the route of an old Indian trail from Wheeling to Limestone (opposite Maysville, Ky.) and over which poured a flood of settlers into Ohio and Kentucky; a colonel of militia and a leader of men down to the day of his death in 1811.

Isaac Zane, captured by the Wyandots at the age of nine; a "white Indian" for ten years as the adopted son of Chief Tarhe; then, returning to his own people, a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses; back again to the Wyandots to become the husband of Myeerah, the "White Crane," daughter of Chief Tarhe, and to take her with him into the Ohio country to establish the settlement which now is Zanesfield and there to live with her until his death in 1816.

Silas Zane, one of the first settlers near Wheeling; a captain of Virginia troops in the Continental army while the Indians were besieging his brother's fort in 1777 but present there during the siege of 1782; a trader in the Indian country after the Revolution and, about 1785, a victim to Indian treachery on the Scioto river.

Jonathan Zane, captured at the age of two by the same Indians who carried off his brother, Isaac, he lived with them only a short time before being returned to his own people; a stalwart fighter during the stirring events around Fort Henry; a pioneer into Ohio and the partner of his brother in marking "Zane's Trace."

Andrew Zane, an early settler at Wheeling; hero of a famous exploit during the siege of 1777 when he escaped from the Indians by jumping over a 70-foot cliff, only to be killed by them a short time later.

"The Fighting Zanes"! Only five of them? No! For there was another—a sister worthy of her brothers—Betty Zane, the girl whose swift feet brought the much-needed powder from Ebenezer Zane's cabin to the hard-pressed defenders of Fort Henry during the siege of 1782 and whose brave defiance of death that day did much to make the name of Zane forever famous.

AN INFERENCE

During a history lesson the teacher pointed out to the class that a surname often indicated the trade of the ancestors of those who bore the name. He gave the obviously simple examples of Smith, Taylor, Baker, and others.

Without Invitation

By GRANT MILTON SASSAMAN

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

LOIS DEERING wheeled from the window and turned startled, unbelieving eyes upon her mother who was standing in the doorway of the bedroom. From below stairs came the subdued noise of a party—Lois' birthday party.

The young girl at the window tossed her dark head angrily.

"What does he want here?" she flamed. "Everybody knows he wasn't invited. If I were Cliff Chalmers I'd be ashamed to be seen in a crowd that knew me. If he came here to offer me a present—a—a—peace offering, I'll throw it in his face!"

The older woman's eyes were troubled. "I told him you wouldn't want to see him, Lois," she said gently. "He insisted, and said he came only to apologize."

The girl looked sharply at her mother. "You want me to go down and see him?"

"We—ll, you might, Lois," she said slowly. "It's only fair. I think it would please Paul."

Lois bit her lip. Yes, to be sure, her brother would want her to be a good sport. Paul and Cliff had been classmates at college. Lois idolized her brother, and he in turn thought a lot of Cliff. She hadn't seen Paul smile much since the night she had had that ugly affair with Cliff Chalmers. Which one did Paul blame?

The girl's face flushed hotly at the recollection of that night. Down deep in her heart she knew she had goaded Cliff on. For two years she had wanted Cliff Chalmers. Intuition had told her, at that country club party the other night, that she might at last have him.

When he helped her into the roadster at the end of the dance, she had seen something more than friendly interest in his dark eyes. He had finally realized that she was grown up, and beautiful.

But she had overdone it, somehow. Lois admitted that to herself. She should have stopped at two highballs. She didn't like them anyhow. Cliff's lips had tightened into a thin line of disapproval when he noticed her unsteadiness. She was the one, too, who had suggested the lonely road—and finally, that they stop the car in that stretch of woods.

Some wild, inexplicable impulse had taken hold of her that night; an irresistible urge to show Cliff Chalmers she was mature, sophisticated, and not a naive little thing to be treated with brotherly solicitousness. She had baited Cliff.

Then she had felt his arms around her, and his breath was hot upon her lips. There had been something brutal in his vehemence, but his voice was hoarse, strangled, as he said: "All right, Lois, if that's the kind you are. . . ."

She had wrenched loose, furious now and chastened. She had jumped from the machine and had run down the road, hating herself and hating Cliff. She had hid behind a large [illegible] frenziedly, had searched for almost an hour without discovering her hiding place.

Cliff had gone to her home, then, and had told her brother and her parents. Her father had notified the police, and it had to be they who found her sobbing along the roadside at daybreak.

Lois' father had been furious, but Paul had looked searchingly at her, then patted her shoulder. But he had said nothing.

Lois' anger, as she started down the stairway, was the incandescent, unreasoning anger of the humiliate.

Halfway down the stairs Lois saw Cliff. He stood in the doorway of the vestibule, straight and tall, his hat in his hand. His face was pale and drawn, but his eyes were steady.

At the first sound of her footsteps upon the stairs the music, the dancing and the forced laughter had ceased. There was no sound now but the steady assault of her heels upon the polished stairs. It occurred to Lois suddenly that she was doing something more momentous than descending a flight of steps. The thought sobered and steadied her, and in a moment the tumult of her anger was but a faintly throbbing regret.

She reached the foot of the stairs and moved towards the uninvited guest. She had to look up now. Cliff was looking down. She saw the tense rigidity of his lips, the uncompromising set of his jaw, and suddenly the girl realized why he had come. Cliff wanted to make it up to her in full. Here, under the scrutiny of all their friends, he would apologize to her. He would humiliate himself just as he had, though unwittingly, humiliated her.

Decent? Lois' heart skipped a beat and her footsteps faltered in the hallway.

And Cliff loved her! No words could make love more articulate than did the stricken look in his eyes. Whatever of anger may have survived the descent of the stairs was gone now, and in its place was a frenzied happiness. She understood now.

An impulse came over Lois to laugh, to cry, to shatter the silence with a shout of joy. She did neither. She took hold of Cliff's coat lapels, and with a savage tenderness pulled his face down to hers.

"I'm twenty years old today, Cliff," she whispered in his ear. "I—I want twenty kisses. Right now, and—and right in front of everybody."

Social Code of First Importance

Consider Hostess When New Friends Are Made, Is Imperative.

The approach to friendships is one of the things which determines our pleasure in it. Sometimes a chance happening throws people together through some incident, or possibly club affiliations through similarity of interests is the reason for meeting. What pace a friendship shall take, that is how rapidly it shall move from the attitude of acquaintances to that of intimate friends, the two persons can govern. But there is a third way of making friends that has an entirely different set of rules. When two persons meet at the home of a mutual friend, good taste dictates that they shall be followed.

An unwritten law exists in the social code which is not less important because many persons disobey it. They are criticized, and rightly, when they do. The host or hostess, under whose roof the new acquaintances meet, should be included in the first invitation given the new friend. If that host or hostess cannot be reached when an invitation is telephoned, a letter should go saying that the effort was made to reach him or her, and why. To let this information be picked up through outside sources is to break at least one link of friendship with the hostess.

There is no reason why those who meet at a social occasion[illegible] in a friend's home should, on that account, take pains to avoid each other. But the first courtesy is owed to the hostess. In fact, one might almost say, the first allegiance. When a subsequent party is arranged which deliberately precludes the first friend, especially if the one invited is a man, it can hardly be overlooked. To some it would seem that this circumstance is inconceivable. In the experience of the writer it has been met occasionally and offense given.

No course but to remain dignified is permitted the first hostess, if she is to appear at her best. Whatever her viewpoint on the matter, that is her own affair. An increase of formality, and decline of intimacy is a tactful way of indicating that one's ethics have been applied to the situation. Of course, if the expected courtesies are extended to the hostess at the outset, she will not attempt to keep her former guests from being as close friends as they may wish to be.

Figures Do Not Lie

Reid had learned to count in the age-old fashion of counting his fingers. One day he was counting them again and again and finally shook his head in bewilderment, holding up his hands for his mother to solve the difficulty.

"Well, look, as far as I can see my hands look just the same but this one has only five fingers," he said, holding up the first hand he had counted, and then thrusting up the second one, "but this one has ten!"

"PROPERTY MILKERS"

Michigan's mortgage laws have been drawn in the main with the interests of the bona fide home owner in mind, and very little objection has ever been offered to their provisions when applied solely to homesteads. However, the same law has operated in the past to cover the dealings of so-called "property milkers," and the unfortunate experiences with these and certain other classes of promoters are largely responsible for the present growing shortage of private funds available for investment in Michigan mortgages.

Owing to the heavy dockets which face the courts in the centers of population, mortgage foreclosures against large properties are frequently delayed far beyond the statutory period, and the "milkers" make it a practice to exploit such properties to the limit during long periods, paying no taxes nor any other expenses which can possibly be delayed. In this way large rentals that should have gone to satisfy the mortgage escape, and the lender is compelled to stand by and see tax and other obligations pile up which he must meet when he eventually obtains possession.

Those are some of the reasons why mortgage money is being withdrawn from Michigan. Here also is a partial explanation of the tax delinquencies which have operated to increase the tax burden on the home owner who has kept paid up. A correction of our mortgage law with proper exceptions for homesteads would benefit all legitimate interests.

THE GREAT DANGER

The great danger of paternalism lies in the fact that it must purchase support for itself with money belonging to the people. In no other way can it succeed. We have a certain place in this country, who for the sake of temporary shelter from the storms of adversity, are willing to [illegible] belonging to the people over to bureaucracy. To them self-reliance, resourcefulness, ambition, courage, vision and determination to face the stern battles of life on an individual basis is something to be freely bartered in exchange for a promise of easy existence prepared and handed down to them through governmental channels. If liberty should ever disappear from American life one of the greatest contributing causes will be found in the disposition of so many citizens to embrace this modern plan of a world in which personal responsibility has been reduced to a minimum. Past history has taught us that when public monies are exhausted paternalism begins "cracking up." It is then that nations in their bewilderment and extremity turn to a dictatorship. It will be well to remember these simple truths before it is too late.

In Event Legislature Reduces Tax, Adjustments Will Be Made

Sale of windshield ticker permits under the two-payment plan allowing legal use of 1933 plates until August 1, 1934, will start February 23, according to announcement by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald.

Under the plan motorists, upon payment of one-half of the weight tax will receive a permit which must be fastened on the lower right hand corner of the windshield. With this sticker in place, the 1933 license plates can be used. In event that the legislature reduces the annual weight tax in the next few months, proper adjustment will be made when the second half of the weight tax is paid, if authorized by the legislature, Mr. Fitzgerald announced.

INFORMATION VITAL LICENSE ISSUANCE

Branch Manager Cites Details of Value to the Public

Applicants for stickers or half-year extension of 1933 license plates must, of course, present their certificates of title, the big green or yellow sheet, as no licenses will be issued without. They should also produce their 1933 certificates of registration, as these should be returned to Lansing together with their applications for the half-year extension. If the registration cards cannot be found, the stickers can still be issued, but they should be presented if possible.

Try and have the correct change. Your rate shown on the registration certificate (the little square white slip) that you received with your plates for 1933, just under the red stamp. Half of it would be your sticker fee and the state takes the odd half cent in the case of a fee not exactly divisible by two. If you have a transfered title, see that it is correctly filled out and notarized completely before presenting. Otherwise it will be refused.

The charge for a transfer of title is $1.00 and on transfers dated prior to February 18, 1934, transfer of plates and an extra $1.00 is required. Careful attention to these details on the part of the applicant will save much time, confusion and trouble.

More thrilling than any of the long list of thrillers which have flowed from the pen of Zane Grey, "The Thundering Herd" comes to the screen of the Palace theatre Saturday and Sunday, a vivid pictorial dramatization of the famous author's most noted outdoor romance.

"The Thundering Herd" is packed with lightning-fast action, which characterizes a Zane Grey vehicle, and is acted by a Paramount cast of famous screen names.

Randolph Scott, that hard-riding hero of the outdoors; Judith Allen, the former society girl who climaxes a meteoric rise to picture heights in her performance; Noah Beery, the hated and convincing villain of screendom; Monte Blue, star of innumerable successes; Harry Carey, whose name and that of the West have been synonyms for years; Buster Crabbe, who bowed his way into Hollywood as the "Tarzan man;" Blanche Friderici, most capable woman character player of the films, and Raymond Hatton, veteran of outdoor pictures, handle the major roles in the all-star cast line-up.

DRUGS DO NOT MAKE HENS LAY MORE EGGS

Good Ancestors, Proper Feeds Correct Medicines for Egg Shortages

One sure way to reduce the profits from the poultry flock is to buy drugs or tonics for the purpose of making the hens lay more eggs, according to the poultry department at Michigan State college.

Egg production is a matter of inherited characteristics and of proper feeding. Mongrel birds are very apt to be unprofitable and hens which are compelled to forage for their living have little time to spend in filling the egg basket.

Drugs do not change the factors inherited by hens nor do they supply [illegible] elements to the possibility of [illegible] production are very remote. Dr. H. E. Moskey, U. S. department of agriculture, says positively that no known drug or combination of drugs will increase egg production.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

Drunk driving increased 45 per cent during January, 1934, as compared with January, 1933, according to records of the department of state. The information reaches the department through the financial responsibility and the motor vehicle operators' license laws.

In January of this year there were 158 persons who either pleaded guilty or were found guilty of drunk driving or 52 more than in January of the year previous.

Since the financial responsibility law became effective last October 17, a total of 659 motorists have been found guilty of some major traffic violation and have come under the provisions of the act. Of this number but 49 have been able to show proof of financial responsibility as demanded by the law.

Several new political parties will be found upon the November, 1934, ballot, according to information reaching the department of state. The Progressive-Fusionist and the Peoples Progressive, parties and the Commonwealth party, which is to replace the Prohibition party, already have qualified for places on the ballot. A new Farmer-Labor party to replace the one already qualified is being formed and members of the United party are planning to qualify within a few weeks.

The Startling End of a Whoopee Party

An article, in The American Weekly with next Sunday's Detroit Times, will disclose startling facts about the sudden murder of a young girl behind a cabin in a tourist camp and tell how the probing for the bullet while the victim was still alive was bungled. Be sure to get Sunday's Detroit Times.

McGHAN RESIDENCE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Loss From Monday Fire Thought to Aggregate Three Thousand

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan McGhan on West Lincoln avenue was badly damaged by fire shortly after noon Monday.

The blaze, thought to have resulted from efforts to thaw frozen water pipes, started in the basement and worked up through partitions to the roof. The interior of the house was badly gutted by the flames and the rear portion of the upper floors particularly was completely destroyed.

With the owners absent when the fire started and some delay caused in obtaining water due to frozen street hydrants, the flames had gained considerable headway. Damage from water was also considerable.

It is estimated the loss will aggregate between $2,500 and $3,000.

Insurance will pay nt least most of loss on above fire. Check your insurance now, and order your additional insurance from Old Line Stock Insurance Companies through WALKER A. MILES AGENCY, 202 Belvedere avenue, phone 684. Household Inventory booklets free on request.—Adv. 8t1.

A. & P. SELLS BEER ON A STATE LICENSE

Temporary Permit Granted Despite Council Refusal of Sanction

Beer is being sold by the local A. & P. store on a temporary license issued by the State Liquor Control commission, in spite of the fact that the company's application for permission to sell beer has never been approved by the city council.

The sale of beer by the chain store follows court action which was started last spring. The company's application for permission to sell beer was presented to the local city council and voted down. Whereupon the company took the case into circuit court, Charlevoix, Traverse City and Elk Rapids were joint defendants.

After hearing the case Judge Parm C. Gilbert gave an opinion that the license should be granted but a short time later reopened the case for further argument which has never been held.

Mother Nature Never Failure as Physician

Nature is a great rest-giver. And nature is a great physician. In the city we become excitable and hot. We move at a headlong pace. The interruptions and collisions are many. We need a physician who can take the fever from the brow and the fret out of the heart. Nature has remedies for all who are sick.

The pessimism and cynicism of great cities are the result of continuous contact with human tragedies and miseries. Something is always going wrong; vice is always flaunting itself in one's face; crime is always being committed, some one is always suffering; some one is always dying. It is difficult to keep serene and sane in such a bedlam of a world. We need nature. She is sensible and strong. She has no vagaries, no hallucinations, no delusions. She indulges in no fads. She wastes no time in speculations or guesses. She keeps for ever an even pulse. We need her. To think of her calm face is refreshment and power.—Dr. C. C. Jefferson.

DOCTOR'S ANSWERS To Questions

Q. I am in a rundown condition due to a frequent bad cough and stomach trouble. What can I do to help this condition?

Ans.—This is not an unusual condition. You can help yourself by a diet which should include plenty of milk, fruits and vegetables. A good medicine like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which any good drug store can supply, has my greatest confidence.

"PUSHING" A RUMOR

"A Zeppelin hunted up and down the (river) Trent all through a January night in 1916, trying to locate and bomb the (munition) factory at Chilwell, near Nottingham, but without success. A rumor spread next day in true war-time fashion that Lord Chetwynd (head of the factory) had caught three German spies try ing to signal the Zeppelin with lights, and had shot them out of hand.

"He was prompt to turn it to account, so he set a policeman as sentry all day over an empty room, and at night made a laborer dig three graves on the hillside. Into these he put stones and filled them in, with a black post at the head of each. That turned the rumor into unquestioned history, and discouraged would-be spies and the unwanted curious from prying round the place."—Kansas City Times.

Make this lip test

LOOK at them . . . and your cheeks, too, without make-up. Do they possess the natural glow of health, which comes from a sufficiency of rich, red blood? If they do, make-up is simple . . . If they don't read un . . . you may find one of the reasons why your skin is not clear and rosy.

You cannot have red lips, rosy cheeks, energy and cheerfulness if your blood is in a run-down condition. Lack of hemo-glo-bin, the red coloring of the blood, may also indicate a weakened condition of the body . . . loss of strength . . . poor appetite.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in restoring a low hemo-glo-bin content. If your condition suggests a blood tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes . . . the larger is more economical.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. DOES NOT HARM THE HEART

TOO TIDY

Some women demand that all magazines and papers be carefully kept in the receptacle provided. This should be a breakable rule. People like to have papers to hand, but naturally forget to replace them, and a few magazines here and there give a "lived in" look to a room.

Read the "Ads"

but don't ignore medical opinion

if you want to
-relieve constipation gently and safely
-take the exact dose suited to your need
-avoid danger of bowel strain

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of harsh laxatives will often do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Can Constipation be safely relieved?

"Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say thousands who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose that you find suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescriptional preparation containing senna, a natural vegetable laxative which relieves constipation gently and safely. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is no "convenience" in any cathartic that's taken so frequently, you must carry it wherever you go!

What Is the "Right" Laxative?

In buying any laxative, read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains doubtful drugs, don't take it. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains no mineral drugs. By using it, you avoid danger of strain.

How many dimes and quarters are spent on "popular" laxatives! How quickly they count up, if you frequently use habit-forming helps! A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin would save you money—and bring you real relief.

Why Doctors give a liquid laxative

The habitual use of harsh salts, or powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills or tablets is risky.

The properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without discomfort or injury. You need not take a "double dose" a day or two later.

The public can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store.

CLAIM WORK ADVANCED CONSERVATION YEARS

Every Branch of Conservation Department Activity Benefitted by Accomplishments

With plans under way for possible projects for the year beginning next April should the emergency conservation work be continued, W. R. Schoenmann, of the Michigan department of conservation, in charge of the work now being carried on by almost 10,000 civilian conservation corps workers in the state, has issued a report citing work that had been accomplished during the first eight months.

C. C. C camps were first established in Michigan in May 1933. A second six months enrollment period began in November. Schoenmann's report covers the period from May to January 1.

In eight months the more than 30 C. C. C. camps employed on conservation department projects advanced conservation years beyond the normal accomplishment, Schoenmann said. The reduction of fire hazard, clearing for trails, trails and fire breaks, bridge and building construction, forest improvement, fisheries activities and other projects are being carried on through the winter he said, and should the camps continue through another year the protection and development of Michigan's forest and recreational resources will be very materially advanced.

The work program now being planned for 1934-35 will be along the same general lines the camps have carried out during the past year, with attention directed toward forest fire prevention and control, forestry development, lake and stream and park improvement and allied projects.

The reported activities and accomplishments for the first eight months of emergency conservation work operations in Michigan, excluding the camps established in federal forests and in state parks exclusively, list more than 30 types of work ranging from construction of buildings to time spent for finding persons lost in the woods.

The report of work done follows:

Forest Fire—Construction of 77 miles of telephone lines; construction of 464 miles of firebreaks; reduction of fire hazards on 3,666 acres; construction of one lookout building; cleanup of 310 miles of road and trail sides; 32,012 man-days of fire fighting; construction of [illegible] of forest highways and 40 miles of horse trails; built 60 vehicle bridges; construction of 42 tool shelters; construction of six permanent storage and equipment buildings and construction of two permanent central warehouses.

Forestry—Planting of 6,770 acres of pine; improvement of 1,478 acres of forest stands; spent 8,530 man-days work at the Higgins Lake Forest Nursery; established four forest experimental plots; collected 106 bushels of pine seed cones; control of insect pests on 370 acres; control of tree and plant diseases on 57,166 acres; eradicated poison plants on 11,274 acres; cleared out 510 acres of public camping ground.

Fisheries — Laid 18,952 square yards of stream bank protection (erosion control); improved 5,185 acres of lakes; improved 24 miles of streams; built two ponds for fish and waterfowl, and additional work at several trout feeding stations, bass rearing stations and fish hatcheries.

Miscellaneous — Posted game refuge signs along 26 miles of boundaries; spent 196 man-days looking for lost persons; constructed nine emergency landing fields; surveyed 775 miles of boundaries of various conservation projects; surveyed 1,379,860 acres of under-ground water supplies.

SIDETRACKS BANKING CODE

Prior to the close of the year holding group aged state meetings getting ready to put into effect January 1 a code to be observed in the future conduct of the banking business, supposedly with official approval. The plan progressed to the point where paid advertisements were inserted in a number of Michigan newspapers calling attention to this proposed change in banking practices.

Apparently all of this was without the knowledge of General Hugh S. Johnson, head of the NRA, who cancelled the banking code and summarily dismissed the deputy administrator in charge as soon as the matter was called to his attention. Johnson explained he had not approved schedules in the code, had not even seen them. Anything so important as a banking code—a code that involves the interest of every individual who has any business to transact — it would seem, should not have escaped the personal attention of Administrator Johnson until the banking system was all set to put the new plan into effect.

At no time was there any attempt at secrecy. The new code was discussed by bankers throughout the country and was the subject of newspaper and magazine articles and editorial comment, yet General Johnson remained silent on the subject until the performance was ready to begin. Whether all schedules in the code were advisable or not, we do not know, but we do believe that in due consideration of the banking business, or any other business, official Washington should be reasonably sure of its ground before starting. New hearings on the code will take place in Washington this month. With General Johnson in full possession of the facts early adoption is expected.

WHISTLE STOPS!

Because freight went by trucks, and passenger traffic by motorbus, many important railroad towns of other days have become mere "whistle stops" in recent years. In less than two decades we have witnessed the disappearance of hundreds of miles of branch and main line roads in Michigan. Since the World war the railroads of the nation have been virtually under federal control. This in many instances has prevented common sense operation. Lately they have been given permission to establish a "door to door" freight service. It is a simplified collection and delivery service without extra charge to the shipper. The rail systems of this country are a vital part of community progress. It is a lonesome spot on the map that no longer hears the whistle of an approaching train. Already hundreds of communities are engaged in the business that has been going elsewhere. It is proving a good investment.

TIME TO BEWARE

That there are signs of improvement in conditions in the vast agricultural areas is borne out by the news that securities salesmen are once more journeying into the country to find prospects. These white collar bandits act as a barometer, seemingly having an uncanny gift for knowing where new dollars are in circulation. Country people and those living in the smaller cities and villages will be wise if they profit by past experience in making investments, putting money into nothing whose value is not absolutely established. Buying metropolitan real estate bonds and fake oil and mining debentures wrought havoc and brought ruin and disaster to many country districts during boom times. Kicking this new crop of bandits off the premises will prevent the tragedies of the past from being repeated.

Last week Monday morning the school bus ran off the road near the Rock Elm school house on account of the snow being quite badly drifted at that point. The boys and girls were 45 minutes late to school in consequence.

What is to be done for those who, by hard work and strict economy have managed to keep off the welfare list and are striving to pay their honest debts and find it next to impossible to make ends meet, if they are unable to meet that head tax on top of all their other financial burdens. Will they be provided with work with which to earn it or will the county have to board them 90 days in jail? It might be well for the supervisors to consider the matter.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Subject for Sunday, February 25, is "Mind."

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Soul" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 18.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Ps. 84:2): "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p. 335): "Because Soul is immortal, it does not exist in mortality. Soul must be incorporeal to be Spirit, for Spirit is not finite. Only by losing the false sense of Soul can we gain the eternal unfolding of Life as immortality brought to light."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By R. C. Mell

Great Interest Shown by Farmers in Corn-Hog Program

Charlevoix county farmers, judging from their attendance at the three recent corn-hog program meetings, are attracted by the government's program of corn and hog reduction. Over 50 farmers attended the Charlevoix meeting last Thursday and 170 the other two meetings held.

While the program is still not completely organized, three different community committees have been set up to assist in carrying out the program in the county. The community committee for the Charlevoix area consist of William Mayne, chairman, R. E. Stafford and George Block. The East Jordan committee consists of William Shepard, chairman, Kiel Kloster and George Nelson, and the Boyne City committee is made up of Frank Fox, chairman, Lorin Duffey and Earl Gritin. These committees will function as temporary committees for the time being but will later become permanent when farmers have signed the contracts and the campaign is pretty well cleaned up. From present indications, over 100 farmers will cooperate with the government in reducing their litters and corn acreage.

Every farmer who has already received his contract form and other material should immediately fill in the required information. Many farmers have not as yet received their materials. Those of you who haven't, kindly send back the letter that you recently received which will indicate to your agent that you are interested.

Poultrymen of This District Study New Hatchery Code

As is being done by many agricultural groups, the poultry men now have a code which should assist the poultry industry to a great extent, Mr. Shearer, of M. S. C. poultry staff, discussed the new program with the hatcherymen at a meeting in Boyne City last Wednesday. If any one is interested, I have copies of the new code which I shall be glad to pass out as long as the supply lasts.

O. I. Gregg, Landscape Specialist, to Speak On March 1st

O. I. Gregg, landscape specialist, will give a lecture Thursday afternoon, March 1st, in the Boyne City library at 1:30 o'clock.

During the forenoon, Mr. Gregg will make planting outlines for five more folks in the county who are making plans to beautiful their homes this spring. This will make a total of fifteen places that will be landscaped this spring.

Jersey Breeders of Northern Michigan Make Plans for Parrish Show

Jersey breeders of this section of the state met in Boyne City last week with H. D. Dennison, Jersey Cattle Club field man, and Mr. Cooper, president of the State Cattle club. After discussing many problems pertaining to Jersey development in the state, considerable time was devoted to discussing the conducting of a northern Michigan parrish show. Tentative plans include having this exhibition in connection with our Charlevoix fair held at East Jordan. If it is worked out successfully, it will mean that a splendid display of Jersey cattle will be seen representing the best from five or six counties in this area.

Extension Ladies to Receive Fifth Lesson—Project Very Successful

The clothing project ladies are to meet again on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 27 and 28, at Charlevoix and Boyne City respectively, to receive their next instructions.

The clothing project has met with universal approval and is being received by over 200 ladies in this county. Miss Irene Taylor of the M. S. C. will again be present at both places.

This project no doubt, has been more difficult to carry out than many projects held in the past, but fulfills a great need in these trying times. Already plans are being developed for the Dress Improvement Day which will be held some time in May.

FEDERAL WHEAT FOR STARVING LIVESTOCK

Government Allots 138 Carloads of Wheat for Northern Michigan

Government shipment of 138 additional carloads of wheat to upper Michigan for starving cattle in the drought region was announced Monday by Rep. Prentiss M. Brown.

Brown recently obtained a preliminary shipment of 20 carloads, but was informed by the federal surplus relief corporation, the agency in charge of the supplies, that hay and fodder would have to be handled by the state emergency relief organization.

The Surplus Relief corporation, said Fred R. Johnson, state emergency relief director, had full authority to proceed with purchases of hay and fodder, and that a possibility exists the state may later be reimbursed for outlays for this purpose.

FARMERS GIVEN TAX EXEMPTION

taxable with no deductions being allowed for labor or service cost for production.

Michigan florists receiving an order to be telegraphed either within the state or out-of-state will be liable for the sales tax. A florist who fills the telegraphic order in another city from where it was placed is tax-exempt.

Sales of merchandise through vending machines and other automatic sales devices must be considered taxable, the board ruled. Modifying the regulation, it was held that merchants, theatre operators and others in whose places of business the machines are located are liable for the tax on all sales made through the vending contrivances as are those who receive a commission from such sales. Where vending machines are placed on public property the owners must pay the tax.

PROCESSING TAX EXEMPTIONS GIVEN

Metzger Points Out Ones Free of Levies on Corn, Hogs.

According to the state department of agriculture at Lansing, no processing tax is required to be paid on the grinding of one bushel of corn, or less, per week for the producer thereof, regardless of the purpose for which ground, nor upon the grinding of corn for feed purposes only, nor upon the processing of corn or killing of hogs by or for a producer, for consumption by his own family, employes or household.

No tax is required to be paid by the producer who slaughters his own hogs and who, together with his own family, employes and household, sells or exchanges not more than 300 pounds of the products derived therefrom during any marketing year, provided he does not sell in excess of 1,000 pounds of such products. If the producer sells more than 1,000 pounds of the products derived from his hogs, during any marketing year, he loses this exemption.

In the case of hogs, the current marketing year began on November 5, 1933. The processing tax is based upon the live weight of the hog, and in determining the processing tax on a dressed carcass, the weight of the live hogs is assumed to have been 32 per cent more. Where different portions of the animal are sold separately, different percentages are used.

COOKS WILL WELCOME NEW POTATO VARIETY

College Recommends Michigan Farmers Give Katahdin Spuds Trial

Potatoes which make the housewife's dyes glisten and which make the growers good tempered when they survey the yields to be assured by the recommendation of the farm crops department at Michigan State college that Michigan farmers give Katahdin potatoes a trail.

This variety was developed by the U. S. department of agriculture in 1923 and it has been thoroughly tested in this state under the supervision of the college. Field trials have been run in all potato growing sections.

Katahdin potatoes are excellent table stock. They are good bakers and can be attractively served in any way that potatoes are cooked.

Seed of this variety is available in the state. This seed stock has been carefully supervised and has been examined for quality and for freedom from disease. Information concerning seed sources can be obtained by writing to the farm crops department at the college, for names of farmers who still have seed.

STATE LIQUOR SALES 40 THOUSAND DAILY

Stores Already Established Have Averaged $809 Per Day

The state of Michigan at the present time is collecting an average of $40,000 daily in liquor receipts, a report submitted to the liquor control commission showed.

Gross collections since the first of the year amounted to $1,171,000. Of this amount $160,000 was in license money, $284,300 in beer tax and the remainder, $725,957.00, represents revenue received by the 33 liquor stores now operating in the state.

It was pointed out that the stores located in the city of Detroit are averaging $1,214 daily while the 16 downstate average $809 per day. The general average for the 34 stores is $1,025. Frank A. Picard, chairman of the commission, said that the receipts would increase as stocks in stores became more complete.

LEGISLATURE IN SPECIAL SESSION

islature to consider complete revision of the real estate taxation system. If new sources of revenue come, it should be after the constitution has been amended," he said.

A tax revision measure, drafted by a subcommittee of the legislative council, was ready for immediate introduction. It proposed abolishing the state tax of $3,500,000 for the university and Michigan State college and finding those funds elsewhere, either from the sales tax or general fund.

SYRUP IS BOILING AS FROST DEPARTS

First 1934 Harvest From Woodlands As Winter Loosens Frigid Grip

Loosening of Jack Frost's grip on Michigan woodlands brings the first harvest of 1934 to owners of sugar bushes and the profits from this harvest depends upon the preparations made to produce a first class product, according to the forestry department at Michigan State college.

First run sap makes the best syrup and sugar so trees should be tapped soon enough to secure this run. Last year, the best syrup was made during February, and bushes were tapped during January in some instances. Too early tapping, however, may result in trouble as it may be necessary to tap the trees a second time when the real sap run starts.

Clean equipment and care in manufacture are needed to prepare a first class product. Spiles and bucket should be washed in boiling water before they are used. The evaporator must be thoroughly cleaned. High quality syrup can be made more easily in shallow pan evaporators than in the deep pan type.

Sap should never be stored. Night boiling is sometimes wearisome to the operator but repeat orders for syrup are obtained by the men who boil the sap immediately after it is gathered.

FINAL HONORS PAID JOHN A. NEWVILLE

Legion Conducts Rites for Last of Boyne City GAR

Full military honors were paid Sunday by the American Legion at funeral services for John A. Newville, 92, last of the GAR veterans of Boyne City, who died Friday at his home.

Mr. Newville, who was the organizer of Walter Clifford post of the GAR, served from 1862 to 1865 in the Union army under General Sheridan as a member of Company G, 130th New York Infantry. He took part in more than 50 engagements, including the Wilderness campaign and the Valley campaign and was wounded at the Battle of Yellow Tavern.

Mr. Newville came to Charlevoix county in 1881 and settled in what is now known as Pleasant Valley, two miles south of Boyne City, where he built a log house for himself and his family. He had held many township and county offices.

Despite his advanced age, Mr. Newville was most active until about a year ago and had driven his own automobile. He bought his first car and learned to drive when he was 82 and was past 90 when he was forced to give up driving.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Charlevoix and Ironton

The greatest of modern hymns had its spiritual birthplace in a barn. About the year 1756 a bright lad of 16, the son of Major Toplady, was taken by his widowed mother to visit relatives in Ireland. During the visit at the hamlet of Codyman, an earnest layman was holding evangelistic services in a barn for the benefit of the surrounding peasantry. The young lad, Augustus Montague Toplady, was attracted to the place by curiosity. The homespun preacher's text that day was, "Ye, who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Up to that time the boy had been a stranger to the great salvation, but the plain discourse led him to Jesus. He was converted that day and the sermon that converted him gave to the world the matchless hymn, "Rock of Ages." Truly the faithful servant of God who scatters seed little knows whereunto it may grow.

10:00 a. m.—"God's Safeguards." Concerning the provisions God has made to keep Christians from sinning.

COUNTY BANK OPENED LAST SATURDAY

REORGANIZATION APPROVAL FRIDAY

END FOUR MONTH EFFORT

New State Bank Offers Federal Deposit Insurance, Release 50% of Deposits

Four months of waiting, patient expectancy, were rewarded Saturday by the opening of the reorganized Charlevoix County State bank.

Final approval from the state banking department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was received late Friday afternoon and the new institution opened its doors the following morning.

Thus ended a period of restricted operation. Thus came to Charlevoix an official announcement for which the city had long waited. Thus came the signal for a resumption of business that for several months has been visibly affected.

Beyond a doubt the announcement was the most important that has been made in Charlevoix during the last year, and to the hundreds of depositors who have stood by patiently awaiting the working out of a safe and sane program of bank operation, it came as a fitting reward.

Final approval of the bank's reorganization plan brought to a culmination four months of effort on the part of the officers and directors, the depositors' committee and Congressman Prentiss M. Brown. The institution closed October 30, 1933, for reorganization after 50 continuous years of operation. It is believed to be the only reorganized private bank in Michigan.

Much of the credit of the successful conclusion of the bank plan is due its depositors. It was their splendid cooperation, their willingness to go along with the institution in its "new deal" that made the reorganization possible. Without that aid the plan would have failed completely.

As the name signifies the bank is under supervision of the state banking department. It is also a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Membership in this corporation means that all deposits up to $2,500 are guaranteed. The new banks makes available 50% of deposits, or a total of approximately $200,000.00. Participation certificates will be given depositors for the remaining 50% upon which dividends will be paid as fast as these assets are liquidated.

Under the reorgnnization plan, new officers and directors, approved by the state banking department, were named as follows: A. F. Bridge, president; M. A. Levinson and Charles Carey, vice-presidents; Robt. Bridge, cashier; J. M. Foster and E. J. Hiller, directors. Other stockholders are Capt. John Roen and L. S. See.

ANNABELL CUNNINGHAM IS NAMED DEPUTY TREASURER

Miss Lillis Flanders, Charlevoix county treasurer, has announced the appointment of Miss Annabell Cunningham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cunningham of Marion township, as deputy county treasurer. Miss Cunningham has been assisting in the office since the recent appointment of Miss Flanders as treasurer.

10 PER CENT MORE TO BE CUT OFF BY CWA THIS WEEK

A 10 per cent cut in the number of CWA workers in Michigan has been ordered by the federal authorities effective Friday, Fred R. Johnson, managing director of the State Emergency Welfare Relief commission, announced Monday.

The reduction will bring the number of CWA employes down to 120,000 and it is the second step by the federal government to ultimately abolish the CWA program. Johnson expects to mail quotas to the various counties early this week.

Johnson said the reductions will be determined largely by the amount of industrial employment in the various counties.

FATHER-SON BANQUET AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Over Two Hundred in Attendance Last Thursday Night

Going down on the records as another outstanding success was the annual Father and Son banquet held Thursday evening in the dining room of the Methodist church. Over two hundred persons attended, a capacity crowd.

A delicious banquet dinner, served by the women of the church, preceded a fine program which opened with three numbers by a male quintet composed of Messrs. Gilson Clark, Earl Shapton, George Block, A. V. Belding and Jay Oliver.

Rev. W. W. Hurd presented Dr. F. F. McMillan, who in turn, introduced Supt. O. P. North, the toastmaster. A fine toast for the fathers was given by Rev. G. R. Parker, and Albert McMillan responded with a toast for the sons.

Dr. R. B. Armstrong presented the principal speaker of the evening, Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City. Pointing to George Washington, in whose memory the event was given, as an example for the youth of today to follow, Judge Gilbert delivered a rousing address in his usual forceful manner.

SPRING PRIMARY ELECTION MONDAY

WILL CLIMAX AN UNUSUALLY QUIET CAMPAIGN

Republicans Seek Nomination for Mayor and Offices in Second and Third Wards

The annual spring primary election next Monday, March 5th, will bring to a climax a campaign which has been for the most part an exceptionally quiet one.

While a mayoralty contest exists along with opposition for offices in two of the three city wards, campaigning has been mostly of the "whispering" type as far as the candidates themselves have been concerned. Except for the "mud-slinging" tactics of the Charlevoix Sentinel, directed primarily at ex-mayor Arthur Bergeon, but also showering with uncomplimentary remarks three present aldermen who served with the previous administration, there has been little to indicate the close approach of an election.

Inasmuch as contests are among those seeking the republican nomination, only the names of candidates of that party will appear on the ballot and only in cases where there is opposition for the office. Thus the ticket will be headed by the mayoralty contest between L. S. See, incumbent, and Arthur Bergeon. The names of Robert Rife for treasurer, Ray S. Hamilton for clerk, Wm. H. Wallace and F. E. Cartier for park commissioners, Robert Withers for justice of the peace and the unopposed candidates for ward office will not appear on the ballot.

There are no contests in the first ward. In the second, F. J. Fessenden, incumbent, and Robert J. Madill seek the nomination for alderman. The third ward has two contests, for supervisor between Wm. E. Parmelee, incumbent, and David J. Eckinger, and the second for alderman between William Higman, incumbent, and J. J. Hallett.

Following is the line-up as it will appear on the ballot:

City Ticket

For Mayor—*L. S. See. Arthur Bergeon.

Second Ward

For Alderman—*F. J. Fessenden, Robert J. Madill.

Third Ward

For Supervisor—*Wm. E. Parmelee, D. J. Eckinger.

For Alderman—*William Higman, J. J. Hallett.

*Present office holder.

Names of democratic candidates, unopposed at the primary, will appear on the general election ballot in April.

The polls will be opened from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Next week will also see the various townships holding caucus to nominate candidates. In most cases the caucuses have been called for Saturday, March 10th.

STATEMENT

In view of the fact that the Charlevoix Sentinel is attacking my administration of city affairs, and is also attempting to discredit my standing in the community, I would like to ask a few questions, and make a few statements for the benefit of the public.

Who paid off the bonds on the City Light Plant at Bellaire?	$85,000.00
Who built the City Steam Plant and paid off the bonds?	$60,000.00
Who built the Diesel Plant and paid for it?	$65,000.00
Who paid off Electric Light Extension Bonds?	$16,000.00
Who paid off the City's Bonded Share of Belvedere Avenue paving?	$ 6,000.00
Who paid off Swing Bridge Bonds?	$20,000.00
Who paid off the City Water Works Refunding Bonds?	$24,000.00
Who paid for the City Fire Truck	$ 5,500.00
Who bought and paid for the City Truck and Plow?	$ 5,000.00
Who paid off a part of the Bridge Street Boulevard Light Bonds?	$12,000.00
Who paid off a part of the new City Water Works Bonds?	$12,000.00
Who paid off all the interest on these bonds, amounting to over	$50,000.00
TOTAL	$360,500.00

All these things were done, and all of the bonds and interest amounting to three hundred and sixty thousand, five hundred dollars, were paid for, during my administration of the City's affairs.

These are indisputable facts backed up by city records and cancelled bonds.

When I went into office, the gross receipts of the Electric Light Plant was eighteen thousand dollars. When I went out of office the gross receipts was fifty-four thousand dollars. At the same time we lowered the light rate, to the present rate of six cents, which is the lowest rate of any city in Northern Michigan. When we went out of office, we turned over an Electric Light Plant worth nearly half a million dollars, without a dollar of indebtedness of any kind against it. Besides these things, we made several thousand dollars of improvements on the Bellaire plant.

We built the new Water Plant and put in two new pumps.

We bought property and built Bridge street Park on Round lake.

Bought the Auto Camp property and improved it.

We installed Boulevard Lights on State street, Bridge street, Belvedere avenue and Antrim street.

We put in curb and gutter on a number of streets to the south side, and paved Belvedere avenue and South Bridge street.

We installed the much written up water main, across the upper channel, a much needed improvement which should have been put in years ago.

In regard to this project, the council always knew, at all times, the work that was being done, the amount of money being paid out, and what it was paid out for. The fact of the case is, that not even a dollar can be paid out of the City Treasury, at any time or to anybody, only by a majority vote of the Council.

So there was no reason whatever for the Council not knowing all about this work. This idea that I dictated to six men on the Council and told them what they must do, and how they must vote, is sheer nonsense, and is manufactured for purely political reasons.

It is not only an insult to the intelligence of these men, but an insult to the intelligence of the people who voted them into office.

Any person who makes any statement, or any insinuation that I got any money illegally, out of this project, or any other city project, is an Absolute Liar and I defy them, to even attempt to prove it.

When I went into office the City was broke. Its taxes were mortgaged to the banks for borrowed money, a year in advance.

For several years the City had been paying interest to the banks for borrowed money.

After two years this proceeding was reversed, and instead of the City paying interest to the banks, the banks were paying interest to the City on daily balances and savings account. From that time on until I went out of office the City never borrowed a dollar or paid a cent of interest to any bank.

Besides this, we lowered the taxes to the present low rate of ten mills.

Congratulations!

Together with the rest of the community, the Charlevoix Courier wishes to extend to the Charlevoix County State Bank its sincere congratulations upon the opening of its banking institution and to express heartfelt good wishes for its prosperous future. The opening of the bank is a happy event for Charlevoix. It marks the restoration of unrestricted banking facilities and a resumption of those functions which a bank contributes to the general business activities of a community.

COUNCIL PAYS PAST DUE CITY OBLIGATION

Slate "Wiped Clean" Following Release Impounded Funds

Financially speaking, the Charlevoix city council Monday night "cleaned" the slate of all past due obligations which have accrued since the closing for reorganization of the Charlevoix County bank last October.

A payroll of $9,065.53 was met, the largest in any recent month. Included in the obligations met was $1,400 in electric light bonds, $775.51 in local improvement bonds and $338.69 in general obligation bonds, or a total of $5,514.20

At the suggestion of D. T. McHugh, county sanitation supervisor, the council by motion directed Mr. McHugh to make application to the state department of health for a survey and septic systems plans for the Palmer street sewer district with the ultimate aim of having such a system installed under the CWA. If the project is approved the city will be saved several thousand dollars in the construction of their proposed sewage disposal system, and the Palmer street district is of the type now being sought by the state health department.

CITY RESTRAINED ON SEWAGE BONDS

JUDGE GILBERT GRANTED INJUNCTION TUESDAY

Rules Portions Act 94 Invalid in Decision on Friendly Suit to Determine Legality of Measure

At a special session of circuit court here Tuesday, Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, granted an injunction restraining the city of Charlevoix from entering contract with the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for purchase of revenue bonds to finance construction of a sewage disposal plant under provisions of Act 94 of the Public Acts of Michigan 1933.

The injunction was sought by Martin Block, local taxpayer, in a friendly suit to test the validity of Act 94 upon request of the PWA.

Judge Gilbert termed Act 94 not bad for one including more than one purpose. He further held the body of the act contains some provisions not included in the title, among them the following which were held invalid:

Section 8, purporting to give a statutory lien on net revenue of project; Section 10, which seeks to set up a receivership to fix and collect rates in case of default on bonds; Section 11, which attempts to clear bonds of all limitations and provisions by laws of the State of Michigan as now in force or hereafter amended, also provision that the city council could make the payment of these bonds a lien against revenue from existing plant and its newly created additions and improvements and apply same for payment of new bonds; Section 29, which as drawn would make rates charged on project not subject to regulation or supervision by any state board, bureau or commission, also would make construction and operation of project free of any supervision or permit by any state board, bureau or commission, such as insurance inspection, building inspection, etc.

Judge Gilbert held that some of the projects named in the title of Act 94 cannot be authorized and financed by vote of the city council unless authorized by vote of the people, among them sewage disposal plants, highway bridges, etc., upon which toll is collected.

One issue in the case was whether a city council could enter contract with the Federal government to buy the bonds and furnish money for construction of a sewage disposal plant, and whether the United States government could be a party to any

COUNTY LIVESTOCK FACE STARVATION

INVESTIGATIONS REVEAL CRITICAL SITUATION

Hayes Township Farmer Loses Three Head Cattle—300 Tons Hay Is Needed for General Shortage

BULLETIN

Authority to furnish feed for starving cattle of Charlevoix county was granted Wednesday morning in a telephone message between Gus Muma, Charlevoix county welfare director, and Fred R. Johnson, state welfare administrater, Lansing. The order restricted the amount of feed to be given only in most urgent cases. Mr. Muma stated his office would cooperate with County Agent Mellencamp in the relief effort.

The fact that cattle are actually dying from starvation in Charlevoix county was reported Monday by Sheriff Floyd Ikens, who Saturday sent a telegram to state welfare officials at Lansing, pleading that some action be taken to alleviate the situation.

The condition is claimed to be a critical and general one throughout the county, based upon the findings from actual investigation of individual cases where farmers have applied for aid. County Agent B. C. Mellencamp, who has conducted the investigation work, estimates aronnd 300 tons of hay is needed for the remaining weeks of winter.

At one farm visited in Hayes township, three head of cattle were found dead in the barn yard from starvation and 19 others in a pitiful condition. The farmer was out of feed entirely and had no means to purchase a supply. This instance, it is reported, is but one of many in the county.

Otto Hausler of Boyne Falls, told county officials Monday he had been forced to trade some of his cattle for hay to feed the others, and that at the present rate his herd would be gone by spring. He stated his own condition was identical to that of many other farmers in his district. Mr. Hausler stated that down-state cattle buyers were taking advantage of the situation by trucking in hay from southern Michigan to trade for cattle at an exhorbitant price. In order to save at least part of their herds, the farmers were forced to bargain, while in other instances they are butchering their cattle to save them from starvation.

The condition has been brought about by the drought of last summer. The hay crop, especially in the eastern part of the county, was greatly cut down by long dry periods, and the supply on hand has diminished during an exceptionally long winter.

TEACH STUDENTS GOVERNMENT, URGES EDITOR FRANK M. SPARKS

Frank M. Sparks, editor of The Grand Rapids Herald, gave an address before the senior and junior high school assemblies Friday morning at the invitation of the Hi-Y club.

Editor Sparks was introduced by Rev. G. R Parker, local Hi-Y leader. He told the students the success of education could not be measured by the completeness of book learning, but rather by preparation for good citizenship through knowledge of national, state and municipal government in order that the student after completion of high school and college could fill his proper place in society.

Mr. Sparks decried an apparent lack of interest by the average citizen in governmental affairs. Citing Grand Rapids, his home city, as a glaring example, he stated less than eighty per cent of the qualified voters registered for the spring election of 1933, and that in some wards only a trifle over forty per cent exercised their voting franchise.

Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, spoke briefly, emphasizing the points brought out in Mr. Sparks' address.

CENTRAL LAKE

Ten below Monday morning.

Dave Petersen has gone to Flint to seek employment.

Harold Lamb, CWA administrator, was home over the week end.

O. R. Morse lost a $200 horse last week, which he purchased from Mr. Wells of Charlevoix.

Eastport grange met with Charles Bennett last week. The weather has been so bad that a few meetings have been missed.

John Edyvean, for many years employed at the canning factory by E. B. Gill, has been having a severe attack of the flu.

Lloyd Morse has been delivering kindling and coal this week in Bay View neighborhood. This weather requires plenty of it.

Mrs. Hattie Dawson Morse has about completely recovered from scarlet fever and complications. She is up and around again.

E. B. Gill says that it is a little early in the game to tell the fruit losses, but thinks the peach crop and sweet cherries are gone.

Mrs. Jenn Wolverton, mother died Sunday at Eastport. Funeral services, conducted by the Masons were held from the home Tuesday.

The condition of Mrs. Clark, who had a serious attack of pneumonia, is slightly improved. She is staying at the C. W. Hastings home with her daughter, while convalescing.

North Holland church, is making great preparation for an Easter cantata for April 1st. North Holland, Atwood and Ellsworth Holland churches will take part. There are 63 people in the play.

O. R. Morse had not received the supply of wheat and hay for the welfare Saturday. The supply allotted here has all been signed up. Many CWA workers have not received back pay. No more Red Cross flour is available.

Mrs. Louise Lashbrook, who has been teaching Dingman school east of town, is home with an infection in her lower limb. Mrs. Corneil, wife of former auctioneer, is taking Mrs. Dingman's place. This is the third teacher hired there this year. Mrs. Alberts, who taught there, ran over the bank of the Sommerville hill and was badly injured, but is about again.

James Dawson is back to Bellaire running his steam engine again on the town hall project at that place. Work was suspended for a short time on account of cold weather. They are still working on the basement and it is reported have spent nearly half of their $34,000 allotment. Ellsworth, we hear, is still on its basement work. Mancelona appears to be about the only ones who have finished their projects, with a possible exception of Elk Rapids.

According to the Courier, Charlevoix county CWA projects have about gone over the top, for which they should be congratulated, as well as the men at the head of the projects. With the excuse that Antrim county schools might have to consolidate and the work have to be done over again, the CWA administration here has turned down all the country school projects. The same excuse might have worked in Charlevoix county, but they have gone ahead and done some fine work on their country schools. This was a mighty slim excuse as the projects were mainly to give work to unemployed anyway, and the schools would not vote to consolidate. At any rate, the schools of Antrim county have been beaten out of some much needed repairs and with the exception of Atwood and Mapleville schools, there appears to be no work done. Creswell, with it's school house on the right-of-way on M-88, could have had a fine building put up. Bay View and Maple Hill had projects accepted but nothing done. Not only lack of building and repairs, but men needed the work badly.

Rev. E. M. Mumby and ye correspondent, were entertained at supper at the Maurice Henry home Sunday evening. They are marooned by snow banks and haven't been able to get out for several weeks. No services have been held at Atwood for some time on account of people living on side roads not being able to get out. The Aid society meeting at the Alfred Miller home had to be cancelled on account of bad roads. Charlevoix county is not only up to the times in CWA work, but they also have a public spirited set of officials that keep their roads open for traffic. Next Sunday, and for March, Rev. E. M. Mumby will hold services at Norwood at 11 o'clock a. m., on account of having special meetings at Central Lake. He preached a fine patriotic sermon at Barnard and Norwood last Sunday. Next Sunday, his daughter, Pauline, Bertha and Newton Pierce, and Barnard young people, are expected to have some special music.

SOUTH BARNARD

The class in Christian doctrine is meeting Wednesday of this week at 3 o'clock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Klooster. Judging from the increased attendance at the last meeting there is growing interest in this course. At the last gathering of the young people, Oscar Boss was elected secretary and treasurer.

Yes, it was a little cold last Sunday, but still nearly fifty persons "sleighed" or walked to the services in the Reformed church of South Barnard. Even the women folks are beginning to brave the elements, bundling themselves up snug and warm. Strange as it may seem there are other women who would do the same if only their husbands would think the same as they. One has to admire the spirit shown by these farmer folk, but as has been said before, "where there's a will, there's a way."

Last Sunday the preacher used for the basis of his sermon this text: "In every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is acceptable unto Him." The subject of the discourse was: "The Christian's dufy to witness to all classes and nationalities." As God is no respecter of persons, man has no right to limit the presentation of the Gospel to any group or race of people. The last Sunday in February is generally given to the cause of foreign missions by the Reformed church in America—that is, sermons are devoted to this particular subject on that day by ministers in this denomination. According to a recent report of the United Stewardship Council, the Reformed church in America stands fourth in a list of twenty-five churches as to its per capita giving to missions, and first as to its per capita giving to all causes.

It was a joy to see the face of Miss Margaret Boss again. She has been absent for several weeks, having served as governess, and also serving as musical director in Mackinaw City. She has again resumed her place as the faithful and efficient organist of the Reformed church.

And now the faces of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith are wreathed in smiles. Do you ask the reason? Well, Thelma Esther, a bright and lively infant, has come to make its home in their midst. Congratulations!

An old custom is being revived. Four charming young ladies of this community—Miss Dorothy Bottema, Miss Jennie Klooster and the Misses Dorothy and Mary Smith, are wending their way afoot to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Block on the cement road. Yes, it is some hike for these young damsels. Splendid exercise—keep it up girls.

Valentine day proved to be a Red Letter day for four young men of this community. The mail man has been depositing not a few letters in mail boxes for Oscar and Edward Boss, Harrison and Jasper Warner. One can never tell what will happen when laddies and lassies attend a valentine party.

A golden opportunity for some young inventor. Jack Boss says he will be made very happy if someone would invent chains that would prevent an automobile from skidding on an icy pavement. It is very costly to have another car turn into your car, he says.

Martin and Dorothy Bottema entertained Jacob and Hiram Klooster at dinner on Monday of this week. The boys say that they were much interested in cutting lumber, but we wonder.

Tuesday occurs the annual "birthday meeting" of the Aid society, at the parsonage. Something in the nature of a "house opening" after the new repairs and redecoration. The ladies come at 3 o'clock for business and social hour and the men at 6:30 for supper.

The Club meets this week Thursday with Mrs. Jacobs-Ellis, on Clinton street. Next week, with Mrs. Arthur Edwards,—if favorable weather conditions, otherwise at the parsonage.

Announcement is already made of the coming annual Easter supper. Details given later.

The Missionary society meets next Wednesday with Mrs. McMillan.

LEGION AUXILIARY ACTIVITIES
By Lois L. Sevrey.

Twenty-nine Auxiliary members and their friends enjoyed the hard times party in the dug-out Monday evening.

If one were to judge the times by the costumes represented we are still in the depths of depression. Much imagination was required to even guess what the costumes must have looked like when new. Everyone said they laughed more than they had all winter which was a good thing, as the mercury stood at 30 below zero and one needed excitement of some sort to give them nerve enough to get out in such desperately cold weather.

First prize for the worst dressed lady was won by Mrs. Grace Geneit, second prize by Mrs. Tyler and third prize by Mrs. Heise.

A peanut throwing contest was staged with Edna Powers captain of one side and Lizzie Cannon captain of the other side. Edna Powers' side won the peanuts.

Dorothy Southwood won first prize for the most correct answers to fifteen questions and second prize was won by Mrs. Heise.

Lottie Nowland won a prize by being able to sit on a very unsubstantial article and write her name better than anyone else.

Edna Powers and Lizzie Cannon furnished much amusement for the gang by allowing themselves to be blindfolded and feeding each other cracker crumbs.

Lunch was served at 11 o'clock—nice hot chili—after which all departed feeling very, very glad they had participated at such a hilarious party.

Next Monday evening, March 5th, will be the date of our regular monthly business meeting at 8 o'clock in the dug-out. We are out after new members so all you non-members better watch out for we are after YOU.

Our illustration: Over the triple doorways of the Cathedral of Milan there are three inscriptions spanning the splendid arches. Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses, and underneath is the legend, "All that which pleases is but for a moment." Over the other is sculptured a cross, and there are the words, "All that which troubles is but for a moment." But underneath the great central entrance to the main aisle is the inscription, "That only is important which is eternal!" If we realize always these three truths, we will not let trifles trouble us, nor be interested so much in the passing pageants of the hour. We would live, as we seldom do, for the permanent and the eternal.

Paul says: "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." II Cor. 4:17,18.

At 11 o'clock we will use for our subject, "More Safeguards." One interested in how he might make his Christian experience simple but effective, should make an effort to hear this sermon.

Coming: pre-Easter mission. Beginning March 18th.

The First Great Fur Trader

AMERICANS not only have good reason to remember Manuel Lisa as the first great fur trader in the trans-Mississippi West, but they also have good reason to remember him gratefully for his patriotic service to the republic during the War of 1812.

Born in New Orleans about 1776, the son of a Spanish officer, at the age of twenty he owned a boat in which he engaged in commerce on the Mississippi. By the beginning of the Nineteenth century he was a large landowner near St. Louis where he opened a store for outfitting Indian traders. This led naturally to his going into that business himself, at first with the Osage Indians on the Missouri under a grant from the Spanish authorities of Louisiana.

Then Lewis and Clark made their historic exploring trip through the newly-acquired Louisiana territory, and Lisa was quick to see the opportunities offered on the Upper Missouri. He formed a partnership with William Morrison and Pierre Menard of Kaskaskia, Ill., under the name of Lisa, Menard & Morrison, and in 1807 set out with a party of traders, guided by George Drouillard, who had been with Lewis and Clark.

That winter they spent on the Yellowstone hunting, trapping and trading with the Crows, and the following summer found Lisa back in St. Louis, proud of the success of his first venture and dreaming of even greater enterprises. The result was the organization of the Missouri Fur company.

During the next five years the Missouri Fur company prospered and Manuel Lisa rose to a commanding position in it, and in the fur trade of the West. Meanwhile, during many journeys up and down the Big Muddy, he had won the confidence and esteem of nearly all the Indian tribes along the river. So when the War of 1812 broke out and the British tried to incite the Indians of that region against the United States, it was only natural that Gov. William Clark should appoint Lisa sub-agent to these tribes to counteract the British influence.

The Spaniard did his job well. He not only organized war parties against some of the tribes who were allies of the British but he secured pledges of friendship and peace from nearly all the Missouri tribes which kept them out of the war. If it had not been for Manuel Lisa's efforts, the War of 1812 might have had a far different ending. Lisa died in 1820 but to the end of his days he dominated the Missouri Fur company and, so long as he did, no other fur company was able to secure a foothold on the Upper Missouri.

Seth Bullock, Western Sheriff

WHEN Seth Bullock died at Deadwood, S. D., in 1919, it was recalled that he had not only been a lifelong personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt but that he had also been perhaps the most typical old-time sheriff of the West. As such he became a figure of myth and legend which he, more than once, dispelled in laconic fashion. Once an easterner referred to him as a "man killer." When they told Seth Bullock that, his only reply was: "They say I've killed 47 men. Son, I'll tell you what, I never killed but two and I didn't kill them soon enough."

Although he became famous as an American frontier type, Bullock was not a native of the United States. Born in Ontario, Canada, in 1847, he came to Montana at the age of twenty and established himself as a dealer in mining supplies in Helena. By that time the famous Montana Vigilantes had pretty well wiped out crime as an organized force. But there were still lawless men there and young Bullock, allying himself with the forces of law and order, learned many things which were to stand him in good stead in his future career as a peace officer in a new gold camp—Deadwood in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

He was among the first to reach there and he took part in many of the stirring events in the early days of the gold rush of 1876. When a provisional government was established in Deadwood he was made sheriff, and when Lawrence county was organized he was elected its first sheriff.

His biggest problem was the road agents who infested the trails and preyed upon the stage coaches with their shipments of gold dust out of the hills, and it was his relentless pursuit of these which gave him his greatest reputation as a man-hunter. In one case he followed a fleeing road agent clear across South Dakota, down through Nebraska and into Iowa to the town of Missouri Valley before he "got his man."

It was during Bullock's career as sheriff that his friendship with Theodore Roosevelt, then a young ranchman in North Dakota, began. So at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he was one of the first to organize a company for Roosevelt's regiment of Rough Riders, although he never got any nearer Cuba than Chickamauga park in Tennessee. Bullock was responsible for the erection of a monument to T. R. on a mountain by the same name north of Deadwood, and he lay dying in 1919, he asked to be buried at White Rocks where the monument to his friend would look down upon his grave.

Wardell Was Right

By VINA WINSLOW

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

STANDING beside the desk of Tom Wardell, managing editor of the Morning Breeze, Polly Devitt was almost tempted to draw her light coat closer about her, so cold was the gaze of the clever young executive. Instead she continued to look steadily at him, her large brown eyes as sincere as they were beautiful.

"I don't want to be a society reporter, Mr. Wardell," she said with a drawl that, reminding one of a lazy southern stream rolling through Kentucky blue grass, added infinitely to the charm of her low, throaty voice.

"I've been a general assignment reporter for two years, and I want to continue to be one. I'm twenty-three years old and hell-bent to get somewhere, and I can't get there by being a society reporter."

"I'm sorry, Miss Devitt," Wardell said curtly, "but as I've just said, we have no place here for you. I don't hire women reporters. I don't like them."

With which remark he lowered his eyes to some copy which lay on his desk. So far as he was concerned the interview was over. Not so with Polly.

"I don't think it is fair of you to let a personal prejudice against women enter into business."

Ordinarily Wardell would have ignored a remark like that, but somehow Polly's tone caused him to look up at her again. Then he said:

"There are very few good women reporters, and those that are good get married and quit their jobs."

"How do you know, if you've never hired any?" flashed Polly.

The young managing editor was about to answer her again when Ted Lowry, the city editor, called: "Hey, Tom, where's Towner? There's been an accident at Market and Broad streets, and I haven't got anybody here to send out."

"Towner's out of town," snapped Wardell. "Get Binney on the phone, and tell him to go over."

"I can't," said the city editor. "He's at the fire up in the North End."

Polly had been listening avidly to the conversation. Turning quickly to the managing editor, she said:

"Let me cover this accident. It'll give you an opportunity to learn first hand whether women are good reporters."

Wardell looked at her for a second, and then, smiling for the first time since Polly had been in the office, said: "Okay, lady, go to it. Let's see what you can do."

• • •

When Polly returned with the details of the accident she summarized the story for the managing editor, and asked:

"How much do you want?"

"About a half column." Then, winking at the city editor, he added: "And it had better be good."

After reading Polly's story, Wardell tossed it over to the city desk without even looking at her. His only comment was: "Not bad for a girl reporter."

"Do I get a job?" asked Polly.

"Yes, I guess you're worth a trial. But you probably won't stay long. Just about the time you're beginning to get valuable to us you undoubtedly will get married."

"You needn't worry about that," Polly laughed.

"I won't," Wardell retorted.

One evening about two months later the managing editor stopped at Polly's desk, and said: "Put some powder on your nose and come along to dinner. I want to talk to you."

Polly's heart almost stopped beating. Although she had done everything she could to please him since she had been on the Breeze, Polly hardly had been noticed by the managing editor. The two brief sentences he had just uttered contained the most friendly words he ever had spoken to her.

"So far I've been wrong about at least one woman reporter," Wardell began, when he and Polly were seated in a restaurant near the office. "You've been doing fine work, Polly, but I'm going to give you one more test. If you stand this I'll take back all I said the day you came in for a job. If you don't, you're through."

"What is the test?" asked Polly.

"You're going to help me cover the two state political conventions, and it is going to be a tough job. The first one is next week."

Polly worked harder during the next two weeks than she ever had worked before. But she had a glorious time. She was sure her work had been satisfactory, for Tom had been unusually kind, even tender at times, and because of this Polly hardly could believe her ears when he told her she was through as a reporter.

"You will find two weeks' extra pay waiting for you at the office," he said, as the special convention train sped them homeward. "You've had your last assignment."

"Why?" asked Polly, incredulous. "Didn't I do good work?"

"You did wonderful work, darling," Tom said, heedless of the other passengers as he slipped his arm around her. "But I don't want you as a reporter any longer. I want you as my wife. You see, I was right when I said women reporters got married just about the time they were getting valuable to their newspapers."

"Oh," said Polly, snuggling down closer to him. Then: "Tom."

"Yes, dear."

"I'm glad you were right."

Right Plates or Dishes for Soup

With the return to style of soup plates it is important for the homemaker to be acquainted with the different kinds of soups best suited to being served in them, and in bouillon cups, also called soup cups. The very name, bouillon, indicates the kind of soup originaly intended to be served in these cups. The word is French for a clear soup or a beef broth. Fashion decreed for some time that all varieties of soup should be served in these bouillon cups, but now there is a return to the more proper method, of suiting the soup to the dishes.

The chief distinction to suitability of soups to serve in cups or in plates is their density. Clear soups, even though they may not be strained as in bouillon or consomme, but have some solid pieces of ingredients in them, are the sort to be served in cups. Cream soups and heavy soups such as chowders, oyster and other stew soups, etc., should be served in soup plates. When soup is in cups, there is the inference that they may be sipped as well as taken with spoons. Heavy soups cannot be so sipped, and there should be no hint in the way it is served that such an inconsistency is considered.

Serving thin soup in plates is not a faux pas. The first return of style in serving such soup in plates was when glass soup plates appeared. Clear soup showed off the beauty of the glass most advantageously, and was served in it. Therefore the young homemaker need not have both cups and soup plates, but may, with propriety, use soup plates for all soups. The same cannot be said any longer of bouillon cups.

Clear soups must be of sufficient strength to make the watery liquid full flavored. Meat is the recognized essence to be imparted. Chicken, lamb, and beef broth are delicate and delicious when properly made. The fresh meat, of whichever kind, is covered with water brought to a boil and then allowed to simmer until the water has become rich in flavor from the meat juices. Salt and pepper are the condiments to use. If an onion is cooked in the water, no particles should remain in the soup when served. Also all fat should be skimmed off.

Consomme can be made from a combination of meats such as chicken and a ham bone, knuckle of veal and beef soup meat, etc. With the meat are boiled and simmered vegetables, such as celery, carrots, turnip; and the condiments of salt and pepper may be augmented with a very little mace and cloves, one blade of mace or one-eighth teaspoonful and four to six cloves are sufficient for four pounds of the combined meats and four quarts of cold water. Consomme is strained and may be clarified by straining through a cloth.

APPOINTED A MEMBER UTILITY COMMISSION

James B. Balch, Local Summer Resident, Is Named

Governor Comstock last Thursday appointed James B. Balch of Kalamazoo, as member of the Michigan public utilities commission. Mr. Balch, a Charlevoix summer resident and president of the Belvedere Club, is also chairman of the state NRA advisory board. He assumed his duties Monday.

Balch's selection was the first since the dismissal by the Governor of Commissioners Kit F. Clardy, Harry C. McClure and Edward T. Fitzgerald on charges of "misfeasance, malfeasance and neglect of duty in office."

Although the law provides for five members, the executive has indicated he will limit the commission to three for the present.

HEAD TAX PROSECUTION RULED ILLEGAL

Non-Payment, However, Is Punishable, According to Opinion

The state lacks authority to penalize persons who fail to register before next October under the $2 head tax clause of the old age pension act, members of the legislature have been informed by the attorney general's department.

The state can, however, legally insist upon payment of the tax by March 1 and can take action against those who refuse to do so, Judson E. Richardson, assistant attorney general, informed the legislature last week during the course of a discussion on the pension act.

He said that the act did not go into effect in time to require registration this year, but that the clause imposing the head tax did become effective in 1934.

GEIKEN RESIDENCE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Loss Estimated at $5,000—Result from Blaze Tuesday Morning

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the roof and practically the entire third floor of the Geik C. Geiken residence, one of Charlevoix's oldest homes and a city land mark, Tuesday forenoon.

Due to the location of the house on the crest of the Belvedere avenue terrace, the blaze was exposed to a heavy wind and for some time resisted efforts of the fire department. The upper structure was on fire in four different places when the department arrived.

The loss, estimated at $5,000, included destruction of the entire third floor and extensive damage caused from tons of water thrown on the flames. The house is insured.

LOCAL WOMEN ENTERTAIN WITH BIRTHDAY AFFAIR AT PETOSKEY

Mrs. Phillip Lemieur and Mrs. Margaret Hamilton, this city, were joint hostesses at a very delightful birthday party given Tuesday evening in honor of the former's daughter, Mrs. Oscar Swenor, at her home in Petoskey.

A pleasant evening was spent playing bridge, honors at which went to Mrs. Frances Hamilton and Mrs. Olive McKenzie. The door prize was awarded Mrs. Lillian Hull. Following cards delicious refreshments were served. Very pretty decorations were carried out in pink, yellow and green and this color combination was followed in the favors, table decorations and the huge birthday cake.

Those present at the delightful affair besides the hostesses were Mrs. Ross Alexander of Ironton, Mrs. Howard Lettig and Mrs. C. J. Garner of Petoskey, Mrs. Hummel and daughter of Detroit, and the following from Charlevoix, Mesdames Barnes, Champ Ye, Lance Neff, Leo Carney, Frank Coletta, Dan Cannon, Lee Hamilton, Leo Allard, Ralph Hamilton, Margaret Bacot, Opal Allard, Olive McKenzie, Edith Zeitler, Lillian Hull, Lila McFarland, Louis Orlowski, Mollie Smith, and the Misses Dell Lemieur and Reta Gilbert.

such contract with a city of the fourth class. Judge Gilbert held it could not. He stated further that the contract attempted in this case does not provide for anything other than private sale of the bonds, while the statutes of the State of Michigan require the bonds be advertised to the public and not sold for less than the best public bid.

Judge Gilbert also held that Act 94 by its terms is subject to being severed, that each section is passed on seperately and that the elimination of these objectionable sections does not impair any of the others and that aside from the portions held invalid the Act is in force.

In respect to Charlevoix's case, Judge Gilbert contended that the election held here relative to sewage disposal bonds was not provided for in Act 94 and for that reason was immaterial insofar as construing Act 94 is concerned, and that the bonds voted in Charlevoix may be valid, but they cannot be issued under Act 94.

The entire matter will be reviewed on appeal by the Supreme Court of Michigan, and for this reason the rulings made Tuesday are not final unless sustained.

Torch songs — the new type of blues that heart-broken ladies wail. The songs that tell the story of the man, who done her wrong, who went away and left his girl sighing, crying and without even something to remember him by. "Sing Sinner Sing," the Majestic Picture scheduled to open at the Palace theatre, on Saturday for a two-day run, is the story of a torch-singer, whose moaning low takes on a new twist, when all the sad tales of unrequited love which she sings about, come to be part of her own life.

The lovely Leila Hyams is the torch singer in this new film, which tells of a night club entertainer, Miss Hyams, who marries a young, perpetually drunk multi-millionaire and, who later, due to a frame-up by one of her past lovers, is accused of murdering her husband, when he is found dead in their apartment shortly after a hilarious, drunken brawl. Paul Lukas is co-starred with Miss Hyams and the supporting cast includes Donald Dillaway, Ruth Donnelly, George E. Stone, Joyce Compton and Jill Dennett. Howard Christy directed the film, which is an adaptation by Edward T. Lowe of a stage play by Wilson Collison.

CARNIVAL DANCE DREW BIG CROWD

LEGION PLANS ST. PATRICK'S MASQUERADE PARTY

Feature of Affair Was Drawing of Coupons—Numbers Drawn Are Listed in Full

(By F. V. Tyler.)

One of the best crowds that has attended a public dance this year enjoyed themselves at the high school gymnasium last Saturday evening, the affair being the culmination of the winter carnival day program staged by the local post of the American Legion under the auspices of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce. The galleries were packed and many of the spectators, unable to resist the good music and general atmosphere of cheerfulness below, changed their gallery tickets into dance admissions.

So successful was this dance that another of them—this time to be a masquerade—was announced from the floor, Saturday evening, for St. Patrick's day. Prizes will be offered for the best costume among those who come masqued. Masquing will not, however, be compulsory for admission to the dance.

One of the most interesting features of the evening's entertainment was Rev. G. R. Parker's clever wielding of the paint brush in connection with the giving away of the merchants' prizes and the grand prize. Many have not called, as yet, to claim their prizes, nor even the grand prize. To help matters a little, a list of the merchants giving prizes appears herewith:

LEGION ACTIVITIES

By F. V. Tyler

Attendance at meetings is increasing and new members are being added to the post roster. The total paid membership of Leslie T. Shapton post is now seventy-five.

One of the most important matters to come before the post members for action, Tuesday evening, was the formation of a Charlevoix County council of fifteen to represent the three Legion posts of Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan and support the interests of all ex-servicemen in the county. Since the establishment of the CWA, it has become increasingly apparent that the unemployed ex-servicemen, lacking the support of a strong and well co-ordinated organization, is not likely to reap the benefit of the special benefit clause in the government regulations governing employment under the CWA. Other objectives making for improved conditions among ex-servicemen have been found difficult of attainment without county-wide cooperation. Out of this situation has grown the idea of the county council—a body that can speak with authority for the Legionnaire and ex-serviceman over a wider territory.

An initial meeting was held last Friday night at East Jordan, with representatives from the three posts present, and a rough outline plan presented. The matter was then brought before the membership of the three posts for approval and on Tuesday evening permanent delegates or councilmen from Leslie T. Shapton post, to the number of five, were elected. They are Shirley B. Henry, Fred V. Tyler, Clarence B. Meggison, Neal Kemp and Sam E. King. The first regular meeting of the newly formed council will be held at Boyne City on Thursday evening, March 1st.

POLAR BEARS BEAT TRAVERSE C. ELKS

CLOSED HOME SCHEDULE WITH 25 TO 21 VICTORY

Won Second Tilt From Manistee Last Thursday by 29 to 26 Count—Have One More Game

The Charlevoix Polar Bears wound up their home basketball schedule Tuesday night with a 25 to 21 victory over the highly-touted Traverse City Elks, eliminants to the northern Michigan championship.

In Traverse, the Polar Bears met probably the classiest outfit to play on the local court this season, and the contest which resulted was one of the best basketball exhibitions witnessed here in some time.

Traverse failed to score in the initial period, their many tries rimming the hoop in an aggravating manner, while the Polar Bears scored two goals and a gift shot for a 5 to 0 advantage at the quarter. They added 7 more points in the second stanza and Richter found the meshes twice for Traverse. Opening the third period with a 12 and 4 advantage availed the Polar Bears little, for the Elks started going places. When the session ended Traverse was leading, 13 and 12, adding 8 points while holding the Bears scoreless. The final period was a free scoring affair. Charlevoix's offense was the more potent, resulting in 13 points to 8 for the visitors and a 5-point margin of victory.

Joe Smith, with 9 points, was high for the Polar Bears. Kipke scored 5, Brown 4, Davenport 3, Beaudoin and Supernaw 2 each. Kellogg, forward, was best for the visitors with 8.

The Polar Bears go to Traverse for a return game next Tuesday, March 6th.

Win From Manistee

Last Thursday evening the Polar Bears went to Manistee and hung up their second victory of the season over the fast Iron Works outfit by a 29 to 26 count. In a contest that was close in every period, the Polar Bears led all the way. They were out in front 9 and 8 at the quarter, 17 to 13 at the half and 23 to 19 at the third intermission. Ikens was high point man with 10, Smith had 7, Supernaw 6, Kipke 4 and Kirby 2.

Team scores for the evening were 14,667 for the Odd Fellows and 13,926 for the Masons, a difference of 741 or more than half of the 1,335 lead piled up by the Masons so far in the series. Alfred Gill turned in the highest Odd Fellow score, 953 points, while H. R. Fowler was high for the Masons with 943.

The eighth and final game of the series will be played Monday evening, March 5th, at the Masonic temple.

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be thus regulated to suit individual need.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna —a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

New Ink Fails to Injure Paper

Scientists of the United States bureau of standards have developed an alkaline ink that has little, if any, deteriorating effect on paper. Ammonia replaces the acid used in other inks. The experts inked papers and subjected them to accelerated aging by the application of heat. If ordinary ink was used, the heat treatment resulted in rapid embrittlement of the paper and folding endurance was decreased by as much as 50 per cent. Alkaline-inked paper passed the heat test successfully.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

All sorts of ancient beads cut to resemble an eye, found on the sites of old cities of Mesopotamia, are treasured by modern natives of the district as charms against every sickness and evil spell. EMUS IN RUSSIA

The Soviet authorities have started a scheme to "populate" the steppes of Russia with Australian emus. Preliminary experiments in this direction were begun under the first five-year plan, and they are now said to be satisfactory, the emu having shown that it can withstand the cold winters of Russia as far north as Moscow. The official report of the new scheme points out that the emu is a bird, with edible flesh and that its eggs contain from 600 to 700 grammes of nutritious food. For the moment, however, it is intended not to eat the eggs, but to use them for hatching, and special incubators have been constructed.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system; or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem: Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. Parents are urged to use just pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says 'California'.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Application Blanks for Production Credit Loans Have Been Received

All farmers desiring to apply for a Production Credit Association loan can do so by coming to the county agent's office in Boyne City. These blanks have been received and are ready for applicants at any time.

This loan quite largely covers the purposes of the crop production seed loan and the livestock loan. These two loans have been available for the last two years. We have been informed that everyone applying for a seed loan must first apply through the Production Credit association at Gaylord. If refused there, there is still a possibility that they can secure a loan from the Federal Crop Production Seed Loan, which has just recently passed congress and been signed by the President.

These loans are for a short time, not to exceed 12 months, the interest 6%, and in order to secure a loan the applicant must take out 6% in stock as this is a cooperative bank and through this method each borrower has his voting franchise. Each applicant must pay the cost of appraisal which cannot exceed 10% of the amount of the loan, but the minimum fee is $2.00. The money may be used for crop production, livestock production and other farm uses but the security must be ample to take care of the loan. These loans should be of immense assistance to farmers in need of short term credit.

I would suggest that if you are in need of a loan to take care of this matter immediately as under the present conditions, it will take three weeks before the loan is completed and spring will soon be here. For the purpose of making out applications, kindly come before 4 o'clock in the afternoon as office help will not be available after that.

Corn-Hog Program Is Developing Rapidly

Over 100 farmers in the county have already received the material necessary in joining the corn-hog program. The signing up part of the program can be speeded up if each farmer will fill in the desired information as rapidly as possible. Each farmer should secure whatever evidence that can be secured in regard to the number of hogs, how sold and to whom sold, as this is necessary to assure the allotment committee of the disposition of his hogs.

Within a very few days, sign-up dates will be given to each co-operator so that the final contracts can be drafted in the county agent's office.

If any farmer has not yet sent in his reply, do so at once as already two circular letters have been sent to each farmer in the county and if your reply has not been received, we take it for granted that you are not interested in joining the program.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Subject for Sunday, March 4, is "Christ Jesus."

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 6 p. m.

"Mind" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 25.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Isa. 43:1): "But now thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p.331): "Everything in God's universe expresses Him. He is all-inclusive, and is reflected by all that is real and eternal and by nothing else. He fills all space, and it is impossible to conceive of such omnipresence and individuality except as infinite Spirit or Mind."

"Selfishness is the greatest curse of the human race."—Gladstone.

What sort of a world would this world be, if everybody were just like me?

By the scant margin of 8 votes, the smallest majority ever recorded here, L. S. See, incumbent, won the republican nomination for mayor over Arthur Bergeon in the primary election Monday.

The three city wards cast 946 votes which nearly approaches any previous high mark. Majorities for See were given in the first and third wards with the second going to Bergeon. Following is the city vote for mayor:

1st—See 85	Bergeon 51
2nd—See 201	Bergeon 237
3rd—See 191	Bergeon 181
477	469

The balance of the republican city ticket was nominated without opposition as follows:

Clerk—Ray S. Hamilton.

Treasurer—Robert E. Rife.

Park Commissioners—William H. Wallace, Fred E. Cartier.

Justice of the Peace—Robert Withers.

Third Ward Makes Changes

Harry A. Craig and Arthur Ranger, republican incumbents for supervisor and alderman, respectively, in the first ward, were nominated without opposition, as was also Frank Partridge for supervisor in the second precinct. Floyd J. Fessenden, incumbent alderman of the second ward, defeated Robert J. Madill by a margin of fifty votes for the nomination.

The third precinct, the city's political "hot spot," staged a complete change-over, defeating the incumbents for both supervisor and alderman by decisive margins.

For supervisor, William E. Parmelee lost to David J. Eckinger, a former alderman, by 42 votes, and Joseph J. Hallett won the nomination for alderman over William Higman by a majority of 63.

Two Tickets in April

Winning republican nominees at Monday's primary will be opposed by a democratic slate, headed by R. F. Sloan for mayor, at the general election on Monday, April 2.

BOYNE WINNER OF DISTRICT TOURNEY

DEFEATED CHARLEVOIX BY 18 TO 17 SCORE IN CLASS C FINALS AT HARBOR SPRINGS SATURDAY

Pellston Romped to Easy Victories in Class D Title Race — Charlevoix Draws St. Francis of Traverse City in First Round of Regional at Petoskey

Boyne City, twice defeated in pre-tournament games by Harbor Springs and once by Charlevoix, the Tip of Michigan class C conference champions, vanquished both of its former victors to win the district class C title at the Harbor Springs tournament last week.

Thus the old saying: "Anything can happen at a basketball tournament," was proven quite conclusively, and as a result, Boyne goes to the regional tournament at Petoskey this week the favorite.

Drawing the favored position in class C competition when matched with Central Lake, a new-comer in class C ranks, Charlevoix romped off to an easy victory in its opening tournament contest. The Kipmen, using largely a substitute line-up after the first quarter, buried the Antrim county team under a 32 to 5 score, with Pearl, forward, snaring six field goals and free throw, leading the attack. The victory put the Kipmen in the final.

Boyne Had Hard Assignment

In the upper bracket Boyne drew Harbor Springs, favored to reach the finals along with Charlevoix, and in a hotly-contested first round game, was victorious by a 15 to 14 score.

Friday night the Boyne outfit, with Fitzpatrick leading the way, ran wild over East Jordan to win a 33 to 16 victory and place in the finals against Charlevoix.

Defeat Kipmen 18 to 17

In winning from Charlevoix, the Boyne cagers repeated their previous one-point victory over Harbor Springs in the first round of the tournament. Assuming an early lead, Boyne was never headed, although they were decisively out-scored in the second half of the contest. The Kipmen, apparently nervous and badly off form, missed many scoring chances in the first two quarters. Trailing by a wide margin at the half, their rally in the last two period failed by a single point to tie the score. The score book revealed Charlevoix scored eight field goals to seven for Boyne, but the victors tallied four free throws to one for Charlevoix. Pearl was again high for the Kipmen with 8 points, while Fitzpatrick and Kujawski with 5 each share scoring honors for Boyne.

Pellston Class D Champs

Pellston, undefeated in regular play throughout the season, carried true to predictions in winning the district class D crown. The Pellston team, coached by Harold Ikens of this city, buried Alanson 55 to 11, Ellsworth 32 to 8, and won the final from Bellaire by a 29 to 19 margin.

Regional Tourney This Week

Charlevoix goes to the regional tournament this week and local fans believe the team will redeem their lost prestige on Petoskey's larger court.

The complete drawing and time for games follow:

Class B: Petoskey vs. Alpena, Thursday at 9:30 p. m.; winner of Petoskey-Alpena game vs. Cheboygan, Friday at 9:25 p. m.; Manistee vs. Traverse City, Friday at 10:30 p. m.; finals, Saturday at 9:40 p. m.

CARNIVAL PLAN TO BE EXTENDED

ST. PATRICK'S DAY DATE FOR DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES

Merchants to Be Furnished New Rolls of Tickets, Free of Charge, to Give Their Customers

(By F. V. Tyler.)

Due to the fact that there has been some hitch in the claiming of prizes given out at the carnival night program on February 24th, it has been expressed as their opinion by quite a few of the merchants who participated in the plan that the trade coupon distribution should be continued for another two weeks, culminating in the dance at the gymnasium on the evening of St. Patrick's day, March 17th.

To this end, the unused tickets on hand—some forty rolls of five hundred each—will be distributed among the merchants who care to continue the plan, free of charge, with the understanding that they will get rid of all of them to their customers before March 17th and that no merchant will be permitted to claim his own prize or the grand prize. This will give the merchant who still has an unclaimed prize in his store a chance to get rid of it and also give the committee a chance to move the radio, offered for a grand prize, and which has so far not been claimed.

This plan may start immediately on receipt of the tickets which will be distributed shortly, and continue until the 17th, at which time all of the tickets must be in the hands of customers.

As to the first try-out of the coupon plan, which ended on February 24th, it seems to be generally considered a success and some of the merchants who were doubtful about it in the first place are now its warmest supporters, so far did its results exceed their expectations. Some are already a king if it cannot be continued at some date during the summer season and a more valuable prize offered.

COMMERCIAL FISH PRODUCTION DROP

DECREASE WHITEFISH CATCH ACCOUNTS FOR HALF

Report Conservation Dept. Fish Division Points to Deep Sea Trap Net Menace

A drop of nearly 4,000,000 pounds in the production of Michigan's commercial fisheries from the 1932 figure is seen in the report of the fish division, state department of conservation, for the year of 1933. More than half this drop is represented by a decrease in the catch of whitefish, the supply of which experts maintain is menaced by the use of deep-sea trapnets.

The deep-sea trapnet was introduced into Great Lakes waters in 1929. Statistics furnished to the fish division show that the production of whitefish began immediately to increase. In 1929 the catch totalled 6,775,000 pounds. The following year saw a production of 7,804,000, the peak of all time in Michigan's records coming in 1931 when the take amounted to 8,453,000.

That the saturation point in the whitefish supply may have been overtaken by the thorough manner in which the trapnet operates in a specific locality is indicated by decreased catches in 1932 and 1933. The year of 1932, following the peak production of 1931, saw a catch of 7,855,765. In 1933 a greater drop was revealed when the total catch amounted to 5,592,048.

A compilation of whitefish production in Michigan waters during the last half decade shows that the total for the period exceeds that of the entire 12 years preceding.

Giving due consideration to the common annual fluctuations in supply as well as in production as affected by weather and market conditions, Fred A. Westerman, chief of the fish division, believes that some significance may be attached to the coincident increase in the whitefish catch and the use of the trapnet.

In some areas where the trapnet has been used, the fish division reports, the supply of whitefish has apparently almost been exhausted. At a single port on Lake Huron last year trapnets caught more than 1,500,000 pounds of whitefish or more than half the total yield of Lake normally there were probably five or six. The take in 1933 at this port was four times greater than that of the year before.

The common fluctuations in the production of whitefish and other

CORRESPONDENCE

ST. JAMES, BEAVER ISLAND

The grim hand of death has again taken toll and snatched from our midst the highly respected and beloved Mrs. Hugh E. Boyle. To the island "Anne," as she was commonly known, was the soul of philantrophy and her kind, gentle ways endeared her to everyone. On May 2, 1859, Anne McDonough first opened her eyes to the world in County Galway, Ireland. She spent her girlhood in Erin, and at the age of nineteen, migrated to this country and came directly to Beaver Island.

That same year she entered the employ of Rev. Peter Gallagher, remaining at the rectory for twelve years. Her romance with Hugh Boyle of the Island, terminated in their marriage in February of 1890. Their lives, until her death, were spent in Peaine town-hip, where her four sons and daughter passed through childhood.

A sublime incident in her life is the fact that she has been separated from her husband on only one occasion during their forty-four years together.

Mrs. Boyle is survived by her husband, Hugh, and family, Edward, Patrick and Thomas Boyle of Chicago; Mrs. Anthony Greene and Earl Boyle of St. James' boy brothers, Valentine and Patrick McDonough of Escanaba; Thomas and James McDonough of St. James, and a sister, Mrs. Owen McAuley of St. Joseph, Michigan.

Interment was held at Holy Cross cemetery, the Rev. Father McLaughlin officiating.

SHE FOUND A WAY OUT

She Had to Have Money and This Is How She Earned It

Mrs. Lonise Timbarthy, like thousands of other women, a short time ago was confronted with a positive need for more money. Her husband had been out of work for some time and their savings were almost gone. She couldn't have taken a regular job if she had found one because her children needed her care. But she found a way out of her difficulties, and she is willing to tell the world how she did it. She said she was reading this newspaper one day when she noticed this advertisement:

CUT ME OUT

and mail me, with your name and address to LORD & AMES, Inc., 360 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago. I will bring you a free sample of Loray Face Powder and details how to make $50.00 a week extra in your spare time.

She answered the advertisement and received the free samples by return mail with a letter telling her how to start in business.

Mrs. Timbarthy started to work that day by showing the samples to some of her friends. She didn't meet with any encouragement. The second day was a little better. The third day was just "terrible." In fact, the results from her first week's work were sad and disappointing. She found she had earned exactly $1.10.

However, on the fourth week orders began to come in from the women to whom she had shown her samples and her second calls were more successful. She earned $14.75 on her fourth week and for the past three months her income has ranged from $6.00 to $21.00 a week, according to the number of hours she has been able to spare from her housework. Besides, she gets all her own beauty aids and cosmetics at less than wholesale price.

She advises any woman confronted with the same problem she faced to cut out and mail the little advertisement.—Adv.

Tobacco King's Heiress in Terror of Kidnapers

Richest Girl Surrounded by Many Employees.

For $50,000,000 is a prize for the abduction sharks of gangdom to shoot at and no one knows it better than Doris Duke, who so lately won title to the great fortune left by her father, James Buchanan Duke, the so-called "tobacco king." And Doris is taking no chances of being captured and held for ransom—none at least that liberal expenditures from her great wealth can eliminate.

She has literally surrounded her personable young self and all her possessions with guards, in one guise or another. The Duke marble mansion in East Seventy-eighth street just off Fifth avenue fairly swarms with them inside and out. Her 5,000 acre country estate near Somerville, N. J., is patroled by a veritable army of motorcycle policemen. In addition to the uniformed guards detectives in the garb of workmen are scattered throughout the estate.

Virtually Impregnable.

The Duke estate, "Rough Point" at Newport, R. I., is situated on a promontory overlooking the sea and in addition to its natural defenses is guarded fully as closely as the New Jersey kingdom of the heiress. To all intent and purposes it is virtually impregnable.

In addition to the gun toting, shield bearing employees of her numerous staff, the "richest debutante" has each and every one of her many servants checked up regularly—and carefully—by a private detective agency.

Various other precautions are taken to safeguard her seclusion and safety. She never goes out, for instance, without a bodyguard and is generally accompanied additionally by her mother, her half-brother, Walker Patterson, or both. She shuns social activity to an unusual degree for a girl of her wealth and standing and seldom confides her "going out" plans to anybody but her mother.

Friends of hers say she often permits the impression to gain circulation that she is where she is not. When she is reported to be at Duke farms, for instance, they say it is usually safe to bet that she is staying at her town house here in the city or vice versa.

She travels by airplane in preference to train or boat or automobile when she has any considerable distance to go.

Her "pet aversion" is the newspaper camera man and on the rare occasions when she is caught off guard she usually manages to spoil the picture by a quick turn of the head—or otherwise. Photographers agree that she never "looks" the camera in the eye."

Avoids Gatherings.

She almost never attends "first nights" at the theatre and society gatherings where she is liable to publicity as a "notable."

Just how much of all this is due to the many threatening letters reported to have been received by the heiress or members of her family or to the wave of kidnaping which has been sweeping the country for the last year or so is, of course, a matter of conjecture. Members of her family have found occasion from time to time to deny published stories that she was fleeing from one to another of her "strongholds" on account of these threats, but her growing reticence and seclusion has become a matter of wide newspaper comment.

For several years the heiress has been interested in philanthropy and is known to have several poor East side families on her "list," but associates suspect that she does not get the pleasure she is entitled to out of her benefactions because of her deep seated distrust of the unknown public. When she visits one of her "beneficiaries" it is said she always goes disguised, unidentified, with a couple of bodyguards in close attendance. Incidentally she has been seen on Fifth avenue and elsewhere wearing heavy shell rimmed smoked glasses several times here of late and this has given rise to a widespread suspicion that she was taking to "cheaters" as a disguise.

Scientists Seek Site of Old Indian Village

Murphy, N. C.—With the location of the ancient Indian village of Gunsill still unsettled by historians, Smithsonian Institute workers hope to prove that the village was located in Cherokee county, N. C., instead of in the Nacoochee valley of White county, Ga.

Under the direction of J. D. Jennings, archeologist of the Institute, excavations have already begun in an ancient burial mound at the mouth of Peachtree creek, near here. The mound, which is 18 feet high and 450 feet in circumference, is believed to contain skeletons and various relics which will definitely establish the site of the village.

Several skeletons, heads, arrowheads and other objects have been unearthed by farmers plowing in the vicinity.

Wingless Rooster Interests Scientists

Hope for Light on Mechanism of Flight.

Washington.—A wingless Plymouth Rock rooster, now in the National Zoological park, may afford science some light on the evolutionary origin and mechanism of flight.

This bird, now about six months old, is a perfectly normal specimen in every respect except that it has no wings. Wingless specimens of normally winged birds reported hitherto have died shortly after birth. But apparently the abnormal progress of this rooster in the egg went on without the disturbance of anything except the flight mechanism.

It was obtained by Dr. Herbert Friedmann, curator of birds of the Smithsonian Institution, from Mrs. Olla Deering of Rose Hill, Ky. Dr. Friedmann hopes to find out from him what happened to inhibit the growth of wings—provided dissection shows that he had no rudimentary wing bones inside his body. This is the case with some wingless families such as the kiwis of New Zealand. They have wings which do not "come out." The wings of a bird are modifications of the same structures which become the front legs, or arms of a mammal.

If the point of failure in the development of this bird can be established it may throw some light on the general problem of the physical mechanism of bird flight itself and of its loss in some species, not yet understandable from normal embryological material.

The earliest known birds, such as the fantastic archeopteryx, possessed well-developed wings. Loss of power of flight represents a degenerative rather than a primitive condition among living birds.

The flightless young rooster, serenely unconscious that he is being watched so enviously as the possible custodian of a secret which has defied science so long, acts like any other bird of his age, sex and species, except that it has no flying instinct. When it is placed, ravenously hungry, on a table and corn strewn on the floor it hesitates a long time before taking the risk of jumping down to obtain it.

World's Largest Cross Rises in San Francisco

San Francisco.—The world's largest cross, a concrete emblem that will rise 100 feet above the crest of Mount Davidson, is under construction here. It will serve as the focal point in San Francisco's traditional Easter sunrise service.

When lighted each Easter season, the cross' luminous shape will be visible 100 miles on clear nights. The huge crossed shaft will be seen on clear days throughout the San Francisco bay region, rising from the three-crested highest hill in San Francisco.

The city park commission, which is building the cross at a cost of $15,000, tradition of more than a decade of lighted cross and Easter sunrise services on Mount Davidson.

Resting on a concrete base block 18 feet in diameter, the center shaft of the emblem will rise 1,020 feet above sea level. It will be 10 feet square at the base and 3 feet square at the top of the 100 foot structure. The cross-arms will be 33 feet from tip to tip and 71 feet from the base.

Three wooden crosses have been raised on Mount Davidson, serving as the focal point for more than 40,000 persons who gathered each year for the services. The first cross was burned.

A feature of this celebration of this anniversary of America's oldest educational institution will be the publication of a new history of Harvard university.

Mountain Moving 20 Feet Each Day

Pistoria, Italy.—Nearly one whole side of the mountain that overlooks the village of San Marcello Pistoiese has been in slow but steady movement for some time.

It moves at the rate of about 20 feet a day, sometimes a little more and sometimes less. The phenomenon is really a kind of landslide, but instead of the fall of the land being violent and rapid, is deliberate and slow. In the case of the "moving mountain."

The disturbance in the soil is deep, for the woods on the summit of the mountain move slowly and majestically down the slopes in perfect formation. It is not the mere surface which is moving, but the soil for a considerable depth covering the roots of big chestnuts and pines.

The strange phenomenon has attracted great attention and visitors are arriving every day to see the "mountain that walks." Almost nothing is disturbed as the land proceeds in its slow, irresistible fashion down to the River Lima, in which already great quantities of earth have fallen. Huts and gates, fences and vehicles have been carried bodily down to the river without being destroyed or broken.

Origin of the Alphabet Still Point of Dispute

Whether the alphabet was invented by the Semitic miners who were working in the turquoise mines of the Sinai peninsula, or whether the alphabet originated with the Phoenicians, scholars are not yet ready to decide, says Science Service, reported by the Kansas City Star. Prof. Romain Butin of the Catholic University of America says, however, that in any case the alphabet came into existence no later than 2000 B. C. Professor Butin spoke on the origin of the alphabet before a meeting of the Archeological Institute of America at Syracuse, N. Y.

Up to a few years ago the Moabite stone of the Ninth century B. C. was the oldest Phoenician writing known. Then alphabetic writings by the Phoenicians as old as the Thirteenth century before Christ were found at Byblos. The practical-minded Phoenicians were commonly credited with giving the world the alphabet.

The discovery that stone tablets from the Sinai peninsula bore crude alphabet characters upset theories as to age and origin of the alphabet. Professor Butin, who examined the tablets in Cairo, and made a translation, still is studying their significance.

In these tablets, he said, the alphabet system is not yet standardized. The shorthand of alphabet signs is shown in a transitional stage from its picture origin. A house, "Beth," might be drawn with one or two rooms, with or without a door, but it was still "Beth" and it stood alphabetically for B. A human head might be drawn in profile or full face, but it was recognized as a human head, and its value was R, the first letter in the word "Resh."

The names of the objects which the Sinai people used in their alphabet seem to be identical with those on which the Phoenician alphabet was founded, Professor Butin said. But the oldest Phoenician signs known already are so conventionalized that they seem to be evolved from earlier forms.

There is a strong temptation to say that the Phoenician alphabet, as it appears on the oldest monuments, is evolved from the script of the Sinai tablets, Professor Butin said, but this is not proved. The original form of the Phoenician alphabet still is to be found, and it may turn out to be older than the Sinai tablets, which are dated at about 1900 or 2000 B. C.

INDIVIDUALISM

If we of this generation lose the last opportunity in America for individual business, then remember we lose it, not for ourselves alone but for our posterity. Let us remember that we are not passing on to our posterity the opportunities which our fathers and mothers passed on to us. Let us remember that if we permit the proud estate of individual opportunity of the individual American citizen to perish during our generation, then we have in a cowardly manner betrayed alike our forbears and posterity.—Cong. Harold M. McGugin, of Kansas.

OLD AGE SECURITY

This is a mighty nation with a glorious past. We cherish and honor our past and realize that it contains for us some valuable lessons. In looking toward the future we should not forget the past, but in thinking of the past we must not forget the future. The future is the realm in which we and our children will grow old. Upon the security of the individual rests the security of the Nation. Some method must be devised to insure the future of the individual or the future of the Nation cannot be assured. Too long have we believed on such of the old sayings as "Virtue is its own reward." Too often they prove to be practical only insofar as virtue being the only reward of virtue. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" fills no empty stomachs in this world of stern realities and relentless competition. Hunger, illness, cold, misery, and old age are not conditions in the abstract. They are real, personal, pathetic, distressing, and dangerous. Let us insist that some of the talents of this Nation be devoted to their relief. Each passing day adds to the number of our unfortunates and accentuates their need. Let us demand that the poorhouse be relegated to the past along with slavery, the rack, and the prison for debtors.—Charles I. Faddis.

DEMOBILIZATION

It will take several week to determine just how unpopular the tapering off program of the CWA will be with those who have benefitted directly from the government's lavish relief program, for many of the workers who have enjoyed a salary check for the first time in several years will be "on the road" again in search of an honest chance to make a living. Their resentment at life in general can be softened only by continued sympathy and understanding on the part of the public who must continue by private donation much of the relief work being lopped off the federal program.

There is much to be said for a gradual elimination of direct government relief. With summer weather ahead, with business on the uptrend, it is well for the individual to be "on his own" in an effort to work out his own problem. This country has been built by individuals who had the courage to do things for themselves. It is important that self-reliance be forced upon those who have, of necessity, accepted assistance during the period of world-wide distress. The best course for the government to pursue is to see that industry receives proper financing, because industry in the long run must absorb a large portion of our unemployed if we are to achieve prosperity.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Man" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, March 11.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Eccl. 12:1): "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p.246): "Except for the error of measuring and limiting all that is good and beautiful, man would enjoy more than three score years and ten and still maintain his vigor, freshness, and promise. Man, governed by immortal Mind, is always beautiful and grand. Each succeeding year unfolds wisdom, beauty, and holiness."

ROAD CONSTRUCTION EMPLOY THOUSANDS

Over Five Hundred Miles to Be Improved This Spring

"Michigan's 1934 highway construction program of more than 280 separate projects extending into all 83 counties, which will be ready to go forward when warm weather brings the spring break-up, will involve the expenditure of approximately $11,000,000 and give employment to about 30,000 men during the construction season," according to State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner.

The construction program will improve approximately 550 miles of highway and build many new bridges and grade separations, is to be financed from the uncarned balance of the $12,736,000 National Recovery Act road grant to Michigan from the federal government.

DON'T PROSECUTE, IS NEW HEAD TAX ORDERS

County Clerks Notified to Delay Action Until Further Notice

Governor Comstock last Thursday directed Miss Evelyn S. Mershon, state welfare director, to notify all county clerks that they shall not prosecute, until further notice, persons who have failed to pay the new $2 head tax for financing old age pensions.

Under the act, March 1 was the final date on which payment could be made but the governor said that the confusion over the effectiveness of the act justifies postponement of penalties.

He did not indicate, however, how long the period of grace will extend.

STATE PEACH CROP HIT BY SUB-ZERO WEATHER

The western and southern Michigan peach crop for 1934 will be very light, according to horticulture experts. Some even predict there will be practically no Michigan peaches. There may be a few down along the Indiana line. The long weeks of extremely cold weather is blamed. The sweet cherry crop was badly damaged by the cold but the sour cherry crop escaped much injury. Plums, apples and pears still promise a normal crop. Japanese plums, of which there are a few orchards in this section, are probably hard hit by the cold.

The addition of football coaching is expected to be a popular feature of the already very complete program of activities at this popular boys' summer camp, according to Louis E. Reimann, director.

More members than usual attended our business meeting Monday evening which, we hope, indicates that more members are becoming interested in what the small percentage of members who have been attending the business meetings, have been endeavoring to do. It is very hard for just a few members to plan ways and means to raise necessary funds for the post and feel that it will meet with the approval of the members who do not attend, so why not have a larger attendance at our business meetings and swap ideas. Your idea may be the very one we need.

The donations from our card parties and the hard times party netted us enough funds to pay the larger share of our bills, but we still need more funds.

Thursday evening, March 15th, all members are urged to meet at the home of our president, Addie Glossinger, at 7 o'clock, to help make six pairs of pajamas which we have been requested to make for children of needy war veterans. The material has been furnished, but please bring your own sewing kit, including scissors. It has been suggested that at this meeting a sewing circle be organized to piece quilts to be raffled, so if you have a better idea for making money come and tell us about it.

The school is sponsoring a matinee Saturday afternoon for the movie "Alice of Wonderland," which is being shown at the Palace theatre. In view of the fact the picture is a child's classic, an effort is being made to provide opportunity for all children of the grades to attend. The children will meet at the school Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and go to the theatre in a group with each teacher taking charge of those in her own room.

It will be of general interest to know that by special request of a group here in Charlevoix, the management of our local theatre has consented to secure the picture "Little Women" and present it here in the near future. This picture is very beautiful, clean, and high grade and is having a great run in all of our larger cities. Such high grade pictures should be shown here oftener, and our citizens should show their appreciation of this favor requested of Mrs. Moon.

We have a clipping from Charles See, former well known local resident now residing at The Dalles, Oregon, which, in substance, carries the following information: "Two newsboys set running themselves on the running board of an automobile while the birds chirp the advent of spring. On the headlines of their papers is news of the terrible storms out east. Along comes a member of the newspaper staff and tells the lads the way to sell papers is to get up and shout the headline 'All about the big storm — 17 die in blizzard.' Wherewith the youths say, 'Aw what's the use, nobody'll believe it.'" Charlie, no doubt is bragging about that Oregon weather. But just wait till summer! We wouldn't trade Charlevoix's Lake Michigan breezes for the whole state of Oregon.

WHEAT MEN CAN STILL GET CROP CONTRACT

Agreement of Nations Gives Michigan Farmers Chance to Qualify

Michigan wheat growers who have regretted that they did not sign reduction contracts when they were offered last year can now qualify to reduce their acreage and will receive all benefit payments except the one made last fall, according to R. J. Baldwin, administrator for the plan in Michigan.

Opening the field for additional contracts was made necessary by agreements between the United States and other nations to reduce wheat in this country and in the others by a certain percentage of the average acreage planted.

Some Michigan farmers who were not certain that their contracts would be approved and who, therefore, planted their usual amount of wheat can meet contract agreements by disposing of the excess above the contracted acreage. The excess wheat can be removed by pasturing or by cutting it for hay.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

His a "National Monument"

IT TOWERS nearly a thousand feet above the surrounding country, a silent sentinel over the beautiful valley of the North Platte river. It was a landmark for many a pioneer in the Covered Wagon days of the old Oregon Trail. It is a landmark today for many an automobile tourist speeding west, for when he reaches the city of Scotts Bluff, Neb., he sees off at the south across the river this huge mass of sandstone which bears the name of Scotts Bluff and perpetuates the name of Hiram Scott.

As a member of General Ashley's famous fur-trading expedition up the Missouri in 1823, Scott had first seen this mountain which was to become his monument. Then he became a free trapper and later a partner with Narcisse LeClerq in a company of trappers which reaped a rich harvest of peltries along the headwaters of the Platte.

In 1828 they started for St. Louis to market their furs. A hundred miles up the river from the mountain Scott was taken ill and left behind with two trappers, Rol and Bissonette, who were to bring him down the river by bullboat. But soon after they launched the clumsy craft, it upset and all their provisions and ammunition were lost. They managed to reach Laramie fork, 60 miles up the river from the mountain where LeClerq and the others were to await their coming.

They were half-starved and, leaving Scott in camp, the other two set out in search of food. Then they came across LeClerq's trail and deliberately decided to follow it and leave Scott to his fate. When they overtook LeClerq they told him that Scott had died, so he pushed on toward St. Louis.

Back at his camp near Laramie fork the realization soon came to Scott that his friends had deserted him. So he set out to follow them.

A year later Bissonette and old Joe Robbideaux, seeking water from the spring that gushes from the southern slope of Scotts Bluff, found a skeleton not far away. From the buttons on the fragments of clothing still clinging to the bones and from other trinkets Bissonette recognized the skeleton as that of Hiram Scott. Then the story of the betrayal of the trapper by his two comrades came out. Tradition is that Bissonette and Robbideaux buried the remains of Hiram Scott there and from that day the sandstone mountain which had been the goal of his weary journey was known as Scotts Bluff. A few years ago a tract of 2,300 acres surrounding it was set aside as a public reserve and this natural memorial to Hiram Scott became a "national monument."

"35 Battles—35 Victories"

"GOVERNOR of the state of Franklin; six terms governor of Tennessee; four times elected to congress; a projector and hero of King's Mountain; 35 battles—35 victories; his Indian war cry was: 'Here they are? Come on, boys, come on!'"

Such is the inscription on one side of a monument in Knoxville, Tenn., and it sums up the career of one of the most romantic figures in frontier history—that of John Sevier, "Nolichucky Jack."

Born in Virginia in 1744 of a French Huguenot family, Sevier emigrated to James Robertson's Watauga settlement in eastern Tennessee in 1773. Almost immediately the young Virginian became a leader in various forays against hostile Indians. By his audacity and the swiftness and unexpectedness of his attacks on the Indian towns, he broke the spirit of the Cherokees and their allies and prevented their being used by the British in a rear attack on the colonies during the Revolution.

He used the same tactics in one of the most brilliant victories over the British during that war. He was one of the leaders of the mountain men in their swift dash to trap Colonel Ferguson and his troops at King's mountain before they could receive aid from Cornwallis, and thus contributed to the victory at Yorktown.

After the Revolution the Watauga settlement became an orphan. Neither North Carolina nor the new federal government seemed to want it. So in 1781 the settlers organized the independent state of Franklin, a commonwealth unique in American history, and elected "Nolichucky Jack" as their governor. When North Carolina tried to assert its authority over the region again, the settlers resisted.

Their governor was singled out for punishment, treacherously betrayed, captured and placed on trial at Morgantown, N. C., for high treason. And at once more than 1,000 of the mountain men assembled to rescue their beloved "Nolichucky Jack." A civil war seemed imminent. But Sevier made a spectacular escape from his captors and a short time later his people elected him to the North Carolina legislature. There was some protest over seating him but eventually he was allowed to take office.

From that time on he was never long out of public life—as congressman from North Carolina, as the first governor of the new state of Tennessee, and then repeatedly re-elected, and thrice re-elected to congress. He died as he had lived—in the harness and in the field. The end came in 1815 in a tent on a surveying expedition for the government, surrounded by his soldiers.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

EATING BUTTER AIDS MICHIGAN DAIRYMEN

Use of Four Pounds Extra Earns $5.01 for Dairymen in State

An upward swing in tutter prices of from 16 cents per pound for 92 score butter on Dec. 16 to 25 cents on Feb. 14 is said by the dairy department at Michigan State college to be caused by an increased use of butter by farmers themselves.

All dairy organizations united to further this plan of having dairymen eat themselves out of the field of unprofitable prices and the success of the scheme is now apparent. Owners of dairy cattle were asked to pledge that their families would consume four pounds more of butter per week than they had been in the habit of doing.

This increase of four pounds of butter per month multiplied by the 90,000 families of Michigan dairymen meant 360,000 pounds more of butter consumed in one state in one month. Other states cooperating in the plan gave additional impetus to the butter-eating campaign.

Dairy prices had been depressed by the huge stocks of butter in storage. Production of butter per cow had dropped but the supply of this food in the cold storage plants prevented this decreased production from affecting prices.

Dairy specialists at the college say that eating four more pounds of butter per family earned each Michigan dairyman $5.01. In addition, the family had better meals and a larger supply of the essential vitamins present in butter.

SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

1933 Farm Account Books Checked In

The last three days of last week were devoted to checking in the farm account books being kept by some 33 Charlevoix county farmers. H. A. Berg and P. T. Aylesworth assisted in closing the records.

These farm account records give each cooperator a very clear analysis of his farm business. Not only is a cash account kept of all business transactions but the difference in inventory is studied and the income per acre as well as many other vital statistics are summarized. Especially, is it true during this time that farm account records are most valuable as the new government agricultural policies make it necessary for each man to present accurate figures on his livestock increase and production per acre.

The new year started the first of March and will end the last of February. Any farmer desirous of keeping farm account records is urged to notify the county agent who will be glad to assist in starting the record. Keep records and you will know the [illegible] of your farming operations.

Sign-Up Days for Corn-Hog Applicants Next Week

The final stages in the corn-hog program for this county comes next week, the week of March 12. During this week every farmer in this county who desires to cooperate in the government program of corn-hog reduction must appear at one of the places designated for signing up.

Each applicant must fill in the information requested on the preliminary work sheet, also fill in the sheet of documentary evidence which indicates accurately the disposal of the past two years' production of pigs. In case your corn acreage for grain is above 10 acres for each of the two years on an average, then the map of the contracted acreage must be filled in.

I would suggest that if you are not sure that you want to join this movement that you come and see us and then you can make your decision. We have been informed that every farmer who desires a loan in the future will have to produce affidavits showing that he has cooperated with the government's reduction programs. Thus, it would seem that a person should cooperate in the corn-hog reduction program if he would desire to borrow money for this year's farming program.

Please be informed that the following schedule will be strictly adherred to the week of March 12.

Monday, March 12th, Barnard grange hall—all day.

Tuesday, March 13, Marion Center grange hall—all day.

Wednesday, March 14, East Jordan library—all day.

Thursday, March 15, Horton Bay I. O. O. F. hall—all day.

Friday, March 16, county agent's office, Boyne City—all day.

This entire program must be completed by the first of April which means that we must all cooperate to finish by that time. Each farmer should (and must) get one of his neighbors to sign a statement that the applicant has the number of pigs that he states in his application. Also, each purchaser of any of his pigs must sign a statement to that effect. In other words, get all the evidence that you possibly can to prove your statements. The county allotment committee will not approve your application until they are sure that the statements contained therein are correct.

Once again, be sure to attend your nearest meeting and don't forget the schedule.

SOUTH BARNARD

The class in Christian Doctrine will meet Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Martin and Dorothy Bottema. The topic, "Why We Believe in God." has been quite fully discussed at previous meetings. The class will now turn its attention to the subject. "How We Got Our Bible." Over twenty young people were present at the last session. While the class so far has been composed of young people, it is open to any who are interested in the course. Next week Wednesday the class will probably meet at the home of Ernest Brock, but more definite announcement will be given on this later.

Tempus fugit, says Miss Margaret Ross as she chalks off another year on her natal day, March 6th. But she is happy that this new year gives her the privilege of suffrage. Margaret is receiving many happy felicitations from her friends.

South Barnard is sad to see Miss Lucy Brock leave its midst. She is blessed however in being able to obtain employment in Petoskey. We congratulate her.

Guests at the Albert Klooster home this past week were the genial Ralph Klooster and his family. After more or less isolation due to the snow, it certainly seemed good to have these friends come in from the outside. We are looking forward to when they can get through to our church again with their usual regularity.

Since his letter (red) day, friends of Oscar Boss are wondering what his next step will be. It is believed that James Brock will not object to his company on the ride to Charlevoix Sunday evenings. But Frank Boss and Harley Warner say that they are contented to stay about this region throughout the week. And they, too, have good "reasons." Hiram and Jennie Klooster are searching for similar good "reasons."

BARNARD

The blizzard on Tuesday blocked the roads again.

We enjoyed special music by the hand at church on Sunday.

We are glad to know that Mrs. Louis Shapton is improving after her long illness.

Miss Ruth Bratchet is having vacation this week while her school is being painted.

Warren Frank was called to Detroit last week to work for his former employers there.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Davis of Breezy Point farm spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Warren Frank.

The Brock young people entertained several friends from Charlevoix at supper Sunday evening.

Mrs. Burns spent Sunday evening with her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sheldon of Charlevoix.

The Epworth League is preparing a program to be given on Friday evening, March 16th. Pot-luck supper.

We are glad to note that Gordon Cummings is able to be in school again after several weeks' absence on account of illness.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet with Mrs. Bolhuis next Thursday, March 15th. Members are requested to come early as there is a quilt to finish.

George Clark and family moved last week to a farm near East Jordan. Dick Potter and family are moving this week to the Block farm vacated by Mr. Clark.

The Epworth Leaguers are looking forward to an interesting meeting next Sunday evening, the South Barnard church pastor being the leader. The lesson is on "Friendship."

In every field, preparation, ability and experience is considered in personnel promotion. Why not in politics? Michigan, speaking in a public sense, has two career men who, if they were in banking, education or industry, would win steady advancement. Why not in politics? Why waste the training ability and equipment of men like Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald and State Representative V. J. Brown? Mr. Fitzgerald started at the bottom in the secretary of state's office, today he is serving his second term as the executive head of that great department. Representative Brown, in private life editor of the Ingham County (Mason) News, is perhaps the best informed man in Michigan on problems now confronting the legislature. He is a keen student of state affairs and two years ago aroused the state by a series of newspaper articles pointing out the weakness in our state government. He adds three terms of legislative training to his vast fund of detailed knowledge about state business. Here is the ideal team for the republicans to offer Michigan voters in the November election. Career men in the best sense. Mr. Fitzgerald for governor and Mr. Brown for lieutenant governor, each in the key position for which he is best fitted to serve Michigan. Why not bring politics under the yard stick that business uses? We have the men, Fitzgerald and Brown.

TAX EXEMPT SECURITIES

Thruout the discussion at Lansing and at Washington pertaining to the reduction of taxes on visible property, we notice an alarming lack of reference to the tax-exempt security.

We want visible property taxes reduced and they must be cut. We discuss income taxes, sales taxes, corporation taxes, liquor taxes, nuisance taxes until we are blue in the face. But we permit the sale of millions of dollars worth of bonds upon which no tax whatever is paid.

The result is so obvious that we applogize for referring to it here. But for emphasis, we remind you that money that should be invested in productive enterprises is tied up in tax-free instruments and securities upon which not a cent of revenue comes to pay the expense of government.

This money should be doing its bit to keep the wheels of commerce turning. Or, at least, it should be subject to taxation just the same as it would be if it were invested in a home or a farm.

By what process of reasoning can anyone figure that it is fair and just to tax a thousand dollars invested in a home and permit the same amount put into municipal bonds to go scot free?

PROHIBITION WILL SOON BE HERE AGAIN

A mighty good friend, and one who is about as wet as they make them, predicts prohibition will soon be back among us with renewed strength. He went over to Chicago the other day, walked into the bar room of a hotel and says he couldn't get up to the bar at all because of the crowd of women there. Because they must sit while they drink, they have arranged double rows of stools in front of the bar. He says all these stools were filled largely with women, smoking cigarets, drinking and some indulging in plenty of noise, as if they had already about a drink or so too many.

"I'm opposed to prohibition, always opposed to it," he said, "but we will have it back with renewed strength if this short of thing is permitted to continue. I was pretty much disgusted myself and that's something."—Grand Rapids Herald.

CROWN "SMELT KING" MARCH 17

East Jordan Will Celebrate Annual Smelt Run With "Jamboree Day"

The idea of a day when, instead of a Queen, a King ascends the throne, a day when man rules supreme and woman takes the background, is said to be the inspiration of East Jordan's "Jamboree day," which this year comes on March 17. The day is the feature of the Jordan river smelt run beginning March 10, and was created with the idea of a farce take-off on the "Queen" epidemic of recent years. East Jordan will crown the 1934 "Smelt King" on that day.

Action will start immediately after dinner, with the parade and coronation taking place at 4 p. m. A stag smelt banquet will be held at 6:30, after which most of the sportsmen will go directly to the river from the "feed."

Jack VanCoevering, Ben East and Ed. Drier, all of whom were present at the 1933 smelt run, will again be there, says George Secord, chairman of the publicity committee of the Sportsman's club. Joe Cardinal, state secretary of the Isaac Walton League, and Max Sandy, also plan to attend.

The Jordan River Sportsman's club has extended a cordial invitation to Charlevoix people to join with them in the fun.

LEGION ACTIVITIES

By F. V. Tyler

Thursday evening, March 1st, at Boyne City, occurred the first regular meeting of the newly-formed Charlevoix County Veterans' council. This council, while intended to represent all veterans' organizations and ex-service men in the county, is at present composed of councilmen elected by the three Legion posts of the county—five from each post. After framing a constitution and by-laws to be submitted to the several posts for ratification, the council proceeded to the election of its officers. Shirley B. Henry and Fred V. Tyler of Charlevoix, were elected county commander and adjutant, respectively; Joseph Bugai and Vern Whiteford of East Jordan, senior vice-commander and finance officer, and Eugene Kurchinski of Boyne City, junior vice-commander.

Everything is set for a dance at the gymnasium on St. Patrick's evening, March 17th. It will be a masquerade and there will be prizes for the best costumes among those who come masqued. Masquing is not, however, compulsory.

The writer owes an apology to the Charlevoix city band for not mentioning it either in the Legion notes or in the article covering the carnival activities. The services of the band were highly appreciated and we regret the oversight. Possibly, also, the audience were not aware that the band was donating its services or they would have been more generous with their applause. Maybe, however, they were "sitting on their hands" because it was quite a cold night.

There are hints that the Legion may sponsor a pageant of ambitious proportions to entertain our resort visitors this summer. It will take some community backing, but the same kind of an affair has gone over big in other places and why not here?

NEW RULES ADOPTED FOR SELLING CHICKS

Michigan Man in Charge of Enforcing Commercial Hatcheries Rules

Michigan buyers of baby chicks will benefit from the national hatchery code under which sellers of day-old poultry are required to meet certain conditions which are to the buyer's advantage, according to J. A. Hannah, now national administrator for the code and formerly poultry specialist at Michigan State college.

Chicks, poults, or ducklings bought from sellers operating under the code must have good quality and must be delivered as agreed. Any disagreements between buyer and seller about excessive losses of birds can be reviewed by the code administrator. Failure of hatcheries to meet the various protective features of the code are classed as unfair trade practices.

Fradulent or deceptive advertisement or the substitution of chicks for those advertised as having special qualities are practices which also are classed as unfair.

Eggs used for hatching by code members must weight at least 23 ounces to the dozen and no individual egg is permitted to fall below one and five-sixths ounces.

AT THE MOVIES

Town Mumbles Mad, Sparkling "Alice" Rhymes

"Alice in Wonderland," the Paramount picturization of the beloved classic comes to the Palace theatre with Charlotte Henry in the title role, Saturday and Sunday.

Several of Lewis Carroll's inimitable poems are included in the picture. For instance, Alice recites the "Jabberwocky," which contains that weird language above, and "You Are Old, Father William."

Both "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking-Glass," which were combined for picture purposes, contain a number of Carroll's typically insane verses, and most of them have been preserved in the film.

SENATE APPROVE ADVERTISING MEASURE

Votes $100,000 Fund to Advance Michigan Resort Advantages

The senate Friday passed and sent to Governor Comstock a bill appropriating $100,000 for creation of a Michigan resort and tourist commission. The vote was 21 to 2 with Senators Asselin and Foster casting dissenting ballots.

The measure provides for a ten-man commission. Of the $100,000, $60,000 will be spent over the state at large for advertising purposes, and the remaining $40,000 will be divided equally between the four resort associations which will match their allotment to the extent of 25 per cent.

Members of the commission will be the govetnor, the highway commissioner, director of conservation, chairman of the Mackinac Island state park commission, master of the Michigan State Grange, the executive secretary of the Michigan State Farm bureau and the secretaries of the four resort associations.

STATE TAX REDUCTION SETS A NEW LOW MARK

Cuts Resulting From 15-Mill Limitation Are Cited

Michigan's property taxes showed the largest drop in history during 1933 due to the 15-mill limitation amendment and the almost complete abolition of real estate levies for state purposes, the state board of assessors reported to Governor Comstock last week.

For 1933, a total of $159,459,989 was levied for all purposes compared with $216,580,600 for the previous year, a reduction of $57,120,611. The largest drop was in taxes for state purposes. Last year only $3,500,000 was assessed compared with $23,487,979 in 1932. The three per cent sales tax was enacted to absorb the difference.

commercial species are caused in some degree by market and weather conditions, but the cycle of supply is probably the dominant factor. While no critical studies have been made concerning the preponderance of the catch in any one year, it is known that a good hatch of fish in one season may result in better catches when the young fish have reached spawning age, which is after a five-year period.

Annual yield of whitefish during the past nine years in Michigan waters is shown by the following compilation:

1926	3,445,000
1927	4,180,000
1928	4,654,000
1929	6,777,000
1930	7,804,000
1931	8,453,000
1932	7,855,765
1933	5,592,048

Commercial fisheries during 1933 produced a total catch of 24,739,741 pounds whereas in 1932 the total was 28,569,544. Lake trout exceeded the whitefish catch during the past year. The report shows that 5,908,712 pounds were netted.

TOWNSHIPS NOMINATE OFFICERS

SEVERAL PLACE TWO TICKETS IN THE FIELD

Many Veteran Officers Are Facing Opposition at General Election April 2nd

Evidence of unusual political interest in various Charlevoix county townships is apparent from the results of caucuses held within the past few days.

Every township in the vicinity of Charlevoix with but two exceptions has placed two tickets in the field for the general election April 2, and as reports keep filtering in from more distant townships it appears many veterans either failed to receive nomination or will face opposition. Over at Boyne Falls, it is reported that William Pearson, veteran supervisor, did not run for re-nomination and therefore that precinct will choose a new representative on the board.

Norwood and Peaine townships nominated one ticket, but in Charlevoix, Hayes, Marion, Eveline and Banks townships, the latter in Antrim county, two tickets are in the field.

Following are results of the several caucuses:

Charlevoix Township

Ticket No. 1—Supervisor, William H. Cook; clerk, Cora D. Rodger; treasurer, Keith Reynolds; highway commissioner, Joseph Shores; justice, Colon McKenzie; member board of review, John Martin. Ticket No. 2—Supervisor, Rudy Korth; clerk, Lota Coulter; treasurer, Anna Stroud; justice, Lucy Molett; member board of review, Henry Stephan.

Peaine Township

Supervisor, William M. Greene; clerk, Otilia Ricksgers; treasurer, Frank Nackerman; highway commissioner, Daniel D. Greene; member board of review, Vesty V. McDonough; justice, Patrick Bonner; overseer of highways, Delphis Peletier; constable, Hugh R. Boyle.

Hayes Township

Ticket No. 1—Supervisor, H. C. Stephens; clerk, Zula Struthers; treasurer, Hazel Evers; highway commissioner, George O'Brien; overseer of highways, Fred Yohr; member board of review, Platt Webster; justice, Will Hair. Ticket No. 2—Supervisor, A. C. Tillotson; clerk, Gale Copping; treasurer, David J. Smith; highway commissioner, Grant Ferguson; overseer of highways, Fred Melin; member board of review, William Gregory Jr.

Norwood Township

PARK BOARD DOESN'T EXIST, YET VOTERS WILL DECIDE ANYWAY

Despite the fact Gov. Comstock and the attorney general's department have ruled Charlevoix legally has no park commission due to the fact the charter amendment creating the commission was never properly filed with the secretary of state, voters will be asked to decide at the April election on the proposition of retention or abolishment of the commission.

This decision was reached at the last meeting of the city council when its members overruled the governor's disapproval of the proposed charter change and voted to place the matter before the electors. Their action was based on the contention the voters had registered approval of the park commission when a previous attempt was made toward abolishment and that the commission has functioned many years whether legally or otherwise. Also bearing on the matter was a decision by the late Judge Frederick W. Mayne upholding authority of the park commission.

The council's desire to remove the park commission is prompted to eliminate duplication of effort with its own committee on buildings, parks, etc., to regulate expenditures for park purposes which have been made without proper accounting to the council, and to erase differences of opinion which have cropped up all too numerous to permit unimpeded progress.

GOOD FRIDAY PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

CHURCHES OF COUNTY TO JOIN IN UNION SERVICE

Program in Charlevoix to Be Held at the Baptist Church Between 1:15 and 2:45 o'Clock

The fourth annual Charlevoix county Union Good Friday service will be held this year in the local Baptist church, the Presbyterian church in East Jordan, and the Methodist church at Boyne City.

These union services are fostered by the Charlevoix County Religious Education association. With but one exception all of the protestant churches are cooperating. This year a new face will be seen among the Charlevoix speakers, Rev. Peter Koopman, pastor of the Dutch Reformed church of Atwood. Although this is his first appearance on the Good Friday program he already is well known here for reason he has spoke at the Congregational church on several occasions.

The program has been announced as follows:

Devotional service, Rev. W. H. Rauch.

"I Find No Fault In Him," C. W. Sidebotham.

"Crucify Him," Rev. G. R. Parker.

"Save Thyself and Us," Rev. I. T. Mark.

"Jesus Remember Me," Rev. W. H. Rauch.

"Truly This Was the Son of God," Rev. Peter Koopman.

The Charlevoix service will be in charge of Rev. W. H. Rauch. Rev. G. R. Parker will speak at East Jordan on the topic: "Jesus Remember Me."

The program as outlined above has been arranged by Rev. G. E. Smock of Boyne City. The program begins at 1:15 o'clock and continues to 2:40 o'clock.

TRAVERSE CAMPAIGNS ON MERGANSER DUCKS

Killed 43 in Drive on Boardman River Last Sunday

Traverse City sportsmen, headed by Conservation Officers Frank Hoard and Mark Craw, staged a merganser duck hunting last Sunday on Boardman river.

As a result 43 fewer of these menacing fish-eaters are alive to strip the waters of the Boardman. One of the ducks shot had a nine-inch small mouth bass partly swallowed. The dead ducks will be sent to Lansing where the contents of their stomachs will be analyzed in search of proof that they take more trout out of the river in the winter than all the fishermen in the summer.

The information so far related should be an incentive for Charlevoix county sportsmen to take similar action. Hundreds of mergansers swarm the open waters of the Boyne, Jordan, Cedar, in fact any open stream. That they are a menace to trout life is unquestionable.

TEACHERS' MEETING DREW TWO HUNDRED

ANNUAL BI-COUNTY INSTITUTE HELD HERE TUESDAY

Excellent Speakers on Morning and Afternoon Programs Arranged by William C. Palmer

An attendance estimated at around two hundred, one of the largest in recent years, was present at the Charlevoix-Antrim bi-county teachers' institute held here Tuesday in the school gymnasium.

Morning and afternoon programs, arranged by William C. Palmer, county school commissioner, held the attention of the visiting delegates throughout the day.

The Charlevoix school band, directed by R. B. Magor, opened the morning program at 9:30 o'clock with musical selections and the East Jordan school band, directed by John TerWee, opened the afternoon session.

The principal speakers were Roy E. Bendell of Grand Ledge, and J. Millington, Cadillac justice of the peace, who substituted for Orin W. Kaye of Paw Paw, who was unable to be present.

In his morning address, Judge Millington spoke on the topic, "Educational Conditions in America," and in the afternoon on the subject, "Education and Crime."

Speaking from a wide knowledge of national and state educational affairs, Judge Millington brought out some astounding as well as interesting points. Pointing out that six times as much money is now being spent to curb lawlessness as is being spent for educational purposes, the speaker advocated a concerted effort toward the olimination of crime, so that this money could be diverted for educatinn. He quoted statistics revealing that ten per cent of the schools closed in the country today are in Michigan, that 8,000 Michigan teachers are drawing salaries of less than $750 and 3,000 of this number less than $450, while in Indiana no teacher is being paid a salary of less than $800. His comparison of Michigan's school conditions with those of other states brought out many other similarly astounding facts.

Mr. Bendell, formerly with the Redpath Lyceum bureau, talked in the afternoon on the subject, "The Humanness of Lincoln," closing with an impersonation of the famous President and recitation of his Gettysburg address.

Miss A. Winifred Colley, Michigan Children's Fund nurse with the District Health Unit, spoke briefly of the work of her department in connection especially with the schools.

PLAN DIPHTHERIA PROTECTION CLINIC AT LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL

Protection against diphtheria is to be offered in the Charlevoix high school to all children in the age group from six months to ten years.

Consent slips are to be sent home from the schools to parents with children of this age group. It is important to have cards signed in order that a record may be kept of the names and ages of those immunized.

The first clinic will be held in the Charlevoix high school on Thursday, March 22, at 2:00 p. m. The second clinic will be held three weeks later on April 12th. This program is being carried on by the District Health department.

SOLONS VOTE CUT CAR LICENSE COST

FINAL APPROVAL OF BILL WAS GIVEN MONDAY NIGHT

Rate Changed from 55 to 35 Cents Per Hundred—Have Until 24th to Get New Plates

The legislature Monday night passed a bill reducing by 36 per cent the cost of passenger automobile license plates and sent it to Gov. Comstock for his signature.

The governor is expected to sign the bill Wednesday, and ten days will be allowed for passenger automobile owners to buy plates at the reduced price. Those who have already purchased plates will be granted rebates.

The new schedule of license fees fixes the cost at 35 cents a hundredweight instead of the old price of 55 cents.

The conference report on the distribution of the financial burden that will result when $5,100,000 is lopped off the revenue, provides that the loss shall be shared equally between the state and the counties. The report was approved by both senate and house.

The secretary of state pointed out also that the "sticker" system of permitting motorists to purchase licenses for a half-year will continue even under the new lower schedule. Thus stickers for cars on which plates cost $12 last year and which will cost $7.68 under the new schedule may be purchased, as soon as the governor signs the bill, by immediate payment of $3.84, the remainder being paid later in the year.

Refunds to some 250,000 persons who have already bought 1934 plates at the old rate will commence immediately, Fitzgerald said, but the process may be slow due to the manual effort of issuing vouchers and because an accurate check must be kept upon the amount which must be subtracted from the highway revenues of the various counties.

Those Michigan motorists who already have purchased their 1934 automobile license plates at the rate of 55 cents per hundred-weight are to get 36 per cent of their money returned.

The bill reducing the fee to 35 cents per 100 pounds provides that rebates be made to car owners who have bought their plates under the old schedule.

COUNTY NONGENARIAN DIED TUESDAY, MARCH 6

Joseph W. Flanders, Boyne City, Buried Here Thursday Afternoon

The death Tuesday, March 6, at Boyne City of Joseph W. Flanders, 93, took from Charlevoix county one of its oldest residents. His passing followed by a month the death of his son, the late Joseph William Flanders of this city.

Mr. Flanders was born at King-Lynn, England, March 18, 1841. He engaged in the grocery business there and followed that endeavor after coming to Michigan.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. O. J. Wilkins of Alpena, four granddaughters and four great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Thursday from the Presbyterian church at Boyne City and interment was at Brookside cemetery, Charlevoix.

TEMPERANCE MEETING OF UNUSUAL INTEREST

March Session Held Friday at Home of Mrs. A. J. Usher

Of more than ordinary interest was the March meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. J. Usher.

Mrs. Rauch conducted the devotionals. Iva and Ora Howe entertained with a vocal duet, "Keep the Glow in Old Glory," and Iva sang a solo in response to the encore.

It was Union Signal day and Mrs. Palmer made a plea for that paper and the Young Crusader, published by the National W. C. T. U. Both periodicals are noted for their high standards in the field of social welfare.

The topic, "Is Moderate Drinking Safe," was discussed under the leadership of Mrs. Lela Simmons. "No one knows in advance," said the leader, "whether or not he is unduly susceptible to the effects of alcohol. He can find out only by playing a game of chance and often when he finds out it is too late for him to change his habits or escape results."

STATE ADVERTISING BUDGET MADE

COMMISSION IS ORGANIZED TO SPEND $100,000 FUND

To Spend $15,000 in Newspapers—Allocate $18,000 for Special Events in Michigan.

The Michigan Resort and Tourist commission at an organization meeting adopted a budget of $100,000 to be spent for advertising Michigan's recreational advantages and named two committees to carry out routine work of the new group.

Of the $100,000, $15,000 will be spent for newspaper advertising. A total of $10,000 was divided equally between the four tourist associations which will match their allotment to the extent of 25 per cent. Special events were allocated $18,000.

Members of the commission's ways and means committee will be a representative of the state highway department who will serve as chairman, a representative of the state conservation department, and Hugh Gray, of Grand Rapids, secretary of the West Michigan Tourist and Resort association.

A publicity committee, named at the suggestion of Governor Comstock, will have as its membership Roger Andrew, chairman of the Mackinac Island state park commission, George Bishop of Marquette, secretary of the Upper Peninsula Development bureau, and Thomas Marston, of Bay City, secretary of the Eastern Michigan Tourist and Resort association.

ANNOUNCEMENT

(Political Advertisement)

I am a Democrat and believe in Democratic principals applied to our Government.

I firmly believe in our President's policies of recovery and the making of our Country a better place to live and prosper, through the more equitable distribution of this world's goods and happiness.

I recognize the great value to our community of the benefits to our citizens through the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Civil Works Administration and the Federal Land Bank, all of which have so greatly benefitted our citizens and I am pledged to support these institutions to the end, in securing to the people of Charlevoix such benefits as these organizations offer.

Having been a citizen of Charlevoix, for the past twenty-four years, I appreciate the needs of our City, the greatest of which are:

The employment of our labor during season, other than the summer months.

The fostering and encouragement of our summer people to own and develop Charlevoix homes which will bring them closer to us and encourage their longer stay in Charlevoix.

The obligation is upon us to make Charlevoix more attractive to our summer people which will encourage their investment in the best resort city in Michigan.

If I should be the choice of our people, I pledge my very best efforts to the service of our city as a whole and not to any particular locality or group of individuals. Our people must be united to serve the best interests of our city.

In the selection of employees efficiency and ability must be the only consideration.

I have no criticism to offer of former administrations and believe the FUTURE of our city is a large enough field to consume all of our efforts and endeavors.

BOYNE REGIONAL CLASS C CHAMPS

TRAVERSE CITY, ONEKEMA B AND D WINNERS

Charlevoix Eliminated by Boyne in Regional Semi-Finals 22 to 20 Last Friday Night

Northern Michigan will be represented in the state basketball title race by Traverse City in class B, Boyne City in class C and St. Anne's of Alpena in class D as the result of victories by these schools in the regional tournament which closed Saturday at Petoskey.

Traverse City defeated Petoskey 23 to 17, Boyne City downed Northport 15 to 10, and St. Anne's was victor over Onekema 25 to 13 in the finals.

Traverse City, "Big Six" champions, carried true to form in winning the class B regional, as did also Boyne City, district class C champions. Pellston, favored to capture class D honors, fell by the wayside, along with Charlevoix, favored in the class C competition.

Boyne Deserves Credit

Boyne City, 1932-33 district and regional champions and runner-up in the state finals, deserves unqualified praise for their achievement. Starting the season with but one veteran, Coach Brotherton guided his team through a rather mediocre regular season to regional tournament honors. The squad's mettle is revealed by its two single point victories in the district tourney and its performance in again toppling over Charlevoix by the margin of a single goal at the regional.

Boyne eliminated Charlevoix in the class C semi-finals at Petoskey in a game that was by far the most outstanding contest of the tournament. Practically everyone able to attend from the two cities were present at the game Friday night.

Boyne, with Fitzpatrick, the outstanding class C player of the tournament, and his team-mates, Barden and Kujawski, leading the way, piled up an 8 and 2 margin at the quarter. They increased their advantage 13 to 5 at the half and then the fireworks started. In a determined rally, Charlevoix nearly closed the gap in the third period and once in the fourth were leading by a single point. In the desperately-fought final minutes both teams missed scoring chances which might have changed the result materially, but when the contest closed Boyne led by a single goal, 22 to 20.

Boyne scored nine field goals to eight for Charlevoix and tallied four out of six free throws to four out of seven for the Kipmen.

Inter-Class Tournament

The basketball season in Charlevoix will be brought to a close with the annual inter-class tournament which will probably be held in the near future.

DRIVERS LICENSE DRIVE PROPOSED

Applicants for automobile license plate may be compelled to show their drivers' licenses if a plan now under consideration by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald is adopted.

There are thousands of motorists in Michigan who have not obtained drivers' licenses, it was pointed out, and under the suggested plan, they would be unable to obtain plates for their cars, until a proper drivers' license had been secured.

The less a man knows, the longer it takes him to tell it.

CONSERVATION CORPS ANNOUNCES NEW MEN WILL BE ENLISTED

Almost complete replacement of personnel of the Civilian Conservation Corps is exported during this year under a new enlistment policy designed to accommodate probably 250,000 new recruits and spread the benefits of the program.

CCC Director Robert Fechner announced that by direction of the President none of the present 303,525 unemployed young men and war veterans now in the forest camps would be permitted to remaain more than 12 to 18 months after their original enlistment date.

Fechner estimated 100,000 men would leave the corps this month to seek other employment. He believed 250,000 fresh recruits would be taken in on the April 1, July 1, and October 1 enlistment dates.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"The King of the Missouri"

INSOFAR as the Missouri river is an American stream, the man who was hailed far and wide as "The King of the Missouri" should have been either an Indian chieftain or an American. But he wasn't. He was a Scotchman of distinguished birth, an officer in the British army during the War of 1812 and a relative of the famous British explorer, Sir Alexander Mackenzie.

Kenneth Mackenzie was his name, and both his ancestry and his personal characteristics had something to do with his assumption of "kingship" in the American fur trade. He served his apprenticeship in the old Northwest Fur company which, after a bitter struggle, was merged with the older Hudson's Bay company. When that happened, Mackenzie lost his job only to become an associate, and the ablest one, with Joseph Renville in the Columbia Fur company, whose success with the Indians in the Northwest forced John Jacob Astor, head of the American Fur company, to buy out Mackenzie and Renville.

Then Mackenzie enlisted under the A. F. C. banner and quickly rose to leadership. In 1829 he built Fort Union at the mouth of the Yellowstone on the Missouri. It was to be his job to develop the fur trade in a region which the traders from St. Louis, after efforts lasting 20 years, had failed to exploit. But Mackenzie did it. He opened trade relations with the hostile Blackfeet and in 1831 made a treaty between them, their hereditary enemies, the Assiniboines, and his company which stands as one of the most remarkable exploits in the record of the relations of red men and white.

From his headquarters at Fort Union he ruled with an iron hand over an empire larger than many a European principality. Noted for his hospitality, he was particular as to who should sit down at his table with him. Clad in full dress uniform, he dined in formal state, waited on by a full staff of servants—a feudal baron reigning in the wilderness.

But one of the things which made him so successful as agent for the A. F. C. brought about his downfall. He had always freely dispensed liquor to the Indians to help his trading operations. When the United States government shut down on that in 1832, it marked the beginning of the end of the "king's" usefulness. A year or so later Mackenzie sold out his interest in the American Fur company, retired to St. Louis where he entered the wholesale liquor business, and there he died April 26, 1861, a forgotten figure of the days when beaver was king, and he was a monarch in the kingdom of beaver.

The "Duke of Cimarron"

ALTHOUGH titles of nobility have no place in our democratic form of government, sometimes Americans by common consent confer upon some outstanding person such a title, even though he is entirely unofficial. This is the story of such a person, of Lucian B. Maxwell, the Illinois and Missouri farm boy and wandering trapper who became the "Duke of Cimarron."

Born in Kaskaskia, Ill., he accompanied his parents across the Mississippi river into Missouri while still a boy. At Arrow Rock on the Missouri, then the eastern terminus of the Santa Fe trail, the boy saw the great wagon trains depart for the New Mexican capital and his imagination was fired by the tales of the riches to be found in the Southwest. Thither he went in 1841, but the hoped-for wealth did not come to him immediately.

He was first a trapper, then a hunter, then a guide for General Fremont on one of his expeditions to California.

The turn in his fortunes came in 1844 when he married Juanita Beaubien, the daughter of Charles Beaubien, a French-Canadian who had gone to Taos in 1827 as agent with Guadalupe Miranda for the American Fur company. In return for services to the Mexican government Miranda and Beaubien were given a large grant of land in northeastern New Mexico, but soon afterwards Miranda sold his share to Beaubien, who soon became known as "Don Carlos Beaubien."

After Maxwell's marriage to Juanita, Don Carlos made the young American manager of his great ranch, and after Beaubien's death Maxwell bought out the other heirs and changed the name of the estate to the Maxwell Grant. It stretched along the Cimarron river for a distance of 50 miles and comprised over a quarter of a million acres. On it he built a huge low, rambling house and other structures.

Here he lived like a feudal baron dispensing lavish hospitality to all who came that way—army officers, Indian chiefs, explorers, trappers, traders and settlers. In his retinue of retainers were hundreds of white men, Mexicans, Indians and half-breeds tending his flocks and herds. For awhile the "Duke of Cimarron" prospered, then his spendthrift ways began to impoverish him. But the discovery of gold on his land brought a new prosperity and a new era of extravagant living.

Again his fortunes began to decline and he decided to sell his estate. Senator Chaffee of Colorado and Wilson Waddingham bought it for $650,000. Maxwell then went to Las Vegas and there the "Duke of Cimarron" died in 1875 with virtually nothing left of the vast fortune that had once been his.

MEETS DEMANDS FOR HIGH SPEED

Streamline Principle Has Proved Effective.

The virtue of streamlining automobile bodies for the specific purpose of enabling human beings to drive faster than their nerve reflexes would seem to permit them to operate in safety may be seriously questioned. The incapacity of the average individual to accommodate himself to the exigencies of high speed is in fact notorious. But as to the other virtues of streamlining—fuel efficiency and economy—there is no longer any dispute.

The streamlining principle is being applied not only in the manufacture of automobiles, but in the design of ships and railroad trains, with an intensity of purpose never before known. Its application in aircraft design is of course imperative, and has there reached its greatest refinement.

The great Atlantic liners Europa and Bremen are the best-known examples of effective streamlining in ship construction. Their bows of bulbous shape below the waterline and their streamlined superstructures and funnels have helped to make them the speed queens of the sea they traverse. Incidentally it is of interest to note that this is the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of the sailing of the Savannah, the pioneer Atlantic steamship, from Savannah for Liverpool. She was a sailing vessel equipped with auxiliary steam-power, and crossed the ocean in 27 days, during which her paddle wheels were in operation 80 hours. Both the Europa and Bremen have sailed from Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose Channel lightship in slightly more than 4 days and 17 hours.

Now, seemingly, railroad rolling stock is to be made the subject of streamlining experimentation. And well it may, in view of the keen competition of planes and motor vehicles. A German train which looks like nothing orthodox has been developed for operation at extremely high average speed, the famous Royal Scot showed evidence of some effort to lessen wind resistance through the design, and a transcontinent railroad has announced that it is studying designs for passenger trains which will be operated at 100 miles per hour.

Most of us, however, need to bear in mind that there is a sharp distinction to be made between the operation of a streamlined airplane or railroad train at very high speed by one who has been specially trained and subjected to a rigorous physical examination, and the driving of automobiles at fast rates by Tom, Dick and Harry. The latter trio will do well, both now and in the future, to make their pace conform to the limitations of their individual capacities to keep on the road and out of trouble.—Providence Journal.

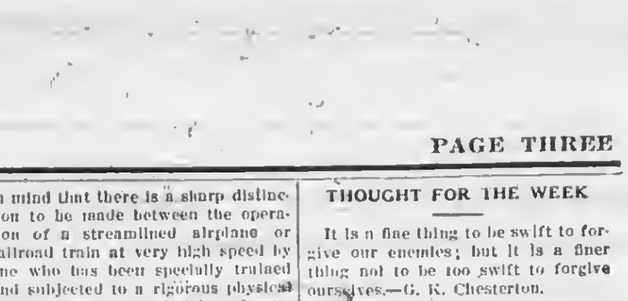
Whose Fault?



When Little Girls Show Temper

A quarrelsome child is a sick child, mothers! A bad bowel condition means bad behavior. And it doesn't help matters to give bilious boys and girls some powerful cathartic that upsets them for days. When you see a coated tongue, dull or yellowed eyes, or other signs of sluggishness, there's always a way to cleanse and sweeten that little system without violence; next day you have a happy, contented child. This common-sense treatment is explained on the right:

Good health and good behavior go hand in hand. With inner health, come smiling faces and sunny dispositions. And it's really so simple a matter to keep children's bowels regular. The only "medicine" most youngsters ever need to promote thorough bowel action is pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fine, fruity—laxative—never weakens them, or takes away their appetite. But get real California Syrup of Figs; you can get it anywhere; it isn't expensive.

The Family Quilt

When a family preserves records of its history, it is generally done in the family Bible or album, says the Boston Post. But a woman in Sussex, Wis., hit upon a strange family record. She made a quilt of transparent silk. Under the silk pieces she sewed old records, letters and family mementos. The records can be read through the silk and are well preserved.

PRESERVES LOCAL CONTROL

Reports from Lansing are favorable to the passage of a constitutional amendment to make possible better local government without sacrificing the rights of localities to control their own destinies.

So far no serious objection has been raised to the plan submitted jointly by farm and city groups. True, there has been some adverse comment, but an examination of the amendment proposed discloses that most of the points of objection are in the plan and that it does in fact include all the things it is said to include. The result has been to strengthen the standing of the plan with the legislators.

Meanwhile, at an overflow meeting attended by farmers from some 18 eastern counties, the following resolution was adopted: "We commend the efforts of the State Farm bureau, the Michigan State grange and the Detroit Citizen's League to secure a constitutional amendment that will pave the way for revision of local government where needed without sacrificing the farmer's voice in county government or his control of his own township."

DRUNK DRIVING

Considerable comment has followed the recent statement by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald that arrests for drunk driving during January, 1934, showed an increase of 45 per cent over the same period a year ago. It is a hard task to warn the drunk driver in advance of his folly. Not only does he endanger his own life, and the lives of others, but he also discovers when too late that tearing automobile and human beings apart is not all that follows in the wake of tipsy driving. Under the present law the conviction of a person for drunk driving automatically raises his or her right to operate a motor vehicle on the highways for a period of one year. License can only be restored thru court order and this seldom happens. Under the liability law they must be able to show proof of financial responsibility, also extremely difficult. Gradually drunk drivers will eliminate themselves as traffic hazards. And that will be the best thing that can happen.

LEARNING A LESSON

The depression has slowed people down and made them think. It has forced them to abandon high flying, to shy away from get-rich-quick schemes and develop habits of one side economy. The medicine required to cure the one engaged in wild spending and reckless waste was also administered to those who kept their feet on the ground and who were not carried away by dizzy ideas of luxury and ease at any cost. Like any calamity, the depression, caused by the crazy aftermath of the war, fell on the innocent and guilty alike. Modified habits inculated by the tough experience of late should last a long time. We will not feel like reincarnated Croesuses simply because we could spend and joyride foolishly and still keep out of the red. The severity of the lesson will determine how long it will exercise tempering and steadying influence. —Wayne (Neb.) Herald.

KEEP SCHOOLS FREE

If the national government, which has undertaken to godfather practically all human endeavor, is desirous during an emergency of lending financial assistance to educational units, principally in the rural districts in order to keep country schools open until the end of the school year, there should be an absence of protest. But that is as far as Uncle Sam should be allowed to proceed with the educational program of the nation. For a long time there has been constant agitation in some quarters to establish a federal policy of education, headed by a secretary who would be a member of the president's cabinet. If the people of this country have one spark of pride left, they will oppose orientation under federal supervision and control the work of educating our young people. Let us at least keep the schools of America free from the influence of bureaucrney.

Self praise, little merit.

CLEAN PREMISES KEEP BABY CHICKS HEALTHY

Good Scrubbing of Brooder Houses and Cleaning of Ranges Needed

Success in raising baby chicks depends more upon thorough cleanliness in housing and feeding than upon any other factor because most of the diseases which affect the birds are rapidly spread in unsanitary surroundings according to the poultry department at Michigan State college.

The first place to start in preparing for baby chicks is to provide clean range for the brooder houses and the runs where the chicks will be confined. No ground should be used if any poultry has ranged upon it during the past two years. Internal parasites and disease bacteria will survive in soil that long and there is no practical way to rid the ground of them. Well drained soil growing grass or alfalfa is best for the range.

Disinfectants should be used according to the directions supplied by the manufacturers. These preparations differ in character and the methods or dilutions used with one will not succeed with the others. Sometimes stronger solutions of disinfectant are less effective than the one recommended by its maker, so follow directions.

CRIBBAGE BANQUET ENJOYED MONDAY EVENING

Masons and Odd Fellows Choose Captains for Coming Winter

Winners were banqueted by the losers at the I. O. O. F. hall Monday night as the final feature of the 4th annual Masonic-Odd Fellow winter cribbage contest won by the Masons. A. L. Fitch acted as toastmaster.

During the banquet awards were tendered the individual high point scorers of the series. The Masonic honors went to John Kling and W. H. Cook, and first and second awards to Edward Goldstick and A. T. Richardson of the Odd Fellows.

Organization for the coming winter season resulted in the selection of W. C. Bellinger as captain of the Masons, and John Geen to lead the Odd Fellows. S. O. Sorensen was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the group.

The party Monday night was an enjoyable affair and fitting climax to this popular winter pastime.

HOUSE PASSES STRAITS MACKINAC BRIDGE BILL

Would Borrow $35,000,000 from Government for Project

The house Thursday passed a bill creating a state commission empowered to borrow $35,000,000 from the federal government to finance construction of a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac. The measure goes to the senate.

Friends of the plan differ as to the possible route of such a plan.

One group would build the bridge to connect St. Ignace, Mackinac Island, Round Island and Boise Blanc Island and thence span four miles of open water of the Straits of Mackinac to the main land of the southern peninsula; five miles east of Cheboygan.

Opponents of this plan, arguing that it would take four bridges and entail a huge expenditure, propose a starting point as two miles west of Mackinaw City, connecting with a high bluff on the north side of the straits.

CHILD HEALTH COMMITTEE HAD INTERESTING MEETING AT IRONTON

Thirty-five persons were present at a meeting of the Charlevoix County Child Health committee held Tuesday afternoon at Ironton.

Mrs. E. J. Edwards, president, gave an interesting talk on the work accomplished by the health unit in the district and made an urgent appeal for workers. A paper, prepared by O. P. North, citing the benefits our own school receives from the health unit, was read, and A. Winnifred Golley, county nurse, gave a talk in which she told of plans for a clinic, school service and how such service may be obtained. Her talk was followed by an interesting demonstration on first aid.

Mrs. G. W. Bechtold, of East Jordan, told of the sewing class in East Jordan and what the members are accomplishing.

The Ironton ladies served delicious refreshments.

DRIVE TRUCK TO CHARLEVOIX FROM BEAVERS

Party of Five Made Crossing Without Difficulty Monday

A crossing by motor vehicle from St. James to Charlevoix over Lake Michigan ice floes was accomplished Monday for the first time since 1921 if statistics are correct.

Driving a light truck towing a sleigh load of fish a party of five including Pat and Archie Lafreniere, Charles Martin, Emmet McCann and Stanley Floyd came ashore late Monday afternoon near South Point and drove on into Charlevoix.

Leaving St. James with the idea of reaching the mainland at the first available point, the party swung north to Hog Island and Skillagalee and then south. Unable to reach shore at Cross Village because of windrowed ice, they continued to Charlevoix.

The last crossing by motor vehicle is said by some to have been made in 1921 and others in 1924. It has been a good many years, regardless.

A miscellaneous cargo of gasoline, groceries and building supplies were carried to St. James on the return trip. The party experienced little difficulty with exception of occasional rough stretches of ice. Motoring from the island to the north shore is common, but crossings to lower peninsula points have been unusual.

MUSICAL PROGRAM ENJOYED LAST THURSDAY

Was Feature of March PTA Meeting —Will Repeat Program

A delightful musical program directed by Mrs. A. J. Stelter was a feature of the March meeting of the PTA held last Thursday evening. All numbers were well received by the audience.

The program consisted of several two-piano numbers, Mariella VanAllsburg and Marjorie Edwards playing "Country Gardens" and Mrs. Carleton Dean and Mrs. A. J. Stelter playing "Manitou," "If I Were a Bird" and Rachmaninoff's "Prelude Militaire." The ladies' quartette sang two charming numbers, "By the Waters of Minnetonka" and "Spring Song."

Miss Lola Fessenden played two numbers from Bach. Miss Esther Fochtman a clarinet solo, "Flower Song," and Miss Marian Tyler a flute solo, "The Swan."

Owing to the storm and the basketball tournament at Petoskey, the attendance was small and for this reason plans are being made to repeat the program at the April meeting on Thursday, the 12th.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Membership in Leslie T. Shapton post has now reached seventy-six and the efforts of the membership committee this week are expected to raise the total to one hundred. That means two more stars for the commander and adjt to wear in their crowns. The post expects this year to have the largest membership in the history of the American Legion in Charlevoix.

Last Sunday five of the post officers journeyed to Rogers City and attended a Lower 11th district post officers' conference at the Thompson hotel there. These meetings are being held once a month around the district and are proving a success in the spirit of solidarity that they are creating and the matters of common interest to the ex-serviceman that are being discussed and acted upon. Harold L. Young post 121 of Rogers City, played host this time and gave us a right royal welcome and an excellent dinner.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

As soon as the governor signs the bill providing for a 36 per cent reduction in the cost of automobile license plates, the department of state will start making refunds to the approximately 200,000 motorists who have purchased 1934 plates at the old high rate.

The bill provides that weight taxes be reduced from 55 cents to 35 cents per hundred weight.

All refunds will be made from Lansing and will be mailed to the automobile owners, it was announced, and motorists will not be able to secure their refund checks from the branch office where they purchased their 1934 plates.

Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald has announced that 1933 plates may be used for ten days after the new bill becomes effective. This "grace" period was allowed so that motorists would not be compelled to wait in line long hours in order to secure their new license plates. The two-payment plans of paying the weight tax will continue in force this year, it was announced.

How many families in Michigan move each day without leaving a proper forwarding address at their old home.

While accurate statistics are impossible to secure, records of the title division of the department of state indicate that from five to seven families out of each 1,000 families do this daily.

For the past few weeks, approximately 2,000 motor vehicle titles have been mailed out by the department each day. And from 10 to 15 titles are returned each day with the notation by postal authorities that the person to whom the envelope is addressed, cannot be located.

All titles returned by postal authorities unclaimed are held in a special file until the motorist writes in to the department, giving the new and correct address.

FORMER LOCAL YOUNG MAN MEETS DILLINGER

James Gaskin, Chicago, Has Car Stolen by Indiana Bad Man

The escapades of Mr. John Dillinger, notorious Indiana outlaw, were brought closer to home Monday with the receipt from Harry A. Alcock of clippings from Chicago newspapers relating an experience James Gaskin, former local young man, had with the bandit last Friday.

The Chicago Daily News covers the incident as follows:

"Mr. Gaskin, who is chauffeur for Mrs. Pauline Stern, was waiting in front of 2440 Lake Shore Drive, where Mrs. Stern was visiting her son. A gray sedan stopped across the street. A man got out, approached him and asked for a match. A second man followed. Mr. Gaskin found a match and lowered the front window of his sedan to hand it out.

"At that point the second man moved out of the shadow to push the barrel of a submachine gun across the sill and ordered Mr. Gaskin to climb into the tonneau. Mr. Gaskin climbed.

"They pulled away from the curb immediately. The gray sedan swung about and followed. At Orchard and Wrightwood avenue the man Mr. Gaskin later identified as Dillinger opened the door and told him to get out.

"A few minutes later the chauffeur was reporting to the police."

The article continues to relate that the subsequent chase was futile.

SHE FOUND A WAY OUT

She Had to Have Money and This Is How She Earned It

Mrs. Louise Timbarthy, like thousands of other women, a short time ago was confronted with a positive need for more money. Her husband had been out of work for some time and their savings were almost gone. She couldn't have taken a regular job if she had found one because her children needed her care. But she found a way out of her difficulties, and she is willing to tell the world how she did it. She said she was reading this newspaper one day when she noticed this advertisement:

CUT ME OUT

send until me, with your name and address to LORD & AMES, inc., 360 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago. I will bring you a free sample of Lorray Face Powder and details how to make $50 to $60.00 a week extra in your spare time.

She answered the advertisement and received the free samples by return mail with a letter telling her how to start in business.

Mrs. Timbarthy started to work that day by showing the samples to some of her friends. She didn't meet with any encouragement. The second day was a little better. The third day was just "terrible." In fact, the results from her first week's work were sad and disappointing. She found she had earned exactly $1.10.

However, on the fourth week orders began to come in from the women to whom she had shown her samples and her second calls were more successful. She earned $14.75 on her fourth week and for the past three months her income has ranged from $6.00 to $21.00 a week, according to the number of hours she has been able to spare from her housework. Besides, she gets all her own beauty aids and cosmetics at less than wholesale price.

She advises any woman confronted with the same problem she faced to cut out and mail the little advertisement.—Adv.

Flyer Honored for Heroic Act

The Soldier's medal, one of the highest in the power of the government to bestow, was awarded at Los Angeles to Lieut. William L. Bogen, Air Corps reserve. The decoration was presented by Maj. Homer R. Oldfield. The citation was recorded the young flyer for heroism performed with "utter disregard for his own safety," at Fort Clark, Texas, May 4, 1933. Lieutenant Bogen, piloting a plane on a cross-country flight with five military passengers, made a landing for refueling. The plane crashed and burst into flames. Bogen reentered the plane to grab out three trapped passengers and extinguish burning clothing of the others.

Colonists May Displace Famous Greek Monastery

Feminism may have conquered the greatest portion of the world, but there are still places in Europe where equality of sexes is not yet recognized, and where no woman is allowed to enter even under an escort of the male sex.

One of these spots is in Greece, and unless the Greek government succeeds in its plans of national confiscation, women of all over the world will try in vain to climb the mountains where for centuries monks have lived carrying out their anti-woman tradition.

Amongst these monasteries are those on Mount Athos, but there are many more, less famous although not less rigid in the enforcement of the "no woman" rule.

Built on top of almost inaccessible mountains where approach is so difficult that cable rails are used instead of ropes, these monasteries are said to be immensely wealthy. In many cases, nobody knows the amount of art treasures, gems, antiques, and so on they may hide, but it is generally admitted that some of them occupy the positions which, thousands of years ago, were the sites of famous temples, when Apollo and other divinities were presiding over the immense prosperity of Greece.

The fall of Troy, the advent of Byzantium, and the arrival in Greece of the first apostles, established new rulers in these deserted temples. Where Apollo's hymns were once sung Christian hymns were heard; where pagan priests congregated, Christian monks came to live and pray. The strict rule of chastity was imposed, a rule which has survived throughout centuries.

The monks live a simple and strict life; they devote many hours to prayer, to singing, and to religious celebration; they live almost entirely on the produce of the soil they cultivate, bartering olives, honey, fruits, oil and other produce against other necessities. Some of these monks were very wealthy persons; many of them Russians, Germans and even Turks who made a gift to the monastery of all their worldly goods.

Members of some of the most aristocratic families in Europe are said to have become members of these communities and to have brought fabulous riches to the monasteries.

Undisturbed throughout centuries, even by the many changes of foreign domination which included a long period of Turkish rule, these monasteries have prospered in their independent life.

But today their existence is threatened. The necessity for giving an outlet to their refugees from Asia Minor is forcing the Greek government to open one of the most sacred soils in the world to those families of colonists who are returning to their motherland. The monks of Mount Athos and of the other monasteries may have to go; their places being taken by the new pioneers who will bring with them their women and children, thus breaking the last of the anti-feminist tradition existing in Europe. For the first time a woman will be able to climb those mountains, which so far men alone have ruled and inhabited.

NEED SHOWN FOR BRUSH AND TREE HILLSIDE GROWTH

The value of a dense growth of vegetation for the protection of watersheds, be it grass, brush or tree growth, was never better illustrated than in the flood calamity that recently occurred in southern California.

It will be recalled that last fall fire destroyed all brush and tree growth on more than 5,000 acres of hillsides in the Los Angeles area and caused a great loss of life as well as property. It was from these denuded slopes that a flood 30 times greater than the high water from forested hillsides swept down on those southern California communities, carrying millions of tons of silt and destroying everything in its path.

For fear that such a calamity would occur following the fire last fall, forest service men immediately sowed some 4,000 acres of this fire-swept hillside with mustard, to reestablish a protective covering, but unfortunately the mustard crop had not germinated when the heavy rainfall which caused the flood occurred.

"From 14 to 16 inches of rain fell in two days," explain forest service men, "and rushed down the unprotected hillsides without restraint, carrying bridges, homes, automobiles and everything before it. Roughly speaking, more than 30 times as much water came off this burned area as came off the unburned areas adjacent, and if the hills had retained their brush over less than one-thirtieth of the run-off would have occurred. This is one of the most striking examples that we have ever recorded of the potential capacity of vegetation cover to retard run-off, even in a torrential rainfall."

There is nothing like the root systems of trees, brush and plant life to serve as a natural storage reservoir for water, and without this floods are certain to occur.—Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Substance" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, March 18.

Golden Text: "Jesus said unto them, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid" (Matt. 14:27).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Bible: "And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea. And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear. But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid. And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus. But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?"

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p.329): "Because you cannot walk on the water and raise the dead, you have no right to question the great might of divine Science in these directions. Be thankful that Jesus, who was the true demonstrator of Science, did these things, and left his example for us."

STATE PROFITING FROM OIL LEASES

QUARTER MILLION RECEIVED IN LAST SEVEN YEARS

Michigan Takes Leading Place As Oil Producer With Opening of New Fields

In seven years more than $250,000 has been turned over to the general fund of the state of Michigan by the conservation department, the direct income from the oil industry affecting state lands anad reserved mineral rights.

This income represents royalties, rentals, bonus and fees pertaining to the leasing of state lands for well drilling.

At the rate royalties and rentals mounted in the state's returns last year and the existing possibility that the oil industry will continue to grow, it is thought that within a few years it might form the basis for a substantial source of revenue to the people of the state.

So far as the state's treasury is concerned the oil industry had an inauspicious beginning. In 1927 the conservation department reported a gross income of $4.50. This represented the rental of oil leases on state property. The following year, 1928, this new industry netted Michigan $1,918.96.

The first substantial income came in 1929 with the opening of the mid-state fields. In that year royalties mounted to more than $21,000 and with rentals, bonus and application fees brought the state an income of $25,846.27.

The year 1930 with rapid developments in the oil fields yielded the state treasury $85,629.96 of which $50,092.08 was from royalties alone. Rentals amounted to more than $17,000 and bonus an equal sum.

In 1931 the state's income was slightly more than $4,000 and in 1932 it came to $30,634.

The spread of the oil industry in 1933 with increasing encroachments toward state-owned land resulted in an income of $117,204.77. Of this amount $93,184.73 was in royalties, $20,306.54 in rentals, $3,524.50 in bonus for leases and $187 in application fees.

During the past seven years the revenue has totaled $305,883.45, that being the amount turned over by the lands division, department of conservation, to the state treasurer.

Rental, under state regulations, is at the rate of 50 cents a year per acre on land leased from the state. If wells are not drilled the first year the rental mounts to $1 a year. The bonus represents the highest price offered for a particular lease in addition to the regular rental fee.

In addition to the revenue derived by the state from the leasing of oil rights on state land and the royalties obtained by the state from oil produced on this land, there is a considerable income both to the state and local political units from oil operations.

A flat severance tax of two per cent of all oil produced in Michigan is prorated between the state, the county and the township in which the particular wells are located. In addition, it was pointed out, property values rise in the vicinity of proven fields with resulting higher tax returns.

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO AID CHILD CRIPPLES

Everyone Urged to Buy the Easter White Cross Seals Being Sold

The Michigan Society for Crippled Children, in collaboration with the International society, is about to launch an intensive campaign to further the work for crippled children.

The campaign will be in charge of county committees throughout the state, and will be conducted during the two weeks preceding Easter. The purposes are to make everyone familiar with the problems incident to the care, treatment, education and placement of crippled children, as well as the prevention of crippling conditions, and to secure, through the sale of Easter White Cross Seals at one penny each, to as many people as possible, sufficient funds with which to carry on the work.

The cooperation of judges of probate, county welfare agents, county commissioners of schools, superintendents of schools, members of Rotary and other service clubs, Parent-Teacher associations, the American Legion, the King's Daughters, Women's clubs, school groups, church groups, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other organizations is being invited, and a thorough educational campaign will be conducted.

The idea of breaking away from the old plan of securing a comparatively few larger contributions and popularizing the movement by acquainting everybody with it is the outstanding thing in the campaign.

HIGHWAY AROUND LAKE MICHIGAN IS BEING PLANNED

Federal construction of a continuous highway around Lake Michigan is the objective of a movement under way in which the support of Illinois, Indiana and Michigan is sought.

A conference of highway commissions representing these states and Wisconsin is planned for Milwaukee April 10 by a delegation of Milwaukee county and city officials and civic leaders who met with Gov. Albert G. Schmedeman recently.

Former Assemblyman Alfred J. Buntin, Milwaukee, pointed out that the federal government might be induced to equalize the sectional apportionment of its public works funds by an appropriation to build the highway and satisfy the central states' demand for funds.

MOTORISTS TO GET ANOTHER EXTENSION

Will Have Ten Days to Buy Plates After Price Is Set

Michigan motorists who have not yet purchased their 1934 automobile license plates will be given at least an additional 10 days to procure them.

After the house had again delayed action on a measure reducing the fees 36 per cent, Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, said that he will grant an extension of ten days after the bill is finally acted upon by the solons. The bill has already passed the senate, but the house has been squabbling over the portions of the $5,100,000 loss in revenues which shall be shouldered by the state highway department and the counties.

Fitzgerald's decision to again postpone the final date for operation of autos with 1933 plates was preceded in the house by passage of a resolution giving him authority to fix March 31 as the final date. This resolution also had already been passed by the senate.

Under present law March 1 is the deadline for use of 1933 plates, but with the legislature working on a bill to reduce the rates Fitzgerald extended the time to March 10. This date will be again set ahead to give the secretary of state's department time to change its schedules to conform with the new fees and to give motorists time to obtain plates after the legislature has made up its mind.

AT THE MOVIES

Popular Singer in "Charming Deceiver"

One of the high-lights of the brilliant Majestic presentation "The Charming Deceiver," starring Miss Constance Cummings, which is playing at the Palace theatre Saturday and Sunday, is the singing of Iris Ashley, popular cabaret star, who in her own inimitable fashion puts over what promises to be one of the most haunting hit songs of the season, "Whistling Under the Moon."

Miss Ashley is not a newcomer to the screen, in fact it was through this medium that she began her career. A hankering after the theatre led from screen work and she entered into cabaret work in which she proved herself an unqualified success. This led to her appearance in many musical shows, and later in straight dramas. Cabaret, however, still remained her forte and her popularity with night club patrons steadily grew. Frank Lawton and Binnie Barnes are also featured in "The Charming Deceiver," which was directed by Monty Banks.

SPORTSMAN CLUB PREPARING BIG PROGRAM

Plan to Raise Half Million Fingerlings in Rearing Ponds

Raising of a half million fingerling trout at the Stover creek rearing ponds is the ambitious program to be undertaken this year by members of the Charlevoix Sportsman's Club.

Through the splendid cooperation of Lige Geer, in charge of the local federal fish hatchery, now temporarily closed, U. S. Fisheries Bureau officials have granted permission for operation of the hatchery for the time necessary to propagate 150,000 steelhead spawn to be received in April. The city council has voted to furnish water and electric current for the hatchery operation. When hatched the fry will be transferred to the rearing ponds.

In addition to the steelhead, Wm. H. Wallace, president of the Sportsman's Club, stated favorable replies have been received from requisitions for 100,000 mackinaw trout, 100,000 brook trout and 50,000 brown trout fry.

The rearing ponds, through improvements made last fall, have been placed in excellent condition. A by-pass was constructed by CWA labor to regulate flood water which last year raised havoc with fry placed in the ponds. With this control feature, little trouble should be encountered in raising to fingerling stage at least 75% of fry received.

East Jordan has a similar program planned for the coming summer and, through the combined efforts of the two clubs, the heaviest plant of game fish in Charlevoix county waters in recent years is in prospect for next fall.

OPEN SEASON FOR GAME FISH LONGER

Inland Lake Trout Spearing Season Closed Feb. 28; Some Streams Open

Under a law enacted by the state legislature in 1933, the open season for taking certain species of game fish in the inland lakes of Michigan by hook and line was extended through April according to the fish division, state department of conservation.

This shortens the closed season to 55 days, except in designated pike lakes where fishing for certain species is permitted the year around.

Heretofore, hook and line fishing was banned from March 31 until May 1 in designated pike lakes and until June 25 in all other lakes. In the last case the opening date, June 25, was left unchanged.

The following species of fish may be taken by hook and line in the inland lakes and non-trout streams through April this year:

The season for spearing through the ice on inland waters came three close February 28, but spearing on non-trout streams not otherwise closed and certain designated streams or portions of streams is permitted from March 1 to May 15.

Carp, suckers, redhorse, mullet, dogfish and garpike may be taken by the spear during that period. Use of the spear on Muskegon river and on Pine river from Sumner dam to Alma dam, Gratiot county, is forbidden.

SEEK REGISTRATION OF THE UNEMPLOYED

Those Still Out of Work Asked to Notify National Re-employment

In order to get an accurate account of all persons still interested in regaining employment, J. Warne Davis, manager of the Charlevoix county National Re-employment office in the Brown building, Bridge street, asks they communicate with his office.

Mr. Davis says that registration can be made by personal calls at the office or by postcard signifying whether or not the applicant is still seeking employment. If the applications of those desiring to register are not received by March 26th the officials will consider their cards inactive, as will consider their cards inactive for the reason they are either working or do not care to work.

Another request is that if any person who has registered at the office leaves the community for any length of time they notify the officials accordingly.

The annual St. Patrick's dinner will be served Sunday, March 18, at St. Mary school hall, commencing at one o'clock.—Adv. 1111.

SPECIAL SESSION BROUGHT TO CLOSE

FEW COMSTOCK PROPOSALS ARE MADE LAW

Tax Revision, New Constitution and Reapportionment Turned Down —Adopt Building Bill

The second special session of the legislature stood adjourned Saturday with few of the major proposals offered by Governor Comstock having been enacted into law.

Bringing to a close nearly eight months of legislative activities since being elected, members of the 57th legislature in the early hours of morning probably wound up their activities with the passage of a bill which will submit to the voters within ten days the question of whether the state shall bond itself to the extent of $30,000,000 to finance a job-providing program of construction on state highways and institutions.

Of the more than two score other propositions which were submitted to the legislature by the governor this bill was one of the several which obtained an approval of the solons. Prior to Friday night the legislature had reduced the cost of automobile license plates by 36 per cent and had included the delinquent taxes of 1932 among those which may be paid in ten annual installments.

As the legislature brought its session to a conclusion, dozens of bills sponsored by the administration died in one house or the other. Stranded somewhere between the two chambers was a measure proposing to reduce the interest rates charged by small loan companies. The present rate is 3 1-2 per cent per month; the house thought this should be reduced to 2 1-2 per cent but senate radicals violated their pledge to the governor to pass a "reasonable" hill and slashed the rate to 1 per cent.

The house refused to stray this far from the administration fold and the bill died.

Among other measures passed as the result of the second special session were those making available $100,000 to advertise the tourist attractions of the state; a measure adding 500 miles to the state trunk line highway system and a bill appropriating $360,000 to compensate municipalities for their loss in revenue resulting from the exemption of war veterans from the property tax and a bill prohibiting the use of deep trap nets by commercial fishermen.

The session was marked by almost complete rejection of the comprehensive legislative program outlined by the legislative council. After laboring months the council produced a measure which would have completely re-written the state's tax laws so as to permit, for instance, payment of current levies on a monthly basis. This measure was re-referred to the council by the house with the recommendation that it be re-introduced in 1935.

Similar treatment was accorded proposals to simplify county government and to consolidate the county school systems. Both measures were the subject of attack by local officials who challenged the sincerity of the of the so-called economy measure emanating, it was charged, from urban areas.

Reapportionment died in the house committee without being brought to the floor. Election reform bills were not brought to a vote. Governor Comstock's often-repeated demands that the constitution be completely rewritten was ignored by the legislature, the senate refusing to accede to his suggestion that the state's basic law be remoulded to fit present needs.

A bill which would have cancelled all delinquent taxes for 1931 and prior years died. The legislature refused to yield to partisan demands that the Michigan state securities commission be abolished.

The federal government demanded

REPUBLICANS TO RALLY TUESDAY

REGIONAL GATHERING OF THE PARTY AT TRAVERSE CITY

Frank M. Sparks, Editor Grand Rapids Herald, and Other Speakers Will Be Heard

The first of several rallies of northern Michigan republicans will be held Tuesday evening, March 27, at Traverse City in the Park Place hotel.

The event, being arranged by Charles Menmuir, Grand Traverse county, republican chairman, will mark the inauguration of a spring round-up of the party as a preliminary to the coming state political campaign. Republicans from a dozen adjoining counties are being invited to participate in the rally. Special attention is being devoted to the younger voters.

Frank M. Sparks, editor of the Grand Rapids Herald and well known political writer, has been secured as the principal speaker of the evening. The rally will start with a banquet at 6:30 o'clock, after which Mr. Sparks and other speakers will be heard.

The Traverse City regional rally is in keeping with a general state-wide movement to establish banqueting organizations in Michigan counties as a Republican weapon with which to oppose the young Democratic organization.

Monday evening of this week the once-famous Gridley club of Ionia was revived when nearly 500 party leaders from 12 counties planned a campaign for support of young voters. The meeting resulted in a belief that state Republican factions have declared a truce and are rallying to the support of Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald for governor.

Without a doubt Northern Michigan counties will soon join those of lower Michigan in the formation of Fitzgerald-for-Governor clubs and with the advent of spring and summer will become active in preparations for the coming political campaign. Charlevoix county, always a Republican stronghold, may be relied upon for its share of influence and support in the impending contest.

BACK TAXES, DOCTORS, STORE BILLS, ARE PAID BY LAND BANK LOANS

From Michigan has just come one of many answers to the question, "What do farmers do with the money they borrow from the Federal Land Bank?"

The answer is in the form of a tabulation of the loans made to the borrowers in one national farm loan association of this state which sent the information to the Farm Credit Administration headquarters in St. Paul the other day, from which it has been sent to Michigan newspapers.

Each Farmer Pays Three Creditors

There were 59 borrowers, they borrowed $117,000, and they immediately paid up bills and accounts to 166 different firms and individuals, besides 30 different sets of delinquent taxes. Each borrower on the average paid 3.3 creditors, considering the taxes as paid to creditors.

The 30 sets of taxes amounted to $5,302. Thirty-four per cent of all that was borrowed, or $40,893, went to 59 different individuals. Thirty-six banks shared in the loans to the extent of $48,988, and 17 insurance companies got $3,268. Four manufacturing plants were paid $2,513.

Old Threshing Bills Paid

Six merchants collected $908 on old accounts and four doctors got over $100 each. Then there were such payments as old threshing bills, payments to estates, lumber companies, contractors, the telephone company and undertakers. These loans were made up of 38 straight Land Bank loans for $94,900, and 21 straight commissioner's loans for $22,000.

MARCH TERM CIRCUIT COURT IS IN SESSION

East Jordan Liquor Law Violator Given Fine and Costs of $700

March term of circuit court for Charlevoix county opened here Monday with Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, presiding.

Probation cases were heard Monday and many, especially prohibition law violators, were dismissed.

Charles Beebe of East Jordan, who previously had pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law, was sentenced to pay fine and costs of $700 within 20 days or serve 10 months in Jackson prison. It was the first sentence in circuit court here since the repeal of prohibition.

The trespass case of Mary Talboy vs. Carl Ecker and Henry Steimel went on trial Tuesday morning and is being continued today.

TAX COMMISSION CONVENED MONDAY

NAMED J. M. HARRIS, BOYNE CITY, CHAIRMAN

Adjourn Until County Governmental Units Prepare Budgets Upon Which Allocation May Be Based

Upon orders from Chester M. Martin, chairman of the state tax commission, the Charlevoix county tax commission, which met Monday for its organization meeting at the court house, adjourned until further notice.

The state order, however, was in line with a decision already reached by the local commission to adjourn until such a time as its work of allocating taxes among the various governmental units of the county could be carried on. The fact that townships will not hold their board of review meetings until April, and the county budget cannot be ascertained due to the uncertainty of future welfare requirements, the task of allocation at the present time is almost an impossible one.

Before adjournment the commission named John M. Harris of Boyne City, as chairman for the coming year.

The county tax commission was formed last spring under the provisions of an amendment to the constitution which limited the taxation on property to 15 mills on each $1,000.00 valuation. The commission's duties are to allocate the 15 mills among the several governmental units of the county.

The law provided eight-tenths of a mill be reserved by the state to finance the University of Michigan and Michigan State college and one-tenth of a mill for each city or village. This plan was not followed out to the letter by the commission last year however, for the distribution for Charlevoix county other than the university requirement was made on the basis of 8 mills for the county, ranged from 1.1 to 2.2 mills for cities and villages and from 3 to 6.2 mills for schools.

The board must fix a preliminary allocation by April 10. Hearings will be arranged with governmental officials and the final allocation completed by April 25th.

The Charlevoix county tax commission is composed of J. M. Harris of Boyne City, and R. G. Watson of East Jordan, recently reappointed by Ervan A. Ruegsegger, judge of probate, County School Commissioner William C. Palmer, County Treasurer Lillis Flanders, and Howard C. Stephens, chairman of the supervisors' finance committee.

POTATO ASSOCIATION MEETING IS MARCH 26

Gathering at Gaylord to Make Plans for Coming Exhibit

Notices of the annual meeting of the Top O' Michigan Potato Association at Gaylord, have been issued by C. H. Blivin, secretary.

The meeting will be held at two o'clock Monday afternoon, March 26, according to the announcement, and is open to everyone interested in the annual Top O' Michigan potato, apple and seed show, an event held until the fall of 1933 when it was discontinued temporarily due to unsettled financial conditions and inability to secure state aid.

The notice states that prospects this year look much brighter and urged a good attendance at the annual meeting.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LICENSE SEEKERS

THEY WILL HELP IN APPLYING FOR AUTOMOBILE PLATES

If Carefully Observed, Work of Registering Car Owners for 1934 Will Be Materially Expedited

Midnight on March 24, 1934, is the deadline for the use of 1933 automobile license plates in Michigan without extension stickers. Following are some suggestions that the manager of the local branch of the department of state makes to facilitate the sale of license plates and stickers:

First and foremost—bring your certificate of title, the big green or yellow sheet. No licenses will be issued unless it is presented.

Next, if possible bring your certificate of registration — the little square slip or stub that you received when you bought your plates or sticker last year. This is printed in black ink for passenger or pleasure cars, in red for trucks or commercial cars and in brown ink for trailers. Read what it says and be sure you get the right one. Don't confuse it with the driver's or operator's license—an inspection will show you the difference. This certificate of registration contains information that the title does not carry and that otherwise would have to be looked up in his records by the branch manager. If you want to save time and get your license quickly and help your neighbor to get his license quickly, please remember to bring it. If you have already purchased a sticker at the old passenger car rate of 55 cents a hundredweight, or at the new rate, you must bring the certificate of registration given you at the time the sticker was issued in order to get the second half, or your 1934 plates, at the reduced rate of 35 cents, as it has to go in to Lansing attached to the application for 1934 plates.

Look your papers pertaining to your car over carefully before you apply for your license. If you are in any doubt as to what you should bring, bring them all. It's better than not to have what you need.

All trucks, pick-ups and other commercial vehicles, except taxis, must be weighed each year and an official weight ticket presented before license will be issued. All trailers on which the amount of the full year's license exceeds $1.50 must be weighed each year. No title is required, but registration certificate must be presented in the case of trailers not required to be weighed. House-car trailers take a rate of 35 cents a hundredweight.

"V" or veterans' plates will only be issued on presentation of an honorable discharge from the service of the United States or other documentary evidence of service in the

He is to repay $200 of the $400 check which he was alleged to have forged. Shultz was sentenced May 26, 1933.

FLYER GETS MEDAL FOR ISLAND RESCUE

Recognized for Flight to Beaver Island in 1923

The war department Saturday announced the award of the distinguished Flying Cross to Capt. Russell L. Meredith, retired, for a heroic aerial rescue of an injured man on Beaver Island, Lake Michigan, in 1923.

Meredith, then a lieutenant of the air corps stationed at Selfridge Field, Mich., learned that the injured man was near the point of death and, owing to frozen condition of the lake, that ordinary means of rescue were impossible. He voluntarily took off in the face of impossible flying conditions, including snow and fog, and flew to the island. He was obliged to land along the shore of the lake once to find his bearings, but again took off and reached the island safely, carrying a doctor to the injured man.

Meredith now lives at Rockaway Valley, Boonton, N. J.

CLASS CAGE CONTESTS UNDER WAY

ANNUAL TOURNAMENT OPENED MONDAY AFTERNOON

Thirteen Games to Be Played This Week by Three Classes Representing Upper School Grades

Interest in athletics at Charlevoix public schools this week is centered upon the annual inter-class basketball tournament which opened Monday afternoon.

A total of thirteen teams are entered in three classes, A, B and C. With each team playing the other during the tournament, a schedule of thirteen games is arranged. Two contests were played Monday, three on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and two Friday. The team winning the greatest number of games in each class will be the winner.

Five teams, one senior, two junior, sophomore and freshman quintets are entered in class A; in class B the junior, sophomore and freshman B teams and the 8th grade A; and in class C the sophomore and freshman C teams, the 8th grade B and 7th grade A teams.

Two games in class C, one in class B and two in class C have been played so far. In the first division the junior A1 squad defeated the seniors by a 19 to 13 score, and the junior A2 quintet took the measure of the sophomores by a 17 to 15 count.

In class B, the 8th grade A team, led by Pearl with 8 points and Nowland and Richardson with 7 each, were victorious over the freshman B team by a lop-sided 32 to 5 score.

In class C, the 9th grade C's defeated the 7th graders 26 to 6 with Bissell scoring 19 points, and the sophomore C squad, led by Scott with 16 points, trounced the 8th grade B's by a score of 22 and 9.

Interest in the tournament is running high and each afternoon following regular class hours members of each grade are out to cheer their teams to victory. Coach Ray Kipke is in charge of the tournament.

SUNDAY IS DEADLINE FOR MOTOR PERMITS

Cars Must Have New Plates or Half-Year Stickers Then

All automobiles must be operating under their 1931 permit, either license plates or windshield half-year stickers, by next Sunday, and the rush to secure the plates or stickers is getting under way at the local branch office of the secretary of state in the Chamber of Commerce.

The office is open from 8:30 until 6 o'clock daily. Each day the crowd grows larger and the line of applicants longer and by Saturday the peak of the rush will have arrived.

More persons are purchasing the annual license plates and fewer the windshield stickers since the legislature made a 35 per cent reduction in the weight tax.

FARMERS URGED TO APPLY FOR LOANS

EMERGENCY CROP FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE ONLY THIS YEAR

Applications to Gaylord Production Credit Association Will Receive Prompt Attention

For the last time perhaps emergency crop loans will be available this spring to farmers of North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, it is announced by S. M. Garwood of Washington in regulations just sent to St. Paul and made known through the offices of the general agent there. Mr. Garwood is production credit commissioner in charge of production and emergency loans. A fund of 40 million dollars has just been appropriated by congress for this purpose. The amount available to each farmer is $25 to $250.

Strict regulations indicating who may get such loans, designating those who will no longer be eligible, and outlining procedure for procuring and repaying the loans are included in the communication from Mr. Garwood.

These Are Not Eligible for Loans

(a) Anyone who can get credit elsewhere can not get an emergency crop loan. (b) No loan will be made to any individual who has shown lack of good faith in repaying feed and seed loans in the past. (c) If a farmer is not eligible, no loan will be made to his wife or unmarried children. (d) No one who is planning to increase his production, or who is not cooperating with the AAA can get a loan. (e) No one applying for more than $150 can get the loan without a statement from the county production council that he does not intend to increase his production; except that where there is no such council he must furnish some other proof that he does not intend to increase his production. (f) Farmers who have a source of income other than farming are not eligible for emergency crop loans.

How Emergency Funds May Be Used

These emergency funds may be used for the following purposes: (1) To pay the actual cost, but no more, of growing crops during 1934, or in case of summer-fallowed land or winter wheat, for growing crops to be harvested in 1935. (2) In drouth areas, so designated by the governor of the Farm Credit Administration, [illegible] 000,000 out of the total 40 million, may be used for feed for livestock. (3) The act imposes a severe penalty for using loans from this fund for any other purposes.

The borrower can not use any of this fund to pay off old accounts, notes or back rent, or to buy any kind of livestock.

Entire Loan Furnished at One Time

All funds will be advanced to the borrower at the time the loan is made, and not on a budget basis. If there is not enough to run through the season the borrower can get no more. Loans may be made before the crops are planted in those states where a first lien on the crop grown as security can be given, or in states where such liens can not be given, loans may be made if the borrower agrees to give a lien after the crop is grown.

The loans mature when the crop

PITTED POTATOES FROZEN IN UNUSUAL WINTER CONDITIONS

While the federal government is taking a hand to eliminate present and future surpluses in certain farm products, Nature the past winter has played a lone part in cutting down the surplus, if any, in potatoes.

To this end untold hundreds of bushels of potatoes have frozen in the pits throughout the country where farmers took this method of storage in anticipation of a rising spring market. While the loss in Charlevoix county is impossible to estimate accurately, those informed claim it will run into thousands of bushels.

In a winter of record cold weather, frost penetrated to a great depth, touching pits where even unusual precaution had been taken, it is reported. Many farmers depending upon their pitted potntoes for seed this spring will have to buy their supply and many have already been forced to purchase for table use.

Fortunately potatoes placed in local storage places were not damaged and are bringing a fair price.

CORRESPONDENCE

NORWOOD

With the arrival of the spring season this week, several of the farmers will be engaged in maple syrup making.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Smith and three-year-old son, Leon, are moving onto the Skacel farm on US-31 this week.

On account of the snow storm and bad weather the St. Patrick's supper, which was to be served by the L. A. S. at the town hall Saturday evening, was given up until different arrangements are made.

Mr. and Mrs. Plenny Genett attended the St. Patrick's dinner, held in the St. Mary school building in Charlevoix, last Sunday. The dinner was largely attended and proved to be a success in every way.

Mrs. Frank Blanchard, who is a staunch friend of Mr. and Mrs. Plenny Genett, was a guest in their home last week and on Wednesday they visited Mr. and Mrs. Reed Genett of Bellaire. Mrs. Blanchard, who has been visiting her son, Clint Blanchard, and other friends and relatives since last August, left for her home in Libby, Mont., where she and her aged mother, enjoy a household together.

Miss Elsie Rumisek was very pleasantly surprised when 14 of her friends gathered at her home Friday evening and reminded her of her 19th birthday anniversary. Games were played and delightful refreshments served. Guests present were Miss Bertha Pierce, Miss Dorothy Hull, Misses Catherine and Marjorie Richardson, Misses Beatrice and Bessie Baumbach and Miss Francis Chvatil, Charles, Glen and Stanley Lord, Lyle Smith, Vern Baumbach, Joseph Stott and Newton Pierce.

CENTRAL LAKE

Twelve degrees below zero Sunday morning.

Six inches of snow had to be plowed out Saturday.

Mrs. Albert Byers is able to sit up some after breaking her leg three weeks ago.

Lloyd Morse was a business visitor in Traverse City, Monday. He has finished putting up his ice.

Central Lake teachers, with Supt. Alexander, attended the teachers' institute in Charlevoix last week.

We have a bunch of cherry buds that are coming out nicely. The peach buds were killed, but not the trees.

Garret Essenberg has finished superintending the CWA work at Elk Rapids, so we hear, and returned home Saturday.

Jack Klooster, we hear, is in a very serious condition with blood poisoning in his foot at the Charlevoix hospital. He cut his foot with an axe.

Wheat was received for Central Lake people last Thursday, but some received such a small quantity that they would not take it. Only potatoes was given to some.

Kenneth McKay was home from county normal over the week end and was out looking for school Saturday. He and Mr. Fales attended the teachers' institute at Charlevoix.

Thomas Wiltse and wife of Bay View, are moving to town to the Duane Johnson house from the farm. The farm, the Fred Ford place, has been sold to Walter Shooks and wife. Mr. Wiltse once owned a farm here years ago and sold out and went to Canada, where he lost much of his property.

Mrs. Grace Pennock started circulating a petition for the reopening of the First State bank here, last week. The banking department tells her that if 75 per cent of the depositors sign the petition, reopening will be considered. Mancelona bank has reopened and Bellaire bank, we hear, is considering it.

The Epworth League and Pastor Mumby are holding a series of "Win My Chum" meetings at this place the last few weeks and visitations will be made this week. The League here and at Barnard is progressing nicely. There will be union services at Pleasant Valley on Easter Sunday headed by the F. M. church pastor, Glen Cornett.

There were about 25 at Barnard Sunday school last Sundny afternoon. Rev. Mumby, Mr. Block and ye correspondent sang a trio for church services. Four young ladies from Charlevoix swalked out to services at Barnard last Sunday. Their St. Patrick's day exercises last Friday evening were well attended. The pastor and the writer were entertained at the home of Ed. Jones for dinner. Mr. Jones accompnnied the pastor to services at Norwood and Barnard a week ago Sunday.

At the teachers' institute in Charlevoix last week Judge Millington's address on "Education and Crime" stressed well the power that the teachers wield in training the young, who do not indulge in liquor, tobacco, card playing and dancing. In comparing their work in training the youth he put school training ahead of home and church. He said the church as a whole had appeared to have failed in that work. He compared salaries of Indiana and Michigan teachers and said Indiana's average was $800, whereas Michigan's was $750 in city, and $450 in rural schools. TerWee's orchestra rendered some fine music and the impersonation of Lincoln by Prof. Bendell, was fine. The story told of the little girl who wrote a letter to Lincoln, asking him to grow whiskers, should be told by the teachers to the pupils. Much credit is due Commissioner Palmer for his efforts in putting through the program. Commissioner Thumm's chalk-drawn pictures were real works of art.

Money and Time Needed to Duplicate Pyramid

An interesting study by New York architects has developed the fact that it would cost $150,000,000 and require five years to build a facsimile of the great Egyptian pyramid of Cheops at this time in Central park, New York. The estimate is based upon erecting the structure of stone and using all modern equipment now available. The estimate continues to state that 2,500,000 man hours of labor would be involved in completing the task with modern machinery. It is estimated that 100,000 workers toiled twenty years in building the original. One of the architects, who studied the pyramid problem quite seriously, has made a perspective drawing showing such a pyramid in Central park. His drawing, made to scale, shows the tip of the pyramid on the same elevation as the forty-second floor of the R. C. A. building.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Rising Wolf, White Blackfoot

THE blood of French nobility and of English aristocracy flowed in his veins. He was fair-haired and blue-eyed and white-skinned, but to this day he is revered among the Blackfeet Indians as "Rising Wolf," one of their own greatest and best-loved. Hugh Monroe was his name and he was born at Three Rivers, Quebec, in 1798, the son of Capt. Hugh Monroe of the British army in Canada and Angelique Roche, daughter of a noble family of French emigres.

When but sixteen years of age he persuaded his parents to let him enter the service of the Hudson's Bay company, the lords of the empire of fur, and that spring he started west with a flotilla of their canoes. The next year he was at Mountain Post on the Saskatchewan. Around the fort were camped thousands of Blackfeet, come there to trade for the white man's goods. But as yet the company had no Blackfeet interpreter and the H. B. C. factor at the post, impressed with the intelligence of young Monroe, detailed him to live and travel with the Piikuni (Pelican) tribe of the Blackfeet until he should learn their language and be able to influence them to return to Mountain Post each year to do their trading.

Young Monroe succeeded beyond the wildest hopes of the H. B. C. factor. The first thing he did, quite by chance, made a deep impression upon the Indians. He lighted the medicine man's pipe of tobacco by holding a burning glass, concealed in his hand, over it and the Blackfeet, awe-stricken by his apparent link with their great deity, the sun, thereafter regarded him as "great medicine." Later he strengthened the bond by marrying Sinokapi, or Fox Woman, the daughter of Lone Walker, a great chief of the Piikuni.

During his long years with the Hudson's Bay company and later with the American Fur company, for which he became post hunter at Fort Benton in Montana and as a free trapper, Monroe extended his influence over the Blackfeet to other tribes as well until he was probably the best-known and best-liked white man among the tribes of the Northern Plains.

Rising Wolf and Fox Woman were the parents of two sons and two daughters—John, Francois, Lizzie and Amelia. The latter married Thomas Jackson, a Virginian, and they had two sons, Robert and William Jackson. Monroe had a great deal to do with the training of these two grandsons who became noted as scouts for Gen. George A. Custer and Gen. Nelson A. Miles in the Sioux war of 1876-77.

"The Father of Oklahoma"

CONSIDER the paradox of Capt. David L. Payne. He was the "father of Oklahoma," yet he was a native of Indiana; he was given his first name because of an event which took [illegible] is buried in Kansas, which state has steadfastly resisted attempts to remove his body to Oklahoma; and the latter state has given him no official recognition beyond naming one of its original counties after him.

Born in Fairmount, Ind., December 30, 1836, his mother, who was a first cousin of Davy Crockett, named him David in honor of the frontier relative who had died gloriously at the fall of the Alamo a few months before. At the age of twenty-one Payne moved to Kansas and took up a claim near Atchison. He served in the Civil war in the Fourth Kansas regiment until 1863 when he was discharged. Then he became a member of the state legislature and postmaster at Fort Leavenworth.

In 1867 he was elected captain of a Kansas cavalry troop formed to fight the Indians and campaigned actively in the western part of the state. During the next two years he served with Gen. George A. Custer and his Seventh cavalry and, as the boon companion of the famous California Joe and actor in many a hair-breadth escape from death, won great renown as the "Scout of the Cimarron."

The year 1870 found him back in politics again, as a member of the state legislature of Kansas, as an unsuccessful candidate for the state senate in 1872 and finally as doorkeeper of the house of representatives in Washington where he remained until 1879. During his service as a scout for Custer, Payne had seen for himself the richness of the land in Oklahoma and in Washington he made the discovery, as he believed, that the lands in the western part of Indian territory, which had been ceded by the Creek Indians to the government for occupation by the other Civilized Tribes and by freedmen, in reality belonged to the public lands of the United States.

So Payne became the first "Oklahoma boomer" and the leader of no less than six of the eight expeditions of homeseekers, all of which tried to settle there and were expelled from the disputed territory by federal troops. Payne died suddenly in Wellington, Kan., November 27, 1884—"poisoned by his enemies," so his friends declare—five years too soon to see the realization of his dream of "The home of the red man" opened to white settlement.

Chic Prints Stress Simple Styling

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HAVE you noticed how remarkably simple is the styling of the new print frocks? One almost gasps at their simplicity—straight narrow skirt, top part frequently in shirtwaist fashion or made ostensibly plain with sleeves which are either three-quarter or full length, often quite full at the armhole or that which is newest of all, fairly close-fitting from shoulder to wrist.

Well now, this glaring simplicity is not a mere happenstance. Rather is it a deliberate move on the part of designers to create along lines that are different. With all their seeming simplicity there is something about these new print gowns which bespeaks the very quintessence of high fashion.

Of course the prints themselves are as new, as new-looking as can be both in motif and coloring. So much so that a last year's print sadly looks it by the side of a today's patterning and weave. For example, there's the new necktie prints such as the one which fashions the very good-looking dress to the left in the picture. To be clad in a frock of necktie print silk during the daytime hours is to declare yourself style-conscious to the last degree. This model is designed for immediate wear under one's winter coat, and is [illegible] rimmed with consummate art. Note the dropped shoulderline, the scarf of self-print, the slim gored skirt and that which is of greatest significance, the new three-quarter sleeve.

One of the joys of gay springtime is the stepping out in new and fashionable footwear, which is why we are especially calling attention to the smart black kid opera pumps which mildly of the necktie-print frock—is wearing. These pumps have a beautifully designed simple arrow motif at the side—just that touch which carries them out of the rank and file. The hat which tops this chic outfit is black felt smartly banded with white.

The point about the print centered in the picture is that it has a navy background. The flowers are in tones of mulberry and white. Seeing that fashion has gone into "the navy" so wholeheartedly this spring, navy accessories are inevitable and so with this captivating spring frock accents of this color very modishly appear in hat, girdle and a chic pair of navy kid strap pumps with circular motifs piped in contrasting white.

The thing you are bound to remember about the print dress on the seated figure is that it is smocked at neckline and sleeves. As a trimming treatment for prints here is real news. It is our prophesy that you will be thinking so excitedly over this idea you will resolve at once that it is exactly what you will do with the print frock you are going to make up in the near future—smock it! You'll love the color scheme of this print in the picture, too. It's fuzze red and beige. Sounds intriguing, does it not?

Briefly we would call your attention to the new sheer wool prints and the mossy crepe prints and the handsome bordered prints all of which are headliners on the spring fabric program.

TWO-COLOR DRESSES AGAIN FIND FAVOR

The two-color frock—once a high favorite but lately almost banished from the scene—is staging a fashion comeback.

Though far from holding the spot light, it is beginning to be seen again in women's spring wardrobes.

Sometimes it appears in a frock which has a dropped shoulder yoke of one color and the body of the dress in another.

Again it is seen in a model whose sleeves contrast with that of the frock, or a trim little dress that has a deep yoke of a contrasting hue.

And there are other variations of the vogue for two colors.

Lanvin puts cherry-red satin sleeves in a black afternoon frock and adds elbow bracelets of the same bright red satin.

She designs a black wool frock with frilled epaulets, sleeves and small collar of apple-green satin and puts a deep U-shaped white wool yoke on a black wool frock to give a contrasting touch.

Tweed Good, Serviceable Fabric for Spring Wear

Another tweed season lies ahead. Once one has acquired the hardy habit of tweed it is impossible to give it up. If one wants durability, and a general all around good fabric friend, it is tweed, and now that weavers have become imaginative in color schemes, one's interest in tweeds is at fever heat.

Don't forget that tweeds are not alone used by tailors, but by dressmakers. Not only coats and suits are made of it, but separate skirts, and very trim looking as well.

The tweed hat and scarf combinations are popular, although a preference is felt hats with tweed.

Inflammable Gown

One of the most novel dresses for spring combines silk and straw. It is highly inflammable, therefore impractical, but it is a sensation.

HOOD COLLAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here's the latest—the hood collar which drops the fur to the back. As the season advances you will be seeing all sorts of hood-shaped collars and capelets. Many of them are made detachable, as for instance perfectly stunning hood-capes of fur-bordered velvet designed to be worn with your new spring suit or cloth street frock. Charming will they also prove later on to wear with summery print frocks and afternoon crepes. Note that the lady of the coat pictured is more fitted as to waist and more rippled as to skirt than in the winter models.

One's Memories Either Benediction or Shame

In a sense there is wisdom in living from day to day. The past is gone and the future is always with us, and as we make that glorious, we make the whole of life glorious. And when the future comes we can review the past without shame or fear. And in such lives memory will be a benediction. That is what wise men will strive to make it, for there is no more civilizing influence working in human affairs. A man without memory would not be essentially different from "the beasts that perish." Whatever memory is, it is certainly a great power for good, though men may make it a dreadful power for evil. The choice seems to be with the individual. He can live nobly and have noble recollections, or live basely and be afraid to review his life. Like most choices, this one is of daily recurrency. There is the question of self-knowledge which is obviously involved but which will not be discussed here. Not that it is not important—for it is tremendously important.—Indianapolis News.

Came to the End

The Jones family went for a day's outing to the wonderful cave of echoes. When they reached home Mr. Jones noticed that his wife was not present.

"Do you know where your mother is?" he asked his daughter.

"Oh! I expect she's trying to have the last word."

MEDICAL ADVICE

If you want to
. . . relieve constipation gently and safely
. . . take the exact dose suited to your need
. . . avoid danger of bowel strain
—use a liquid laxative

NRA

Can constipation be safely relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills and tablets, or any habit-forming cathartic. But you can safely relieve this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit your individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will it irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The unwise use of strong cathartics may often do more harm than good.

In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubtful drug, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't chance it. The contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is stated plainly on the label; fresh herbs, pure pepsin, active senna.

Its very taste tells you Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. Drug stores have it, ready for use, in big bottles.

THE TEST:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics!

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used.

GET BROODER READY BEFORE CHICKS COME

Stoves Should Be Regulated Before Birds Are Injured

Selection and management of the brooder stove is another important part of chick-raising that Michigan State college poultry specialists recommend be given plenty of thought before the chicks are bought.

Most brooder houses are small one-room buildings which must be equipped with brooders having canopies. Stoves without hovers can be used in two-room houses where the chicks can regulate the temperature for themselves by moving nearer or further away from the stove.

Precautions to reduce fire hazards should be made before the brooder stove is set up. An asbestos pad or a sand box should be placed under the stove. The ash door should be easily accessible and should be placed so that it can be seen beneath the hover.

The stove should be fired and regulated for a day or two before chicks are placed in the house. This permits adjustments if the temperature regulator is not working correctly. Temperatures one inch from the floor at the edge of the hover should be 90 degrees. The room away from the hover should not be over 70 degrees.

The temperatures can be gradually reduced as the chicks become older. Feed hoppers and watering dishes should be kept well away from the stove to encourage the chicks to stay in the cool parts of the house as much as possible.

The behaviour of the chicks will enable the poultrymen to tell if temperatures are too high or too low. Crowding close to the stove means too little fire and bunches of chicks in the corners of the house means too little heat.

LOWER RATES ON LOAN TO FARMER

Interest Is Reduced from 6 to 5½ Per Cent on Farm Loans

A reduction of one-half per cent in the interest rates which the Production Credit Association will charge on farm crop loans has been announced by A. J. Townsend, Gaylord, secretary of the association.

This reduction, Mr. Townsend states, has been made possible by a similar reduction made in the rediscount rate by the Intermediate Credit Bank.

The interest rate, formerly 6 per cent, is now 5½ per cent on all farm loans, and on top of this is a small inspection charge.

Applications for loans are still coming into the local office and are being forwarded, after suitable inspection, to St. Paul for final approval. Everything possible is done to speed the applications through the local office.

KEELEY LIQUOR CURE BUSINESS INCREASES

Repeal or improved business has increased the clientele of the Keeley Liquor Cure Institute located at Dwight, Illinois, according to the Chicago Tribune of March 9, 1934. The article continues:

"Last spring 3.2 beer was legalized and on Dec. 5 the sale of hard liquors became lawful and the alcoholic content of beer jumped to 5 and 6 per cent.

"In November, 1933, the institute had an increase of 32 per cent over the number of patients treated in November, 1932. December saw an increase of 65 per cent over the corresponding month of 1932. In January of this year the increase was 55 per cent and the increase in February was 38 per cent, according to comparative figures furnished by Secretary Nelson.

"The management draws no inference from the increases starting last November. The increases given are not over months in dry but prosperous years, but over the five months preceding the beginning of the Roosevelt administration.

LIBRARY CWA IMPROVEMENTS ARE COMPLETED

Saturday brought the completion of an extensive program of improvements at the city library under the CWA. The project, which has been under way for several weeks was finished with painting of floors in the council chambers and city treasurer's office. The improvements included installation of a steel beam to reinforce the building, laying of a new hardwood floor in the council rooms and complete repainting and redecoration of the interior, as well as numerous needed repairs.

The six pairs of pajamas we were to make for children of needy war veterans were finished Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Glossinger. No last minute changes in our program for Monday evening were made and instead of sewing, as we had planned, a surprise party was given with our ex-president, Lela Goss, as guest of honor. Refreshments were served and the ladies enjoyed the evening playing pedro. Vance Wilstead won high score and Gladys Henry consolation.

LICENSE ADJUSTMENTS FROM LANSING OFFICE

Adjustment on 1934 automobile licenses purchased before the reduction in the weight tax became effective, will be made in the secretary of state's office in Lansing and not in the local office. Word to this effect was received recently by the branch office in the Chamber of Commerce.

Where half yearly license stickers were purchased at the old rate, when the license plates are eventually purchased the price will be half the reduced figure and the adjustment will be made from Lansing.

PROPOSES SALES TAX ON OUTSTATE BUYING

Would Equalize Tax Burden in Michigan and Other States

George Sadowski, Democratic congressman from Detroit, introduced a bill recently in the United States congress that is being sponsored by more than 20 states.

The proposed bill is a tax on interstate sales. If this bill is passed, it will equalize the burden of the sales tax levy in Michigan and other states, so that merchants on or near the border line in Michigan would not be penalized by losing their sales to adjacent states having no sales tax.

James E. Mogan, managing director of the Michigan sales tax, said that this bill would have a hearing before the House Interstate Commerce committee at once.

Specifically, this new law would permit the state where an article is consumed or used to levy a tax on the receipts from the sale.

For instance, when out-of-state firms sell tangible personal property into Michigan, they will be liable for the tax regardless of how and when the order originated.

FARMERS URGED TO APLPY FOR LOANS

is grown. Share-croppers wanting an emergency loan can get it only if the landlord will waive claim to his share; and renters or share-croppers benefiting from a loan to a landlord, must waive claim to their share. The law requires this.

Although the maximum loan to one farmer is $250, no loan will be made for more than the cost of growing the crop. Not more than $500 will be loaned to any one landlord in any one county, and there is a limitation as to the amount that can be loaned per acre.

Interest and Fees Limited:

Interest on emergency loans will be 5½ per cent. The Farm Credit Administration is permitted to pay recording or other legal fees up to the amount of $1 per loan, but not more than that. The borrower must pay the balance if any.

Applications for loans of $25 to $150 may be made directly to the emergency crop loan committee in the borrower's county, but for sums over that they must first be made to the local Production Credit Association. If the borrower's credit will not justify a PCA loan, a statement to that effect by the local PCA is sufficient to show that other credit is not available. Regulations in detail will be in the hands of the local committees in a short time.

DEATH TAKES MRS. SMITH OF FISHERMAN'S PARADISE

Death called at the door of Mrs. Horace D. Smith Thursday of last week. Mrs. Smith, the widow of the late H. D. Smith, helped her husband to build up the great summer resort called "Fisherman's Paradise" on Lake Belhaire.

Mrs. Smith had a host of friends and was loved by all who knew her and came into her presence and the many friends that she had in Elk Rapids and surrounding territory were shocked last week when they heard of her passing.

A brother, Steve Rockfellow, passed away just a few weeks ago, and another brother is quite ill at this time of writing.—Elk Rapids Progress.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LICENSE SEEKERS

Civil, Spanish-American or World wars, unless the applicant is known by the branch manager to be a veteran. These plates are 1934 licenses and full year's tax must be paid on them.

If you have a transfered title, look it over carefully and see that it is properly filled out completely and duly notarized, as required, by the party or dealer who transfered it to you, before presenting it for license.

The present supply of low numbers are all spoken for and cannot be given out unless their claimants relinquish their right to them. They are the same series as last year.

The hours of the license bureau will be 8:30 to 12, and 1 to 6. Applicants are requested kindly to refrain from coming too close to the noon hour. No licenses will be issued outside of hours or on Sunday, except by special arrangement beforehand, and then only in cases of urgent necessity.

The branch manager will not accept checks on out-of-town banks.

A TELEPHONE PAYS ITS WAY

There are fewer lonely days and dreary evenings for those who have telephone service. It brings you the voices of friends and family, and takes yours to them. And when impromptu "get-togethers" are arranged, those who can be reached by telephone usually are the ones invited.

A telephone is worth its cost in social advantages alone. Also, it helps find employment, saves trips to the stores or elsewhere in stormy weather, and is PRICELESS PROTECTION in emergencies, enabling you to summon doctor, firemen or police instantly, day or night.

Looking Down on a "Frostbitten" Niagara

Looking up the Niagara gorge from the air, you see the mighty cataract with some winter frills it has never before possessed. Notice for instance the huge mounds of ice in front of the American falls. One chunk attained a record height of over 100 feet. It's absolutely solid. Then, too, for the first time in well over 20 years, the entire lower rapids have been completely frozen.

Spring Shoe Styles

Two new heels are slated for a spring premiere in the shoe fashion world. Strictly speaking, one of these isn't new, but a return of the very tall venetian heel—taller than American women have worn for sixteen years. The other is hardly a heel at all. It's a cotillion slipper.

An Associated dispatch to the Boston Globe conveys the following interesting information:

A need for "thoroughly purging" the psalms of David "from Jewish taint" has been advanced in a new hymn book published by a leader of a new Germanic cult.

The book is by Wilhelm Teudt, a pioneer in the movement whose "guiding strength" is gained "from the religious inheritance of the German people," and consists of 75 revised psalms—in blank verse—instead of the original 150.

How Teudt has rewritten the poems and "Germanized" them is shown in this excerpt from his revision of the eighty-seventh psalm:

"The Lord loveth the height of Germany more than all the dwellings abroad.

"The Lord loveth the yew tree of the Odenwald and the oak of the Baltic.

"I will make mention of the vulger Euphrates and the Ganges, where our forefathers ruled.

"Behold the lands of the Goths, the Longobards and Andalusians; it shall be said our brethren were born and died there.

"But on Osning (part of the Teutoburger forest) the Lord shall count those sprung from blood of the son of—Mannus; Ingo-Isiu and Er-in." (Ancient Germanic guards.)

The original, as contained in the authorized or King James' version of the Bible, reads:

"His foundation is in the holy mountains.

"The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.

"Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God.

"I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon to them that know me: behold Philistia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia; this man was born there.

"And of Zion it shall be said, this and that man was born in her: and the Highest Himself shall establish her.

"The Lord shall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there.

"As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there: all my springs are in thee."

Teudt frankly revealed himself as an anti-fundamentalist.

In the foreword to his volume he claimed that Christ was of pure Aryan blood—"his whole spirituality being foreign to Jews."

While not entirely eliminating the Old Testament, Teudt said many features in it were obnoxious and should be pruned.

The so-called Psalms of Revenge he eliminated altogether. He said he stood for a new religion which "unites conceptions of God, nature, morality and heroism, which are the imperishable, God-given heritage of Germans."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Charlevoix County Farmers Sign Corn-Hog Contracts

Last week was sign-up week for those farmers interested in the corn-hog reduction program. Five different meetings were held during the week in charge of county agent Mellencamp, assisted by William Shepard of East Jordan, a member of the county association.

While it is too early yet to be accurate, over $4,000.00 will be received by corn and hog farmers for reducing their program. Every farmer has to give a very careful summary of his crop production for the two previous years, the number of pigs raised and the exact disposal of these pigs.

Apparently, farmers have already reduced their hog business considerably so in Charlevoix county there will be a decided reduction noted.

Next week, much more work will be done on this program in the county agent's office. The information on the preliminary work sheets has to be transferred to the regular contracts. Also, a county wide meeting has to be arranged for at which time a permanent committee will be selected and a budget approved for the county.

It has been very gratifying to see the way in which the farmers have cooperated with the government in these programs. Anyone not signed up yet should immediately contact the county agent at Boyne City or William Shepard at East Jordan. March 24th is absolutely the deadline for making out contracts.

Winter Injury and the Handling of Winter-Injured Trees

Evidence of injury from cold weather in February is accumulating, but anything like an accurate appraisal of its extent will be impossible for some time.

The peach crop, it is safe to say, will be the lightest in many years. Except in southern Berrien county Elberta fruit buds seem to have been killed entirely. The Rochester and South Haven buds are in somewhat better condition. Consequently, growers will do well to delay pruning these varieties until time for the fruit buds to open, and then to prune lightly.

After two weeks (not necessarily continuous) of temperature above freezing, wood discoloration will probably be fully developed where wood is injured. Where peach wood is seriously discolored excessively heavy pruning (the dehorning type) should be avoided. In cases where fruit buds are dead but wood not badly discolored, rather heavy pruning is probably safe. However, it should not extend below live leaf buds. If bark on the trunks has been loosened it should be left alone; if it has been torn loose it should be tied or tacked (preferably the former) back into place. In most cases where thus treated it will resume growth; if it does not, it can be removed later. Dead wood can be removed after buds start.

Some injury to pear fruit buds and wood has occurred. Where wood is seriously discolored pruning should be reduced to the minimum, for a year. Dead wood can be removed later. Wood rot is very likely to start in wounds made on off-color wood; if a new ring of sapwood can be formed this year, wounds made next year will heal more rapidly.

Damage to sweet cherry has been very variable, extending from almost nothing to considerable killing of wood. Here too it is well to delay pruning until the extent of the damage can be appraised, and, so far as possible, to confine cuts to sound wood. Trunk damage should be treated as with peach.

Sour cherry is also very variable. Trees defoliated last summer, are likely to show killing back this spring. Treatment should be as with the sweet cherry.

Conditions over much of the state were rather favorable for root-killing, but no prediction as to its extent can be made now. It may be extensive or very slight. Peaches are most likely to show it, and any trees in dry soil without mulch or snow. In the most aggravated cases trees will half unfold their leaves at the proper time and then die suddenly. In less aggravated cases yellowish foliage and scant growth will occur, followed by gradual recovery or gradual death. There is no remedy known that is practicable on any extensive scale.

FRUIT TREES FROZEN PEACHES HURT WORST

Pruning Should Be Delayed Until Injury Shows by Blackened Wood

Prospects for a peach crop in Michigan this year are very bad and the crop from other fruits will be more or less reduced according to investigations made by the department of horticulture at Michigan State college.

All fruit buds on Elberta peaches in this state appear to be killed except a few, perhaps, in Berrien county. South Havens and Rochesters are in a little better condition, and Gold Drops, New Prolific, and a few other varieties may produce a very light crop.

All pruning on the varieties which may have some live buds should be delayed until it can be determined what portions of the tree show any promise of fruit bearing. Two weeks of temperatures above the freezing point will give the discolorations caused by freezing time to appear in the woody portions of twigs and branches.

Trees showing serious discolorations should not be pruned heavily. If the fruit buds are dead but the wood is not badly discolored, heavier pruning is probably safe. The pruning should not extend below any live buds. Bark which has been torn loose from the tree should be tied or tacked. Later, if the bark does not resume growth, it can be removed.

MICHIGAN DEPT. OF STATE WEEKLY NEWS

The department of state will issue weight tax refund checks at the rate of 5,000 a day, if possible, Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald announced last week.

Refunds are to be made to both purchasers of 1934 license plates and to purchasers of the half-price windshield permits. In all about 250,000 motorists will be mailed refunds. These range, for the most part, from $5 to $8.

The speed of refunding is governed by the state's check-writing equipment. It was decided that the purchase of additional equipment would be a waste of money. For that reason, about ten weeks will be required to mail out all refund checks. The refunds will be sent from the main office in Lansing. Branch offices, which issued the plates, will not make refunds.

Motorists, under the extension of time allowed by Mr. Fitzgerald, may use 1933 license plates until March 25. After that date, motorists must have 1934 plates or windshield permits which allow the use of 1933 plates until August 1.

1934 chain store taxes, collected by the department of state under the 1933 law, are due April 1. While the act did not become effective until July 1933, the legislature provided that starting in 1934 the tax must be paid by April 1 each year.

On March 15, 1934, a total of 1,094 chain-store companies with 3,375 stores had paid $72,091. Soon after the law became effective 28 of the larger chain store corporations in the state started suit in Wayne county to test the validity of the law. The decision in that court was agaainst the companies and pending their appeal to the state supreme court, they have deposited $649,410 worth of bonds and securities with the court to insure payment of the 1933 tax in event of an adverse decision in the high court. These 28 companies have 2,933 stores in Michigan.

AT THE MOVIES

There is no more romantic place in the world than the Far East. Clash of two philosophies as far apart as the poles, that of the white race and the natives, has stirred the imagination of writers since time immemorial.

The most colorful spot in the Far East is Burma. The Burmese, a race apart from the Hindus with whom they are generally classed by the uninformed, are a proud, cultured, upright, intelligent people, far superior to the languid, procrastinating natives usually found in the tropics.

Burma supplies the colorful setting for "Mandalay," the First National production, featuring Kay Francis with Ricardo Cortez, Warner Oland and Lyle Talbot, which comes to the Palace theatre Saturday and Sunday.

Paul Hervey Fox, the author, knows the Far East as well as Kipling as evidenced by his many entrancing stories placed in that background.

In "Mandalay" he has written the story of Tanya, a Russian refugee, rescued from the Bolsheviks by an unscrupulous soldier of fortune, who sells her into virtual slavery to a resort keeper. Her flight and pursuit on a boat bound from Rangoon to Mandalay forms one of the most thrilling dramas screened.

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 95): "Lulled by stupefying illusions, the world is asleep in the cradle of infancy, dreaming away the hours. Material sense does not unfold the facts of existence; but spiritual sense lifts human consciousness into eternal Truth."

SMELT JAMBOREE AT EAST JORDAN DELAYED

Annual Event Postponed Until Saturday, March 24th

Continued cold weather, sufficiently cold to discourage any spawning action on the part of the East Jordan smelt, has caused postponement of the annual smelt jamboree at East Jordan for one week, from the night of Saturday, March 17, to Saturday, March 24.

This announcement was made by the committee in charge of the affair and in no way will change the original program except as to dates. East Jordan wants the crowd but not a crowd disappointed because of no smelt.

Sportsmen's park, comprising Manhattan, Long and Coney islands, the Rainbow creek trout rearing ponds and various channels of the Jordan, scene of previous runs, has undergone a thorough renovation and many improvements have been made by CWA work. A permanent board walk has been constructed the entire length of Manhattan, a log cabin with stone fireplace and chimney has been built at the south end of the island, trees have been planted and circular drives laid out. Six rustic bridges have been built, spanning the various channels and connecting the various mainlands.

The jamboree will start with the parade and coronation of the "smelt king" taking place at 4 p. m. This will be followed by the stag smelt banquet at 6:30.

The idea of crowning a king, which originated there last year, as a take-off on the "queen" epidemic of recent years, proved so popular with the visitors that it will be made an annual event from now on. Last year Al Warda of the "Cherryvale lodge," Boyne City, was crowned "king." This year an outsider will ascend to the throne.

General committee, Dr. Bernard J. Beuker, Joseph F. Bugai, Kit Carson, Clarence Bowman and John F. Kehny; parade, Clarence La Londe; banquet, Clarence Bowman; banquet tickets, Verne Whiteford, Ira D. Bartlett; reception, Barney Milstein; publicity, George Secord; street decoration, Kit Carson; program, Joseph Bugai.

MAY FISH IN INLAND LAKES AFTER APRIL 1

New 1933 Act Allows Taking of Several Fish Species

Under a legislative act of 1933 the month of April was opened to hook and line fishing on all inland lakes for the following species of fish:

Wall-eyed pike, great northern pike, yellow perch, rock, calico and strawberry bass, crappies, bluegills, sunfish, white bass, warmouth bass, muskellunge and non-game species.

It is also permissable to catch the above fish by hook and line in the non-trout streams through the month of April, according to the fish division, state department of conservation. On some of the species, including wall-eyed pike, great northern pike, yellow perch, rock, calico and strawberry bass, crappies, muskellunge and non-game species the season is open in non-trout streams and pike lakes the year around.

FEDERAL PLAN SAVES YOUTH AND FORESTS

Employment Youog Men on Timber Lands Popular Government Aid

Federal plans for the conservation of the nation's youth and of the natural will life resources by using young men for constructive work on timber and cutover lands is one of the most popular and successful of the methods of government aid, according to the forestry department at Michigan State college.

Rugged individualism which expresses itself in harvesting natural riches and leaving the site of the harvest in such a condition that those following are robbed of opportunities will no longer be tolerated. In some cases, huge dams have been erected to impound water, and the builders later learned that the reservoirs silted up to such an extent that the work was nearly useless.

This waste of money was caused by unthinking removal of forest growths, which permitted water to run off the land much more rapidly than would have been possible if the proper amount of vegetative growth had been left. Private interests now admit that timber should not be harvested in a wasteful manner, and the code adopted by lumbermen specifies that timber lands shall be left in a productive condition.

This awakening of public opinion arrived too late to give Michigan a continuing crop of pine, which could have been assured by proper cutting and by protecting the forests from fires. The C. C. C. camps in the state will help to reestablish tree growth and to prevent fire damage. Game cover, streams, and lakes all benefit by this work.

Michigan's resort industry can not ignore the help to the state's attractiveness. Money spent by tourists and resorters has helped carry Michigan through the past few years.

MICHIGAN FARMERS GET BACK LOST FARMS VALUED AT $40,000

Fourteen Michigan farms lost on foreclosure, but recovered by their former owners through commissioner's loans obtained through the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, embrace 1,317 acres and are valued at $39,971, according to tabulations made until 1938.

There have been 99 farms restored to their owners in this way in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota since the program got started last fall. The total value of them is over $458,000 and the area is more than 17,000 acres.

The March 1 figures represent practical doubling of the farms restored since January 1, when the total was 50.

SPECIAL SESSION BROUGHT TO CLOSE

of the legislature that laws be enacted which would have enabled the state to assist in the enforcement of NRA codes. This measure died in a senate committee without any effort to place it in motion.

Final hour of the session saw both houses engaged in fiery argument over the merits of legislation which would permit the issuance of self-liquidating bonds to finance the cost of projects intended to relieve unemployment. The legislature approved such projects except as they apply to municipal public utilities.

Another federal proposal seeking to give the department of labor and industry power to fix minimum wage rates for women and children was defeated in committee. The house sanctioned a continuation of the provisions of the mortgage and land contract moratorium act to March 1, 1935, and the senate belatedly approved such an extension.

The legislature approved a measure creating a special commission empowered to borrow $35,000,000 from the federal government to erect a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac.

PAY DAIRYMEN TO CUT PRODUCTION

NEW PLAN IS ANNOUNCED BY SECRETARY WALLACE

See Benefit to Michigan's 90,000 Dairy Cattle Owners in New Federal Deal

The plan now announced for the reduction of surplus stocks of dairy products by Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, means that 90,000 Michigan dairymen are offered federal benefit payments for adopting practices which will make their business more profitable.

Dairy products are the seventh basic crop for which a reduction plan has been initiated. Michigan has been concerned only with wheat and corn-hogs until Secretary Wallace's statement that the dairy plan is ready. The two other plans have been of minor interest in this state as compared with the one concerning dairying.

Michigan is a leader in the dairy business and always has been in the first rank in adopting any practice which was for the best interests of dairymen.

Michigan dairymen are offered benefit payments for reducing the amount of dairy products produced this year as compared with the amounts produced in the base period of 1932-33. The reduction asked for is from 10 to 20 per cent. The payment is approximately 40 cents per pound of butterfat on the number of pounds reduced below the base production.

Payments will be made from a fund created by a tax of one cent per pound of butterfat on dairy products. This tax can be increased by Secretary Wallace as the plans get under way. An equivalent tax is placed upon oleomargerine to compensate for the one on butterfat.

Any Michigan dairyman is eligible for a contract. The contract payments will be made in two installments, one when the contract is signed and the second six months later. Contracts are made for a period of one year.

The method of reducing the output from their dairies is left to the option of each farmer. He can cull out part of his cows, change his feeding methods, or use any other means which will be most financial benefit to himself.

Local men will be in charge of obtaining signatures on the contracts, and cooperation in the reduction plan is entirely voluntary. Local and county committees will be chosen as soon as the plan gets under way. This plan does not replace marketing agreements adopted under federal supervision for the selling of milk in cities. Such agreements operate independently from the contract agreements to reduce the total amounts of dairy products.

A fund has been created to finance the distribution of milk to underfed children in cities. Consumers interests will be protected against unwarranted changes in the prices of dairy goods.

There are now in the United States 26,000,000 cows, the greatest number ever present. Enough young stock is now owned so that this number is sure to increase unless some control mensures are adopted. The index price received by dairymen is now 69 as compared to 140 in 1928. The index price is computed by comparing the amount of basic commodities one pound of butterfat will buy now with the amount a pound of fat would buy in any selected year. The purchasing power of farm products in pre-war times is usually used in computing the index.

This outline of the dairy reduction plan is based upon the original announcement made by the secretary of agriculture. Changes in the regulations may be made before the contracts are ready for signature. Probably, several weeks will elapse before the contracts will be ready for distribution.

County agricultural agents will be kept informed of progress in the plans and announcements will be made through the newspapers.

CUT WEDNESDAY CITY MAIL DELIVERY DURING APRIL AND MAY

During the months of April and May there will be no city mail carrier service from the local postoffice, according to Postmaster Clarence B. Meggison.

The postal department as an economy measure has asked city clerks and carriers to take a four-day furlough without pay before July 1, 1934. Inasmuch as there is no allowance for substitute hire under this order, it is necessary to curtail city delivery.

In order to make the curtailment felt as little as possible, the local post office is spreading the cut over a period of two months. There will be no curtailment of service in the office.

DELINQUENTS BUYING NEW AUTO LICENSES

Branch Office Here Is a Busy Place This Week

Every day this week a line of tardy applicants for 1934 motor licenses has formed at the office of the secretary of state in the Chamber of Commerce.

Most of these applicants had a good excuse for not having their new plates as the office was unable to care for the last minute rush Saturday which, incidentally, was one of the biggest days the local office has ever experienced.

Law enforcement officers, in view of this rush, have been lenient on the old black and white plates.

ANNOUNCE GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE

CHURCHES OF COUNTY HOLDING UNION PROGRAM

Charlevoix Services Start at 1:15 o'Clock at the First Baptist Church

Simultaneous Good Friday services will be held in Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan on the afternoon of March 30.

For the past two years all the business places of the county, with the exception of gasoline stations, have been closed during the time of these services. It is requested that the same be done this year.

This year the theme of the addresses are based on remarks made by men who had some connection with the crucifixion. They are the words of Pilate; "I Find No Fault In Him;" the cry of the mob, "Crucify Him;" the words of one of the thieves, "Save Thyself and Us;" the words of the other thief, "Jesus Remember Me;" the words of the Centurion who was in charge of the crucifixion, "Truly This Was the Son of God."

Each speaker is to have fifteen minutes, which includes the intervening music. People are asked to attend the entire service, but anyone is welcome to enter or to leave during the music between the addresses.

The program for Charlevoix is as follows:

At Baptist church, Rev. W. H. Rauch, presiding.

1:15 - 1:25 — Devotional service led by Rev. W. H. Rauch.

1:25 - 1:40 — "I Find No Fault in Him," Rev. Peter Koopman, Reformed church, Atwood.

1:40 - 1:55 — "Crucify Him," Rev. G. R. Parker, Congregational church, Charlevoix.

1:55 - 2:10 — "Save Thyself and Us," Rev. W. H. Rauch, Baptist church, Charlevoix.

2:10 - 2:25 — "Truly This Was the son of God," Rev. C. W. Sidebotham, Presbyterinn church, East Jordnn.

2:25 - 2:40 — "Jesus Remember Me," Dr. Leon Tucker, California.

MEET TO DISCUSS PRODUCTION CREDIT LOANS

Tri-County Meeting Next Wednesday at Boyne City

(By B. C. Mellencamp.)

As a result of the interest in the Production Credit association of Gaylord, a series of meetings have been scheduled for northern Michigan in order to discuss these loans in detail to prospective borrowers.

The meeting for this district, which includes Emmet, Antrim and Charlevoix counties, will be held in the county agent's office, Boyne City, Wednesday afternoon, April 4, at 1:30 o'clock.

This organization is new and as a result there are many questions that have arisen in the minds of farmers as to how to proceed to make applications.

It is hoped that every farmer in the county who finds it necessary to apply for a loan will be present to fully understand this new program.

CWA ABANDONMENT SET FOR SATURDAY

DISMISSAL OF WORKERS IS ORDERED IN STATE

Federal Welfare Relief Commission Will Continue to Function on Curtailed Program

On Saturday, March 31st, the CWA will become a memory in Charlevoix county with the exception of the various monuments it leaves behind in the shape of completed projects. Instructions have been received that on that date the CWA will be abandoned and its work taken over by the work division of the Federal Emergency Relief commission.

Work on projects now under way will be discontinued and the jobs resubmitted under the new federal emergency relief set-up that will begin operating during the first of April. The dismissal order affects 390 men in Charlevoix county and 70,000 in the state. Of this number only those in dire need of financial assistance will be re-employed.

During the month of April $4,500,000 will be spent for federal emergency relief. Of this amount $3,500,000 will be in federal funds and $1,000,000 state money. It is estimated Charlevoix county's share will be between $8,000 and $9,000, the same amount allocated for welfare relief in the past.

With abandonment of the CWA, Charlevoix county has but three major projects uncompleted, it is understood. They are the Clinton street storm sewer in Charlevoix, the city hall at East Jordan, Division street and dock improvements at Boyne City. It is understood all school projects unfinished will be carried to completion.

It so happens that the County Emergency Welfare Relief commission, composed of J. M. Foster, Dr. Guy C. Conkle and Al Freiberg, is also the county CWA board, so they will continue in active charge of the projects. This commission will meet Friday night to outline the new program. Mr. Foster stated Tuesday that he believed work on projects would be at a standstill for at least a week while the new set-up is being completed. A new scale of wages must be adopted, but as yet no decision has been reached on this matter.

It is understood no more skilled labor will be employed by the commission for projects unless the municipalities are willing to provide for their pay. Municipalities will also be called upon to furnish materials for all uncompleted projects in cases where materials have not already been purchased. It is understood it will be impossible to start any new projects under the relief commission.

WOMEN'S FEDERATION MEETING APRIL 11-12

Northwestern District Gathering to Be Held at Evart

The 13th annual convention of the northwestern district of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in Evart on April 11th and 12th, with the Evart Woman's Club as hostess club.

The program this year is in charge of Mrs. Tom Stead, past president of the Muskegon Heights Woman's Club. They are bringing to the district a program filled with club ideas.

The ten junior clubs in the district will have entire charge of the first part of the opening program.

PASS BILL REGULATING TRAP NET

WILL LIMIT USE TO 80 FEET WATER AFTER AUG. 1

With Future of Whitefish Industry Facing Ruin, Fishermen Will Rejoice Over Protection

Probably the most important legislation enacted at the recent special session of the Michigan legislature insofar as its benefits directly affect the Northern Michigan region, was the so-called trap net bill which regulates the use of deep water trap nets.

Northern Michigan commercial fishermen can rejoice that the bill has finally been enacted into law after several years of effort. Up until the last special session endeavors to pass the trap net bill were frustrated by down-state interests of the Saginaw Bay and Thumb districts, represented by William J. Lambert, commercial fish lobbyist. At the regular session in 1933 the bill passed the house, but Lambert "tucked it away" in the senate, which usually had proven a stumbling block.

Northern Michigan legislators spared no effort in providing this needed legislation. It will be remembered that Congressman Prentiss M. Brown offered his assistance to commercial fishermen at a meeting here in the fall of 1932. He was instrumental in persuading Governor Comstock to include the legislation in the last session. Introducing the bill and active in securing its adoption was Rep. Ned Fenlon of St. Ignace. Rep. D. D. Tibbitts of this district also worked for its passage.

The Michigan conservation department, backed by a very exhaustive study made by the federal bureau of fisheries, claimed the unrestricted use of the deep trap net would have meant an end of the whitefish industry in the great lakes. In the last report of the fish division, statistics revealed a drop of 4,000,000 pounds in the production of Michigan's fisheries from 1932, half of which was represented by a decrease in the catch of whitefish. There was also an appreciable decrease in 1932. The drop, following peak catches for previous years starting in 1929, indicated the saturation of the whitefish supply had been reached through the very thorough manner in which the trap net operated.

When the trap net bill is signed by Governor Comstock, this class of gear after August 1 will be limited to 80 feet of water.

LOCAL CHURCHES OBSERVE PALM SUNDAY

Appropriate Services Ushered In Holy Week Observances

Palm Sunday, ushering in the host of religious ceremonies which will mark Holy Week, was observed in most local churches in some form or other Sunday. Particular stress was placed on the day in the Roman Catholic churches where the usual impressive Palm Sunday services were carried out.

Throughout the week various church activities will take place including a county-wide observance of Good Friday. From noon until three o'clock union religious services will be held in the city and all businesses will be closed during these hours that the entire community may participate in the observance.

The Easter Bonnet

WILL CONTINUE WELFARE HOSPITALIZATION

County Appropriation Exhausted But Curtailed Program Recommended

Although money allotted by the board of supervisors to the county poor commission for hospitalization of Charlevoix county welfare dependents has been exhausted, this work will be carried on to the extent of the county's ability to meet the expense.

This decision was reached Monday afternoon at a meeting of the finance committee of the board of supervisors, which was called into session to consider means for continuance of this welfare requirement. While the finance committee has no authority to make an appropriation, its recommendation was that the expense, up to $500 per month, be met until the board meets in June, providing county funds are available.

Under the present welfare set-up, the county poor commission handled the hospitalization of welfare cases. The board of supervisors last October appropriated $7,000 for this purpose. This amount has been exhausted.

WARD BENNETT IS NEW COMMANDER

PROMOTED HEAD OF COAST GUARD DISTRICT

Has Received Rapid Advancement Since a Member of Local Station Back in 1904

Ward W. Bennett, born at Glen Lake, former personnel officer of the tenth district of the U. S. Coast Guard, is the new commander of the district, having been appointed to succeed the late Commander John Kelley. Announcement of the appointment was made by Acting Commander Abram Wessell of Grand Haven. Mr. Bennett will take command of the district on May 1st.

The new commander was born June 21, 1879, at Glen Lake, Mich., and entered the coast guard service in 1904 at Charlevoix. While here he received a citation for bravery and was given a Carnegie medal and $1,000 for saving a young man from death in Glen lake in the winter.

Dove Under Ice

He dove into the icy water and under the ice, bringing up the young man after a desperate struggle to regain open water.

He was transferred to Beaver Island from Charlevoix, and was promoted to No. 1 surfman in 1915 and keeper in 1919. In 1923 he was transferred to South Haven, where he was officer in charge. In 1928 Lieut. Bennett was appointed personnel officer in the tenth district and assigned to the Grand Haven office, and in 1929 received his commission as chief boatswain. He was assigned to duty as an inspector in the district.

To North Carolina

He received the appointment of district commander on September 1, 1930, with the rank of lieutenant and was assigned shortly after to the seventh district, with headquarters in Elizabeth City, N. C., where he has remained up to the present.

The new commander will have an enlarged district under his command, eight new stations having been added some time ago, making a total of 24 stations from Louisville, Ky., to Mackinaw, and as far as Port Huron on that side of Michigan.

MARCH COURT TERM ADJOURN SATURDAY

No Cause for Action Jury Answer In Two Tresnass Cases

The March term of circuit court was adjourned until some time in April late Saturday afternoon after a week's session.

Verdicts of no cause for action were returned by the jury in two trespass cases, viz: Mary Talhoy vs. Carl Ecker and Henry Steimel, and Ann Brady vs. A. T. Jeffery and others. The latter case was a suit for damages resulting from an automobile accident.

The two actions occupied the court from Tuesday morning until adjournment. Other cases on the docket were continued to the next special or regular court term.

SPRING ELECTION MONDAY, APRIL 2

TWO BALLOTS WILL CONFRONT CITY'S VOTERS

Democratic and Republican Candidates Seek Election—Charter Amendment Proposed

Next Monday, April 2nd, is the annual general spring election when Charlevoix voters will go to the polls to choose various city and ward officers.

This year two tickets are in the field, and it may be said for the first time in many years such a statement has some significance. In the past it has been more or less a formality to place in office a straight Republican slate of candidates, but if comment one hears daily on the streets is any criterion, Monday's election will prove that the Democratic ticket is something more than a mere name. The results will tell the story.

Contests In Wards

All of the city's three wards have contests. In the first precinct, Harry A. Craig, veteran supervisor, is opposed by E. E. Cross, democrat. In the second, Frank Partridge, republican nominee for supervisor, is opposed by Benjamin Yettaw, and Floyd J. Fessenden, seeking re-election as alderman, has William F. Myers for his opponent. The race for supervisor in the third precinct is between David J. Eckinger, republican, and O. A. Solomon. For alderman, Joseph J. Hallett is opposed by Harry Gebeau, democratic nominee.

Following is the complete line-up:

City Ticket

For Mayor—R. F. Sloan, D; L. S. See, R.

Clerk—Harry Glossenger, D; Ray S. Hamilton, R.

Treasurer—Robert E. Rife, R.

Justice—Robert Withers, R.

Park Commissioner—William H. Wallace, R.

Park Commissioner—Fred E. Cartier, R.

First Ward

Supervisor—E. E. Cross, D; Harry A. Craig, R.

Alderman—Arthur Ranger, R.

Constable—Joseph Howard, R.

Second Ward

Supervisor—Benjamin Yettaw, D; Frank Partridge, R.

Alderman—William F. Myers, D; Floyd J. Fessenden, R.

Third Ward

Charter Amendment Sought

In addition to the slate of candidates for office, a special ballot provides for vote on a proposed charter amendment which would abolish the board of park commissioners.

Much interest is evidenced in the township elections to be held in this county next week, as there are two tickets in most of the townships, many democratic. It is expected the vote will show about what the Democrats will do here next fall.

Many are sad this week on account of the passing at the Charlevoix hospital last week, of John Brock, a young married man. He leaves a wife and daughter, about 12 years of age. He died Friday and funeral services were held from the Henry VanderArk home, where the body had been taken Tuesday afternoon.

Those who were absent from church last Sunday certainly missed hearing a fine sermon by Rev. Mumby. He took Misses Bertha Pierce and Margie and Catherine Richardson along to Barnard where they gave some fine orchestra selections. They missed Mr. Block, the leader. It is planned to give some selections at Norwood at 11 o'clock next Sunday and it is hoped Mr. Block can be present also. What keeps the young people interested is to have a part in the church exercises themselves.

Any who are interested in uniting with the church by confession of faith or by letter are very cordially invited to appear before this body to make it known.

Mr. and Mrs. John Potter will be host and hostess to the class in Christian Doctrine. "Is There a Hell?" is the topic for discussion at this meeting on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. All who are interested are cordially invited to attend.

Communion will be observed in the Reformed church at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Good Thursday. At this service the pastor will give an appropriate message for the occasion. It is hoped that both the old and young people will be present at this service to give thought to why Christ instituted the Holy Supper on the evening preceding His crucifixion.

Desiring to cooperate with the churches of the county in a union Good Friday service, which is being held in the Baptist church of Charlevoix this year, the Reformed church will hold no special service on that day in its own church.

At the Easter service Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, the young people and children will sing special music. The pastor hopes to preach a sermon based on the Resurrection narrative.

The shingle mill of Charles Warner is going full blast these days, for many thousands of shingles are turned out daily. The friendly Mr. Warner is very glad to have visitors observe the interesting process of making shingles. He is blessed with a large number of sons to help him in making this venture a success. Among the visitors at the mill this winter even several young ladies were included.

William Boss and Dickson Warner expect to call on some Scotch friends in Ellsworth and Atwood, respectively, Sunday evening. These gentlemen report that life without such close friends is sadly deficient.

Miss Esther Klooster plans on being a week end visitor of Miss Margaret Boss.

CLARION

Miss Geneva Geyer, who has been ill, is somewhat better.

Are YOU as expert as SHE?

THINK for a minute — what if you had the house to run, meals to plan and children to care for? Do you think you could do the job as well as your wife does? On the same amount of money? Be honest.

The housewives of the nation study and know their jobs. They read the advertisements regularly. They keep themselves informed of the best offerings of the stores. They are expert purchasing agents.

These purchasing agents, from necessity or individual desire, aim to make every dollar spent return a full one hundred cents' worth in value. They know their needs. They know through the advertisements just where these needs can be best supplied at the least cost. Such intelligent buying saves time and effort and money. It results in a management of the home that is truly efficient.

Here's some good advice for all of us. Read the advertisements. Read them every day. Through them we can know exactly what we want before we go to buy. This is the surest way of securing full value for every dollar you spend.

THEY'RE BARRED

Three Javanese fruit bats, known as "flying foxes," came to California by steamer recently, consigned to the Catalina Islands aviaries. Effort was made to have the strange creatures admitted alive, promise being made that they would be closely confined, but the quarantine service at San Pedro would not pass them, as they constitute a major fruit pest in their native land. The bats were then killed and turned over to the Los Angeles museum for stuffing and preservation. The fruit-bat is common in the Philippines and the Far East and is said to be a voracious consumer of fruit and fruit blossoms. —Los Angeles Times.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Founder of Nashville

"EACH one should do what seems to him his duty. As for myself, my station is here, and here I shall stay if every man of you deserts me." So spoke James Robertson, leader of the pioneer colony that had settled on the Cumberland river in Tennessee on Christmas day, 1779. There had been 256 men in the colony at first, but within 60 days 39 had fallen under the tomahawks of the Cherokees. Within a few more months 67 others had perished. Crops had failed and starvation loomed. Some of the settlers began to leave, and finally only 134 of the 256 were left. They tried to get Robertson to abandon his post, and the above was his answer.

It was characteristic of this Scotch-Irishman from Virginia who had settled in North Carolina in 1750. That spirit had carried him across the mountains with Daniel Boone in 1759 and had brought him back, after terrible hardships, to North Carolina to lead a party of settlers into the rich Watauga region and later still farther west.

The emigration of Robertson's settlers from the Watauga to the banks of the Cumberland in central Tennessee is one of the epics of the frontier. After all he had endured to plant that settlement there, he was not going to give up so easily. So, with his eldest son and two other companions, Robertson made his way to Boonesborough where Daniel Boone lent him powder and lead. He soon had need for it, for 1,000 hostile Cherokees swept down upon the fort at Nashville.

Then it was that Charlotte Reeves Robertson proved herself a worthy mate of the stout-hearted pioneer. In their attempt to capture the horses of the whites, the Cherokees left a gap in their ranks. Mrs. Robertson, rifle in hand and crouched in a look-out tower of the fort, seeing the stampede of the horses and the break in the Indian line shouted to the sentry: "Open the gates and set the dogs on 'em!" As the savages drew their tomahawks to fight off the dogs, the settlers fled to safety, whereupon Charlotte Reeves Robertson uttered her "thanks to God who gave to the Indians a dread of dogs and a love of horses."

There were a few more years of Indian fighting and then peace came to Tennessee. With it came honors to James Robertson—Washington made him brigadier general and he was Indian commissioner until his death. He died in 1814 but he had lived to see the colony which he had founded grow into a great commonwealth and enter the sisterhood of states.

"The Emperor of the West"

TO THE Indians he was "White Eagle"—six feet, two inches tall, with a constitution of iron and hair of pure white, a man of inflexible courage and unfailing honesty. To the white men of his time he was the "Emperor of the West," a wilderness king who ruled over 400,000 square miles, an empire which extended from California to Alaska and from the Great Salt Lake to British Columbia. To history he is the "Father of Oregon," more truly than is any other man who may be given that title. To the shame of two nations who owed him much he became in his declining years a "Man Without a Country."

All these was Dr. John McLoughlin. Like that other monarch of the empire of fur, Kenneth Mackenzie, who ruled at Fort Union in Montana, McLoughlin was a Scotchman who first served the Hudson's Bay company. In 1824 he was appointed chief factor for the H. B. C. in the Columbia river district of the Pacific Northwest. Abandoning Astoria, which had come into possession of the H. B. C. via the Northwest company, McLoughlin built Fort Vancouver farther up the river.

Here began his rule over his vast empire. He not only developed the fur trade, but he also encouraged the agricultural development of the Pacific Northwest. He ruled his subjects, both white and red, with firmness and justice and they in turn loved and respected "Emperor John" or "White Eagle."

Then American settlers began to drift into the Oregon country. More than one forlorn American fur trader and more than one hollow-eyed settler, gaunt from privation, found a generous host in the Scotch doctor and a reliable source of supply while they were carving a home from the wilderness. As an employee of the H. B. C. he should, of course, have expelled from the country this advance guard of American settlement. But he didn't.

So when the Hudson's Bay company learned what he was doing, the "Emperor of the West" was quickly dethroned. He was not even recognized as a British subject by the majority of his fellow-countrymen. More than that he was impoverished by his loans to the settlers who failed to repay him. In 1849 he tried to become an American citizen. But petty souls who could not forget that he had once ruled this country for a British company blocked him. Congress failed to confirm his title to his lands near Oregon City, Ore., where he wished to retire in his old age and claim jumpers took them away from him. Five years after his death in 1857, the legislature restored those lands to his heirs. But it was too late to save the beloved Scotch doctor from dying, a broken-hearted old man, a man without a country.

LAST SILK DRESS OF CONFEDERACY MADE WAR PRIZE

A recent acquisition of the Army Aeronautical museum at Wright field is a small portion of the gas bag of a balloon used by the Confederate army for observation purposes. This is a portion of a larger piece presented to the National museum in Washington by the son of Prof. Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, the latter having figured very prominently in the aerial activities of the Union army.

This piece of cloth is valuable not only as a reminder of the use of aircraft in the Civil war, but of the ingenuity displayed by a poverty-stricken army in providing equipment. General Longstreet, in "Our March Against Pope," relates an interesting bit of history in this connection as experienced by the opposing forces.

"It may be of interest," he wrote, "to relate an incident which illustrates the pinched condition of the Confederacy, even as early as 1862. The Federals had been using balloons to examine our positions, and we watched with envious eyes their beautiful observations as they floated high in the air well out of the range of our guns. While we were longing for the balloons our poverty denied us, a genius suggested that we gather together all the silk dresses in the Confederacy and make a balloon. It was done, and soon we had a grotesquely patterned ship of many and varied hues which was ready for use in the seven days' campaign. We had no gas except at Richmond, and it was the custom to inflate the balloon there, tie it securely to an engine and run it down the York River railroad to any point at which we desired to set it up.

"One day it was on a steamer down the James river when the tide went out and left the vessel and balloon high and dry on a bar. The Federals gathered it in and with it the last silk dress in the Confederacy. This capture was the meanest trick of the war and one which I have never forgiven."

Patriotism, sacrifice, ardor and romance, quite aside from its aerial activities, hang about tint, varnished and faded silk.—Washington Post.

Dead Volcanoes in Lake Near Superior's Surface

Volcanoes, both active and defunct, are widespread throughout the world, but the last place we would have thought them to be probably would have been under the waters of Lake Superior, observes a writer in the New Orleans Times-Picayune. And yet a couple of such—the dead variety, thank heaven—have been discovered in the bed of the world's largest fresh water body. At a point midway between Thunder bay and Michipicoten island, in Canadian waters, a shoal has been found, 30 miles from any shelter. There has been discovered a peak 100 feet in diameter covered by only three and a half fathoms of water. A second nearby is smaller and deeper, but both, now to be marked by the Canadian department of marine, are asserted to be the cones of extinct fire mountains.

The question is, shall the peaks be cut down to a safe depth, or shall they be permanently marked and lighted? The first alternative is more costly, but the permanent upkeep of the second is most forbidding. Decision remains to be made.

BULLET-PROOF STEEL

A nickel-chromium-molybdenum steel suitable for bullet-proof vests, has been developed in Japan, according to the Literary Digest. Treated to give a tensile strength of 180,000 pounds or more per square inch, this material in sheet form five-thousandths of an inch thick will flatten a bullet at average velocities on impact, and sheets as thin as thirty-five ten-thousandths of an inch will stop penetration sufficiently to protect human life.

DANGER—DRIVE SLOW!

Within ten days following his acceptance of the newspaper codes we find President Roosevelt submitting to Congress a request for a federal communication commission to take authority over wires, cable and radio. Every American citizen is entitled to know what prompted that request. What have these communications done to warrant government control? Is there to be no end to the further extension of government in business? Already there is federal control of power and transportation, and now it is proposed to put the last remaining lines of communication into the hands of bureaucracy. It is not that we question the good intentions of the president, but because we are looking into the future that impells the inquiry. We are fearful against that day when he might be succeeded in office by someone longing for greater dictatorial power. We realize that protest will be useless. Congress has already abdicated its constitutional rights and will do as it is told. We can only hope that it will be for the best.

POLITICAL JUDGES

Out here where there isn't the remotest connection between politics and the office of circuit judge, it is shocking to read the testimony of E. D. Stair of Detroit who told Special Prosecutor Pecora that Detroit judges "have to be" politicians in order to be elected. To the everlasting credit of Detroit and its judicial politics, let it be said that generally speaking Detroit has an unusually fine type of jurists at this time. But Mr. Stair's testimony points out an inherent weakness in our form of government. The judiciary belongs entirely outside the realms of politics.

PRICE CORRECTION NEEDED

The spread between farm prices and retail prices has grown to intolerable proportions in recent years. It is one of the greatest obstacles to national recovery. It strikes at the welfare of both producers and consumers. Equality for agriculture cannot be obtained until the unequal share of the consumer's dollar now exacted by middlemen is corrected. —The Bureau Farmer.

POLAR BEARS BEATEN IN BOYNE CAGE MEET

Defeated 19 to 16 by Grayling Lumber Jacks Thursday

The Charlevoix Polar Bears were eliminated in the first round of the Boyne City amateur basketball tournament Thursday evening, losing 19 to 16 to the Grayling Lumberjacks in a close contest.

Leading by an 8 to 4 margin at the half, the Polar Bears were unable to stem a Grayling rally in the final periods.

Playing in the Charlevoix line-up were Lyle Ance and "Bud" Potter, the former center and the latter a forward of the 1933-34 Charlevoix high school team. A large number of local fans followed the team to Boyne.

CHARLEVOIX-DETROIT CLUB HAS BIG PARTY

Annual Get-to-Gether An Event of March 10th—Elected Officers

For the following account of the annual party of the Charlevoix-Detroit club, we are indebted to Grace M. Papineau, club secretary:

"The Charlevoix-Detroit club held its annual party March 10th. About 125 were present at the dinner and some coming afterwards made the attendance about 200.

"The usual fun and hilarity which prevails when friends meet only once a year was quite evident. Dr. Thad Smith was very proficient as a waiter, while some excelled as dish washers.

"This is the first time the Club has tried a pot-luck dinner and it went over big. Some wish it could be done once a month. Everyone was loath to leave the dining room for the parlor for a short business session after which they adjourned to the gymnasium, where Mr. Jessup entertained with his magic and visiting and dancing was enjoyed.

"We are very glad to have Capt. and Mrs. Weaver, Mrs. George Finucan and Mrs. Harold Bedford from Grand Rapids, Mrs. Harsha, Mrs. Arnold and Miss Anna Metcalf from the "Old Home Town." We wish more people would plan to be in Detroit when this event takes place so that they might join us.

"The officers for 1933-34 are as follows: president, Dr. Franklin Weaver; vice-president, Robt. Burns; secretary-treasurer, John Harsha; directors, Mrs. Wicks, Mrs. Edna Ward Beattie and Myer Cohen."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday evening each month at 7:45.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Reality" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, April 1.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Isaiah 64:4): "For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p.275): "To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is. All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God."

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Friday, April 6th, is the date of another Legion keno party at the Legion home. This party will be open to adults only and the prizes will be merchandise orders on the local merchants, which will be redeemed by the Legion.

The local post now has 88 members and has its eyes set on a three-figure quota. An intensive drive for more members starts this week.

Legion poppy day is rapidly approaching. The Legion Auxiliary will have charge of sales this year, as they did last year, but will be given a full week to get rid of their poppies. These poppies, as everyone knows, are made by disabled veterans who are inmates of the various government hospitals and who receive the proceeds from their sale.

MAPLE SYRUP HARVEST IS LATE THIS SEASON

Unusually Cold Weather Expected to Shorten Run Considerably

Owners of maple sugar bushes in the region are quite concerned over the probable shortness of the sap season which started two or three days ago.

The season this year is at least three weeks late in starting due to the unusually cold weather of February and early March. Last year the sap started running late in February and the sugar bush owners had nearly all tapped their trees by March first. This year the sap did not show up until three days ago and is starting slowly.

Ordinarily the sap run lasts for three weeks but those who are making syrup are fearful that warm weather will come soon and stop the flow, thus shortening the season.

As the second growth sugar bushes develop the maple syrup industry becomes more and more important to the region. Each year thousands of gallons are manufactured, and sold but this year promises a short production, if the fears of the syrup makers are realized. In event the sap run is shortened by the weather the price will automatically increase.

STATE FARMERS WILL RAISE MORE POTATOES

Report Also Indicates Increased Acreage of Beans This Year

A 20 per cent increase in Michigan's bean acreage for 1934 is forecast by the state crop reporting service. Officials pointed out, however, that the contemplated boost is not against the national program for crop reduction inasmuch as beans have not been declared a "basic commodity."

"Planting intentions of Michigan bean growers," the report said, "point to an increase of 20 per cent in the acreage in 1934. This is equivalent to 612,000 acres as against 510,000 acres harvested in 1932.

"An increase of five per cent in the Michigan potato acreage for 1934 is indicated if present plans of growers materialize. The reported 278,000 acres compares with 265,000 acres in 1933."

The proposed acreage increases, the service said, is due to higher prices received in 1933.

The newest sensational picture of actual happenings to follow "I am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang" out of the First National Studio is "Wild Boys of the Road," which comes to the Palace theatre on Saturday and Sunday.

It was feared when "Fugitive" was made that people would not believe that such conditions existed. The same fear governed the production of "Wild Boys." Yet the facts are true and unvarnished—although unknown to perhaps ninety per cent of the population of the country.

In the cast, besides 250 wild boys, are Frankie Darro, Dorothy Coonan, Rochelle Hudson, Edwin Philips, Ann Havey and others. It was directed by William A. Wellman.

ELECTION MAY 1ST ON BUILDING BONDS

Preparation of Referendum Will Be Completed by That Time

Governor Comstock has set May 1 as the probable date Michigan voters will be asked to cast their ballots in a special election on the proposition of bonding the state to the extent of $30,000,000 for public works construction.

The date was selected by the governor after a conference with an executive committee which will aid him in outlinging the project to the people between now and the time they go to the polls.

"It appears that the public works bonding project cannot be submitted to the people before May 1," the governor said, "because of the preliminary work that will be necessary to place the proposition on the ballot."

Of the $37,000,000 about $7,000,000 would be given the state as an outright grant by the federal government.

Grow More and Bigger and Better Chicks

Allen G. Cummins of Calhoun county has his own figures to prove Mermash is the No. 1 starting and growing mash for him. Couple of season ago he tested by feeding one batch of chicks Mermash and at the same time another batch a nationally advertised starter, usually selling for more money. Here's what happened:

Age Chicks in Weeks	Mermash 16% Chicks	Other Ration Chicks
2	3.40 oz.	3.12 oz.
3	6.05 oz.	5.17 oz.
4	10.15 oz.	7.02 oz.

Only Mermash contains Pacific ocean kelp (a plant) and ocean fish meal, both rich in digestible iodine and other minerals essential for health and growth. Michigan crops and soils lack these elements.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

SMALL HOME NOW ADVOCATED TO END DEPRESSION

The very best thing to complete the rout of the depression would be a nationwide building program, adding 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 rooms to American homes by use of private capital. So said President Henry I. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Buffalo a few days ago. Such a program, he insisted, would do for business what the automobile did a few years ago. And this would be no sudden spurt, for, in Mr. Harriman's opinion, it would take ten years to build merely the houses necessary for a minimum standard of decency and comfort. He estimates the total cost of construction alone at close to $40,000,000,000. And to that may be added more billions for furnishings.

A survey conducted by the National Association of Real Estate Boards in 273 cities reveals a shortage of single family houses in 27 per cent of the cities, and a shortage of apartment space in the smaller cities. The home shortage is more pronounced in the smaller cities and is especially noticeable in New England, the Pacific coast, and the West South Central section.

"What this country needs, declared the Southern Lumberman, is not model apartments but small individual homes. And by small homes it does not mean houses costing around $9,000—for which there is, indeed, a market—but houses costing in the neighborhood of $3,000 or $4,000. For these there is a much greater demand, and "the architects and builders and promoters seem to have forgotten that there ever was that kind of a house."

The Southern Lumberman thinks that if means could be found to finance such building it would open a very large untapped field of activity.—Literary Digest.

Whose Fault?

If a Child Won't Play with Others?

Parents who understand children know where to place the blame when a youngster mopes, keeps to himself, or is "ugly" toward others. Sluggishness ruins any disposition, and that's what is usually wrong. But it's just as wrong to dose that child with sickening cathartics. Until 15—or older—a child's bowels need but little aid—a very mild form of help. Stronger things often upset the stomach or weaken the bowel muscles. For the happy solution of this problem see what to do, in the next column:

There are happy, healthy boys and girls who have never known the bitter taste and violent action of castor oil—or similar cathartics. The only "medicine" they ever get—or ever need—to help the bowels is plain California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fruity syrup has the natural laxative action that assists Nature as it should. Next day, the child feels and acts himself, and has a normal appetite. But use the real California Syrup of Figs, with the word "California" on the label and on the bottle.

One Disadvantage

"Your uncle is very ill—you must be prepared for everything."

"Not everything, doctor, there are other heirs."

Can't Stand It

"Jackie, this is terrible. I have to scold you all day long."

"Don't worry, mummy, I am not a bit sensitive."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

More Farmers Sign Corn-Hog Reduction Contracts

The sign-up campaign for the corn-hog program has been continued during the last week. Every day inquiries come to our office regarding this program. Before it is completed, undoubtedly, there will be around 75 who will be cooperating with President Roosevelt in reducing the surplus of pork and pork products. The first 21 contracts that were sent to the State college for their approval average more than $100 per contract, which means that a considerable amount of money will be alloted to farmers who are cooperating with the government.

This week, a representative from the college will be in the county to make definite plans for the remainder of the campaign. Watch the papers for further announcements.

1933 Farm Account Books Have Been Completed

During the last two weeks, the farmers in this county who have been keeping farm account records have had their books checked by H. A. Berg, I. E. Aylesworth and county agent, Mellencamp. Thirty-one completed books have been sent in for summary. In addition there will be six or seven new account books started for 1934.

4-H Club Leaders Hold Important Conference

A very enthusiastic group of club leaders representing the entire county met in the county agent's office, Boyne City, last Tuesday. A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, led the discussion and out of this meeting came plans for developing a new organization.

A county-wide council was selected to help in organizing community clubs throughout the county. The following seven club friends were elected to this committee: George Block, Charlevoix; John Vester, Clarion; Mrs. Rubye Stueck, East Jordan; Mrs. Marie Hilton, Charlevoix; Miss Sidney Lumley, Boyne City; Elgie Dow, Bay Shore, and Mrs. Fred Simpson, Boyne Falls.

This committee will meet very soon and develop final plans for the county Achievement day to be held in Boyne City on April 27th.

The 4-H club program will be carried on this year through the various committees in the county. Inasmuch as the county agent's time is now almost entirely occupied with the government's new agricultural policies, it is just impossible to devote the same amount of time on the organization of the club program as has been the case in the past. This means that each community will have a community club rather than having several small clubs.

Murdered the School Teacher in Front of Her Class

An article in next Suaday's Detroit Times describes how a crazy suitor marched into a school room with his finger on the trigger of a shotgun aimed at a young teacher who, to protect the children of her cluss, waited calmly to save her pupils until it was too late for her to escape death.

BEAUTIFUL PICTURE SERVICE ON FRIDAY

Original Oberammergau Passion Play Reproduced Here

Through the loan of a friend who traveled in Europe a few years ago, a complete set of the illuminated, original photographs of the entire Passion play as given each ten years at Oberammergau, has been secured for presentation in Charlevoix.

These are the original and only pictures ever allowed to be taken by the authorities of this little Bavarian village. Numerous fakes have been palmed off on the public in this country in the form of movies, companies of cheap actors, etc. The movies were taken over the line in France and the cheap, untrained actors tried to copy the great work at Oberammergau, all for commercial profit from the movies of the same. No moving picture has ever been tolerated at Oberammergau. Nearly sixty regular photographs were taken in 1910, when Anton Lang, the most famous "Christus," played that part. The March number of the Christian Herald has a fine write-up of this celebrated character. These photographs, now beautifully illuminated slides, are very expensive, especially the last one, "The Ascension," when Lang is seen in an actual ascension in a blaze of golden glory.

The pictures will be shown at the Charlevoix Methodist church at the Good Friday service for which the church will be darkened during another "absolute silence" service beginning very promptly at 1:30 and closing at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Maude Cummings Mans, one of the leading sopranos of Traverse City, will give two numbers; also a duet with Mrs. J. H. Downer, contralto, also of Traverse City. The violin of Mrs. J. H. Poquette will be a fine feature and also the illuminated stage setting and tableaux, "Mount Calvary."

Everyone will come at once and leave at the same time, with no disturbance or distraction. There will not be much preaching or speaking, the time being devoted to worship. The service is open to anyone who wishes to attend and who is willing to observe the regulations—no conversation, no leaving, no distraction.

Legion keno party, Friday, April 6th, at Legion home. Adults only. Prizes will be merchandise orders on local firms. Five cents a card. —Adv. 13t1.

TUBERCULIN TESTING IS MADE AVAILABLE

TB Association and Children's Fund Make Clinic Possible

With the cooperation of the Michigan Tuberculosis association and the Children's Fund unit, opportunity is being given to children at the Hoppyard, Burgess, Murray, Bay Shore, Horton's Bay, Curfew, Clarion, Walloon Lake, Tainter and Wildwood schools to be tuberculin tested. This test, which is harmless, will be conducted on April 3rd.

It is possible to tell by the appearance of the skin three to five days after the test whether or not the child has at some time been infected with the germs of tuberculosis. Infection means that at some time or other the child came in contact with someone who had tuberculosis. This infection is common in children and if not excessive is of no consequence.

We use the tuberculin test to find the infected children. We then X-ray the lungs of all the infected children to find the occasional one that has tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis as it first affects children is usually a milder form of the disease than that found in adults. It is, however, very important that such cases be discovered when the disease is in an early, curable stage so that they may be protected by careful supervision during the years that it takes them to get adjusted to their infection.

The schedule of times for the tuberculin testing of children at other schools will be announced later.

The costs of this health project are financed by the District Health Department and by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association through its sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals.

PAY FUTURE FEDERAL FARM LOAN IN BONDS

Wm. F. Johnson, Sec.-Treas., Announces New Land Bank Plan

William F. Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the Charlevoix County National Farm Loan association, has received word that Federal land bank loans and land bank commissioner's loans will be made in the future through the Federal land bank in bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation, which bonds are guaranteed by the United States government both as to principal and interest.

These bonds will take the place of the cash distribution in the disbursement of the unclosed loans previously approved by the Federal land banks. The bonds will have behind them not only the unconditional guarantee of the Federal government as to both principal and interest, and the capital of the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation amounting to about $200,000,000, but also the consolidated bonds of the Federal land banks issued in exchange for the bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation and the mortgages accepted by the land bank commissioner as security for loans.

It is particularly stressed that country bankers probably will be large investors in these securities since the creditors of farmers who are being refinanced may not all be in the position where they can hold the bonds so acquired and will find it necessary to sell them.

POWELL IN FIELD FOR WOOL GROWERS

Michigan Wool Marketing Association Says Market Much Improved

Stanley M. Powell of Ionia, prominent sheep breeder, Grange and Farm Bureau official, and former state representative, has taken charge of the field work of the 16th annual wool pool of the Michigan Co-operative Wool Marketing association, according to an announcement made by the association March 19th.

The Wool Marketing association annually handles several hundred thousand pounds of wool for Michigan farmers, Michigan, with 26 other state wool pools, assembles and grades wool for sale through its national cooperative sales ageney, the National Wool Marketing Corporation of Boston.

The market for Michigan wool shows a tremendous improvement over a year ago this date. At that time many farmers were selling their clips at 10 cents per pound. The pool was advancing 8c as representing about 75% of the market value. Today good fleeces bring about 33c per pound and the pool is advancing 25c per pound on medium grade wool and 19c on fine wools on which the shrink is greater.

In 1933 the Michigan wool pool increased all early advances to 18c a pound by further advances during the summer. In January, 1934, a final settlement of 4 to 9c per pound was paid, according to grade, the association said.

The Michigan Wool Marketing association has received considerable 1934 wool at its Lansing warehouse. Soon the pool's local representatives will be assembling wool in all sheep growing sections, according to Mr. Powell.

WARN AGAINST "GYP" MAPLE SYRUP PEDDLER

Imitation Product Being Sold for Real Stuff in Michigan

The season is at hand when the "gyp" artist is busy. Thousands of gallons of imitation maple syrup are sold in Michigan every year as pure maple syrup. Many times this is labeled as coming from Vermont, New York, Ohio and Indiana and in tracing the alleged source we find that the name and address on the label is fictitious. It is usually made in Michigan or sometimes near the state line in Ohio or Indiana. Michigan labels are usually used in sales made in those states, while Ohio or Indiana labels are used for sales in Michigan.

The actual seller frequently is innocent as he works on commission and is not aware of the nature of his product, but in the majority of cases he is guilty of fraud in the first degree as he carries a can labeled in exactly the same manner as his main supply, but pure maple syrup instead of the imitation. From this container he draws a sample, permits you to taste, then you approve as it is of fine quality. You buy, or think you have bought, but later find out that you merely bit.

These vendors usually travel by auto or small truck, are strangers to you but appear to be honest farmers. Michigan's maple syrup industry must be protected against such competition. Our consumers are entitled to protection against such fraud. We need your assistance in apprehending the vendors of this illegal product. First, take the precaution of securing absolute identification of the vendor by insisting not only on his correct name and address but also on the license number of his automobile or truck. Second, sample your purchase immediately and if it is not like the sample shown you when you purchase, call the department of agriculture, Lansing, Michigan, extension 311, and give us the foregoing information. It is important you do this at once as we must catch the culprit while he is in your community.

STATE FARMS NEED MORE YOUNG HORSES

Condition Predicted Several Years Now Evidenced by Prices Paid

Future scarcity of good work horses on Michigan farms was predicted by the animal husbandry department at Michigan State college and that time has now arrived.

Forty-six horses sold at a consignment sale at East Lansing by the Michigan Horse Breeders' Association brought an average price of $194.35. The horses ranged in age from weanlings to 12 years old.

Top price for mares was $245. A stallion sold for $410. Four matched teams averaged $355. Ten geldings averaged $159.

The probable future condition of the horse market was apparent two years ago when the College farm management department completed a survey of several hundred farms that proved horses in the state were dying faster than they were being replaced by colts. Another proof of the scarcity of desirable horses has been the large sums of money paid in the last three years by Michigan farmers for western horses.

RURAL SCHOOL PROGRAM IS COMPLETE

THIRTY-THREE DISTRICTS WERE BENEFITTED

Vast Program of Repairs and Improvements Concluded With CWA Abandonment

Abandonment last Saturday of the CWA found the Charlevoix county sanitation program and rural school projects entirely completed with but two minor exceptions where work was delayed by lack of material. The program embraced improvements to 33 rural schools.

This information is contained in a report prepared and released by D. T. McHugh, county supervisor of the community sanitation program and project engineer in charge of rural school projects through the CWA. Dr. A. R. Renwick, on the staff of the District Department of Health, acted as district supervisor of the community sanitation work.

The sanitation and rural school program was perhaps the most beneficial and detailed of any division of the federal relief program and the fact that it was completed within the allotted time is worthy of comment. Schools involved were Murray, Bay Shore, Maple Grove, Burgess, Undine, Hopyard, Norwood, Ironton, McGeagh, Clark, Barnard, Phelps, Mnrion Center, Loch, Grand View, Hilton, Greentown, Sunnyside, Clarion, Walloon Lake, Hetrick, Curfew, Knop, Cedar Valley, Slaughter, Deer Lake, Wildwood, Lakeside, Horton Bay, Advance, Tuinter, McKinley and Woodward.

A typical example of the improvements made may be taken from the Undine school, which was moved to a new location and placed on new stone foundation, new cement entrance and front door built, woodshed door changed from rear end to south side, one window removed, interior replastered and redecorated, woodshed repaired, relocated and equipped with new stone foundation, outdoor toilets repaired and new pit forms installed. On many schools the windows were changed to make lighting conform with standard schools. In some instances new sanitary, outdoor or indoor toilets were installed, basements dug and stone foundations built, new roofs, interior fixtures repaired and repainted; new furnace installed, chimney repaired, etc. Some were even moved to new locations.

From the above paragraph one can gather the extensiveness of the program. In one instance, that of Greentown district on Beaver Island, a new school was built. The former school house burned some time ago and classes were held temporarily in a dwelling house. The need of a new building is evident.

The sanitation program was incorporated into the CWA program at the rural schools in the following manner: The heating and ventilation facilities were inspected and repair and alterations made where necessary; school rooms were surveyed for proper lighting, face lights, cross lights, reflected lights and shadows, and windows were changed, grouped and altered to secure best results; excavated materials were stocked piled for further grading to improve drainage; eighteen new sanitary outdoor privies were placed, two septic sewage disposal systems installed, two septic tanks relocated and repaired; a new frost pit and platform built at one school.

In addition to the sanitation work actually completed, a survey was made of the county resulting in the following projects being sent to Lansing for approval: sixteen septic sewage disposal systems, repairs to eighteen wells and the installation of three new wells, and a septic sewage disposal system for the Boyne Falls consolidated school. At the present time plans are under way on preparation of projects for sewage disposal systems for the Charlevoix county infirmary and the Palmer street district in Charlevoix which takes in the federal fish hatchery, coast guard station and adjacent residences.

Through the sanitation and rural school improvement program, Charlevoix county rural schools have been placed in excellent state of repair, faults in lighting, heating and sanitation corrected, in fact, improved in a manner which local finances would not have permitted.

SEVEN NEW SUPERVISORS SELECTED

THREE VETERANS WILL BE ABSENT FROM BOARD

Two Democrats Take Office for First Time in History — County Line-Up Given

Upsets in Monday's general election, combined with the withdrawal of several from the political field, will result in seven new members on the Charlevoix county board of supervisors this year. Six changes were made a year ago.

Tabulation of results reveals two democrats were elected, two of the oldest members on the board in point of years service will be absent, one through defeat and the other by withdrawal. The democrats are E. E. Cross from Charlevoix first ward, winner over Harry A. Craig, generally recognized as one of the outstanding supervisors ever to represent this city, and Joseph Topolinski in Boyne Valley, who succeeds the veteran William J. Pearson, who this spring was not a candidate for re-election. William H. Cook, for 22 years supervisor from Charlevoix township, was defeated by R. C. Korth in a close race by two votes.

Boyne City kept their representation intact again for another year, East Jordan will have as one of its three representatives Richard Lewis, former county clerk, who succeeds John Porter, a withdrawal. Charlevoix's second new supervisor is D. J. Eckinger, winner over W. E. Parmelee at the March primary. Hudson and Chandler townships elected new supervisors, Robert Russell replacing William Marshall in the former, and John Howard succeeding Mrs. Henry Woodward in Chandler.

Following is the complete line-up:

Bay, Charles N. Smith*; Boyne Valley, Joseph Topolinski*; Chandler, John Howard; Charlevoix township, R. C. Korth; Evangeline, Clyde Glute*; Eveline, William M. Sanderson*; Hayes, Howard Stephens*; Hudson, Robert Russell; Marion, A. J. Bolhuis*; Melrose, Daniel Buckley*; Norwood, Orton VanDusen*; Peaine, William M. Green*; St. James, James H. Gallagher*; South Arm; Elmer Hott*; Wilson, O. D. Smith*; Boyne City 1st ward, Agnes Loreh*; 2nd ward, Wm. F. Tindall*; 3rd ward, John Parker*; 4th ward, Roy Scott*; East Jordan 1st ward, Wm. F. Bashaw*; 2nd ward, Wm. H. Webster*; 3rd ward, Richard Lewis; Charlevoix 1st ward, E. E. Cross; 2nd ward, Frank Partridge*; 3rd ward, D. J. Eckinger.

*Re-elected.

POPULAR LOCAL GIRL WAS WED LAST WEDNESDAY AT KALAMAZOO

Miss Pearl Smith, granddaughter of Mrs. LeRoy Hamlin, Petoskey avenue, was united in marriage Wednesday evening, March 28th at Kalamazoo to Ralph E. Stewart.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the grooms parents in the presence of sixteen relatives and friends by the pastor of the Kalamazoo Baptist church, of which Mr. Stewart is a member. A reception followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Stewart is a graduate of Charlevoix high school and the county normal. She taught the Clark district school before serving two years as clerk at Dahlquist's store. She is a member of the local Baptist church and was active in all branches of the young people's organizations. Mr. Stewart was formerly engineer on the R. E. Olds yacht Reomar.

The young couple will be at home to their friends at 141 Woodward avenue, Kalamazoo.

RESTORED PENSIONS TO AID COMMUNITY

Will Release Thousands of Dollars in This County

Restoration of pensions for ex-service men will mean many thousands of dollars annually to Charlevoix county, according to veterans who have some knowledge of the situation.

Because of the cut in compensation imposed some time ago it is difficult to estimate how much pension money will be paid to county veterans but one Legion officer estimated it might run between $30,000 and $50,000 per year, which is equal to the payroll of a good industry.

SEE IS CHOICE OF VOTERS FOR MAYOR

ELECTED FOR SECOND TERM MONDAY BY MARGIN OF 89 VOTES OVER ROBERT F. SLOAN, DEMOCRAT

CROSS DEFEATS CRAIG IN FIRST WARD

Democrats, Making Strongest Bid for Recognition, Elect First Officer in City's History—Amendment to Abolish Park Commission Carried by 26 Votes

Polling the largest vote on record for a general spring election, Charlevoix electors Monday reiterated their choice at the April primary by returning L. S. See to the office of mayor for a second term.

See's margin of victory over Robert F. Sloan, the democratic nominee, was 89 votes out of a total of 1,075 cast. The election saw the strongest democratic bid for recognition in Charlevoix's history and, while failing as far as the entire ticket was concerned, resulted in the selection of this city's first democratic officer when E. E. Cross emerged the choice of first ward voters for supervisor over Harry A. Craig, former chairman of the board and one of its most active and influential members.

Partridge Given Close Race

In the only other contest on the city ticket, Ray S. Hamilton was elected city clerk by a majority of 269 votes over Harry Glossenger, democrat. In the second ward Frank Partridge was returned as supervisor by a margin of 22 votes over Benjamin Yettaw, and F. J. Fessenden was given a majority of 84 votes over William F. Myers for alderman. In the third precinct David J. Eckinger and J. J. Hallett, republican nominees for supervisor and alderman, respectively, were victors over O. A. Solomon and Harry Gebeau, the democrats.

Abolish Park Commission

By the narrow margin of 26 votes, the electors adopted a charter amendment which repeals those sections of the city charter providing for a park commission of three members. Thus William H. Wallace and Fred E. Cartier, unopposed candidates for park commissioners, were elected to an office which does not exist, and brings to a close a long period of contention between the park board and the city council.

With the CWA program of improvements completed at the high school building, equipment was moved back Wednesday afternoon in preparation for resumption of classes Thursday morning.

Superintendent O. P. North announced Wednesday afternoon that plans are in preparation for a "house warming" to be held in the renovated high school building at a near future date which will be announced when decided upon.

BALLOT ON BOND ISSUE APRIL 30TH

GOVERNOR SIGNS MEASURE PROVIDING REFERENDUM

Comstock Also Approves Bill Creating Bridge Authority and Barring Trap Nets

The fate of Governor Comstock's proposed issuance of $37,874,000 in bonds to finance a work-relief public works program in Michigan rests with the state electorate.

He signed the bill Thursday afternoon setting up machinery for the bond issue and designated April 30 as the date the proposition is to be decided by voters in a special election as provided for by a referendum clause in the measure.

In setting the April 30 date the governor took into consideration Michigan sportsmen. They had protested that May 1 the time the executive originally intended the election to be held—would work a hardship on them because they would be on the state's lakes and rivers heralding the opening day of the trout season.

"The bill allocates $19,874,000 for improvements to state institutions and provides that a sum not greater than $18,000,000 be spent in highways and grade crossings. Included in the institutional appropriations is an item for $2,265,000 for additions and improvements to armories in various parts of the state.

In signing the measure, the governor called particular attention to the importance of the special election. Attorney General Patrick H. O'Brien has ruled that persons owning either real or personal property are eligible to vote on the issue.

If the bond issue receives the endorsement of the electorate, the bonds will be sold to the federal government. They will be retired over a 20-year period at an interest rate of five per cent. Thirty per cent of the $37,000,000 is to be a direct grant to the state while the remaining 70 per cent must be repaid.

The governor disposed of the final batch of 12 measures passed by the special session, vetoing only one—that being a minor bill affecting the handling of cases by the department of labor and industry. He signed a measure permitting municipalities to issue by a majority vote self-liquidating revenue bonds to be sold to the federal government for local public improvements.

Among others approved were:

A bill extending to Nov. 1, 1934 the time for payment of 1933 taxes at a three per cent interest rate; one creating a bridge authority to negotiate for a $35,000,000 loan from the federal government for construction of a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac; a measure prohibiting the use of trap nets in more than 80 feet of water in the Great Lakes; and one allowing the state to deed to federal government lands for homestead purposes.

CWA CHANGING TO NEW WORK RELIEF

EXPECT TO RESUME PROJECTS NEXT MONDAY

Employment Necessary to Provide Required Needs Will Be Limit of New Welfare Deal

Work on federal financed projects in Charlevoix county stopped last Saturday night with abandonment of the CWA and this week county welfare officials are making every effort to meet requirements necessary to start the new federal work relief program which succeeds the CWA.

J. M. Foster, chairman of the county welfare commission, stated Wednesday morning that he believed the new program could be started next Monday. In the meantime, all uncompleted projects must be resubmitted on new blanks containing detailed information regarding present cost, future needs, etc. Many other details must be completed before actual work can be begun.

According to Mr. Foster, the new program is strictly a relief provision, aimed to aid only those, in actual need and only to the extent of their proven needs. Funds have been curtailed necessitating a reduction in expenditures. No one will be employed unless on the welfare rolls. The three county case workers, E. J. Smith of Charlevoix, Roy Gregory of East Jordan, and Miss Eva Halloran of Boyne City, will submit lists of deserving persons to Leo W. Powers of this city, who will assign them to projects. Supervision of projects must be furnished by the municipality, district or governmental body where the project is located.

The number of hours which each welfare worker will be employed per week depends upon his requirements, and only to that extent. If his allowance is $10 per week, he will receive work equivalent to that amount. Wages will be based upon the current scale in the county, with the minimum 30c an hour and the maximum $1.20 per hour. The prevailing scale will govern wages for skilled workers and they will work only the number of hours required to equal their allowance. For example, if a person's allowance is $10 per week and his wages as a skilled worker is $1 per hour, he will receive ten hours work in a week.
